Greenhouse Heating.

THE COAL MARKET.

The recent cool weather has supplied the one missing factor that was necessary to render the coal trade entirely prosperous. The arrival of the desired sort of weather, coupled with the increased activity in general business, has so stimulated the coal market that it is now, we are told, "in a much better condition than it has been at any time in several years." "The situation," says one coal man, "is quite encouraging when viewed from the operators' standpoint, but quite the opposite when viewed with the eyes of the consumer."

In the foregoing quotation the word "florist" might be substituted for "consumer," were it not for the fact that florists now seem to be specially favored by some peculiar combination of circumstances. For some weeks, while almost every other kind of fuel has been moving rapidly, the florists' favorite, smokeless coal, has been an exception. Says a prominent coal journal: "The smokeless situation is none too strong. The demand for mine-run has been just about fair and some sales agents have wished that the car supply might be a little tighter. Even so, the price on mine-run has held firm at $1.40. Lump and egg continue to be a trifle easy, with $1.65 as a minimum, $1.75 as a common price, and $2.00 as a top figure."

ONE ADDITIONAL GREENHOUSE.

I am building an addition, 20x100 and twelve feet high to the ridge. The house runs east and west. There are thirty inches of glass in the side walls and glass in both ends. How many lineal feet of 2-inch pipe will be needed to heat this house to 60 degrees in zero weather?
 H. E. A.—Pa.

To heat a house 20x100, with thirty inches of glass in each wall, to 60 degrees in zero weather, using hot water, I would put in three 2½-inch overhead flow pipes and twelve 2-inch returns. Two of the flows should be placed on the wall plates and should run with a drop of about six inches to the farther end of the house, where they should each be connected with four returns running back to the boiler, either on the side walls or under the side benches. The other flow pipe should be carried to the end of the middle bench, about three feet below the ridge, and there connected with the other four returns, is making the most wonderful greenhouse heating record in the world. Florists who have used other makes are constantly giving the Kroeschell the highest praise.

The Kroeschell

18,468,320 sq. ft. of glass was equipped with the Kroeschell Boiler during the past five years.

The Kroeschell

has replaced hundreds of cast iron boilers. In every case higher temperatures are secured with the Kroeschell with the same piping and with less fuel.

The Kroeschell is sold direct from factory to users. This eliminates the unnecessary middleman's profit.

A Heating Record at 52° Below Zero

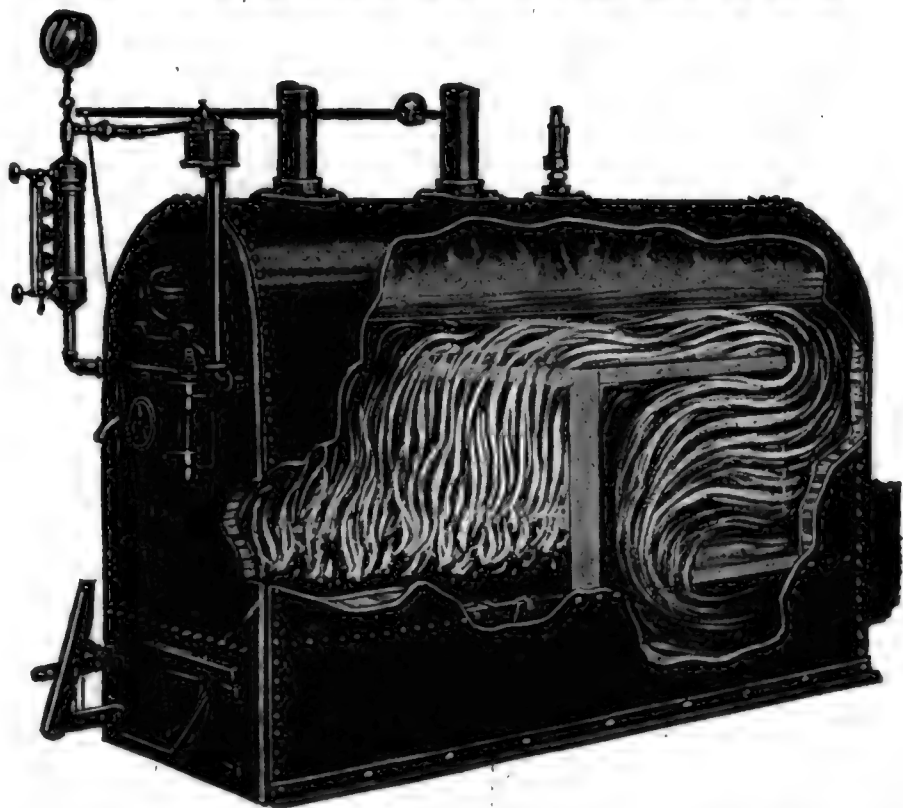

Has the Kroeschell given entire satisfaction? Yes! Perfect. Our winter temperature ranges as low as 45° below zero. Last winter we had six weeks of steady cold. The maximum temperature at noon 12° below, the minimum temperature at 4 a. m. 52° below zero. This was a good test of the heating capacity of a Kroeschell.
 PUBLIC PARK BOARD, Winnipeg, Man.

READ WHAT THE USERS SAY:

The Kroeschell Is Better than Cast Iron

In 1911 I purchased a No. 1 Kroeschell Boiler for my uptown greenhouses. At my other range we had a cast iron sectional boiler. In two years we cracked two sections. That experience was enough for me. This year I thought I would not take any more chances, so we have just installed another No. 5 Kroeschell Boiler. I believe if the Kroeschell Boilers were known to all, they would use no other.

running back under the benches, or in the walks if solid beds are used.

If the flow pipes can be arranged so that the highest point in each pipe will be near the boiler, they should be connected with a common pipe running to the expansion tank, thus doing away with any occasion for using air valves.

SMALL HOUSE FOR GERANIUMS.

I have a small greenhouse, 12x24, five feet high to the eaves and eight feet high at the center. The roof and the east and south sides are covered with glass. How shall I heat it and what size of pipe shall I use? I wish to use it entirely for the growing of S. A. Nutt geraniums. The outside temperature here, in extreme cases, drops as low as 25 degrees below zero.

J. M. B.—N. Y.

According to the inquiry, it appears that the entire east and south walls, each five feet high to the plate, are of glass. To heat this house to 55 degrees, I would run an overhead 2½-inch flow pipe to the farther end of the house, and, dropping to a point just below the level of the plate, would connect

SLUGGISH CIRCULATION.

I have just installed a new boiler, in a shed at the west end of my greenhouse. It stands on a level with the ground and there are two flow pipes running from the boiler to the east end of the greenhouse, one flow on each side, on a line with the purlins. There are four lines of pipe under the bench on each side, running a distance of 106 feet from the east end to the boiler, with a fall of one foot in that distance. The bottom of the expansion tank is even with the top of the flow pipes and connects downward with the return.

For some reason, I get hardly any circulation. I cannot put the expansion tank any higher without putting it outside, above the roof of the shed. If I enlarge the expansion tank, will that answer the same purpose as raising it? The piping throughout the system is 2-inch. The smokestack is eighteen feet high and twelve inches in diameter. I shall appreciate any suggestions that you can offer me in regard to any defects in the arrangement of the piping. I do not wish to put the boiler in a pit if I can avoid doing so. A. G.—Okla.

The principal reason for the trouble is because the return pipes are so near the level of the bottom of the heating surface of the boiler. Increasing the size of the expansion tank will not improve the circulation. Unless you can drop the boiler at least two feet—and four feet would be better; or, which amounts to the same thing, unless you can raise the return pipes, it will be necessary to put on a mercury generator, or in some way place the system under pressure.

When used as an open system it will not be possible to obtain satisfactory results with 2-inch flow pipes supplying four returns of the same size, 106 feet in length, and they should be replaced with 2½-inch pipe, unless a closed system is used.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Thanksgiving business was satisfactory. There was plenty of stock during the week, but the market was well cleaned up. There was a slight shortage in yellow mums, but the quantities of other stock easily offset this shortage.

The last few days have seen quite a change in the weather, which now is decidedly colder. This change has had a tendency to tighten the cut flower market. Beauties are arriving in good supply, but the prices on them are tightening. Other roses are plentiful; so are carnations. The varieties of mums are fewer and will not last much longer. Sweet peas are becoming more plentiful, but the demand for them is light. Orchids, valley and violets have been finding a good sale. Pot plants have been having a good sale and the market is well supplied in this line, which, no doubt, will find a ready sale later on.

Various Notes.

Charles Schwake, of New York, and C. B. Knickman, with McHutchison & Co., New York, called on the trade last week.

Oliver Steinkamp was among the candidates who took the work at the convocation of the Scottish Rite last week. He also hoped to take the Shrine last week. He had a hot time.

Irwin C. Bertermann is getting the golf bug. There is a new golf course at Irvington, which is near Mr. Bertermann's residence, on which he expects to develop into one of the stars of next year.

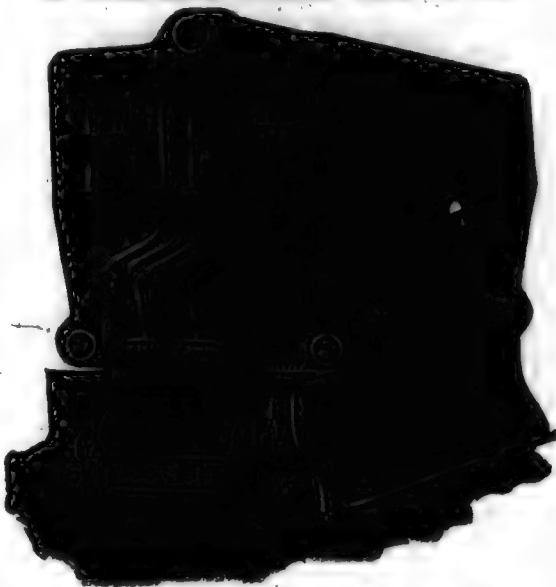

The Smith & Young Co. is cutting some first-class roses. This concern reports trade as being brisk.

THE HEATING PROBLEM SOLVED

Judging strictly according to mechanical merits, it's the METROPOLITAN PATENTED BOILER you want.

Because of their proven scientifically perfect construction, Metropolitan Patented Boilers will heat a given amount of water quicker, with less fuel and less attention than any other boiler on the market.

The remarkable heating efficiency and quick steaming qualities of these boilers are due to their large and effective heating surface.

Just a few points of Metropolitan Patented Boiler merit:—Smooth, perfect finished castings. Push nipple connections. Large fire box, providing ample combustion chamber, and permitting a sufficient charge of fuel to require attention only at long intervals. Deep ash pit, making the removal of ashes a slight task. Large flues, making the boiler easy to clean. Grates that are made for hard usage and long service. And above all, they are Fuel Saving, not Fuel Wasting.

We also make soft coal boilers which are smokeless, and save 50 per cent in coal.

Put Your Heating Problems Up to Us. We've Been at it for 44 Years.

The Market.

Thanksgiving trade was good, much better than last year. There were plenty of flowers, with many more chrysanthemums than we have had so late in the season for some years. Orchids were not in evidence at all and it was hoped violets would get the call instead, but they were not helped much. There were plenty of good roses and carnations to supply all demands, except in white roses, which are not usually so much in demand at this season of the year, but when they were not to be had everyone wanted them.

The wholesale houses look bare this week, as chrysanthemums are done and there is nothing large to take their place, except lilies, which will come into their own again. Good sweet peas would be quite acceptable, but there are few coming in at present. Society doings have taken a spurt and a number of good-sized affairs have called for special stock. The retail stores all look busy, and, now that Thanksgiving is past, one can see evidences of getting ready for Christmas.

Various Notes.

George Marshall, of the McCallum Co., is soon to become a benedict. He has not made known the date, but he has the girl and she has said "Yes" and he is looking pleasant.

Fred Burki has been called to jury duty, but will be through with it in time to look after the Christmas cut.

The Florists' Club will meet Tuesday evening, December 7, at the Fort Pitt hotel. There will be reports from the various flower shows by members who attended them, and there will also be exhibits of Christmas plants and decorative materials. A splendid meeting is assured.

Among the out-of-town people who have been here to look for Christmas novelties were Mr. McGrath, of Fischer & McGrath, New Castle, Pa., and Thomas Fitzgerald, of Beaver, Pa.

While trade in nearly all lines is booming in the lower Ohio valley, the florists complain that they are not getting their share. Some of the towns say they are doing worse than a year ago. Clarke.

Thanksgiving was well observed here generally. Trade was much better than usual for that holiday. Cool weather has prolonged the mum crop and, from the condition of them, may extend the mums' usefulness two or three weeks.

Funeral work has been heavy the last month. Then, too, the long evenings are giving society more time. Consequently flowers are moving faster than they mature.

Various Notes.

The Archias Floral Co. is having its "tropical season." It has bananas fruiting. A member of the firm says he may have to go to Chicago to sell the crop. It is certainly a novelty for Sedalia to have bananas producing fruit.

Several florists recently went coon and possum hunting. After the hunt, which proved successful, luncheon was served. The hunting was done from automobiles.

Dr. J. E. Cannaday, of the State Fair Floral Co., has returned from a short stay in Kansas City.

Charles Pfeiffer had an automobile accident recently. J. H. H.

OYSTER BAY, N. Y.

The monthly meeting of the Oyster Bay Horticultural Society was held at Fireman's hall November 24. John Sorosick reported that the mum show was a success. John T. Ingram reported that the lecture recently given by Dr. Felt at the Oyster Bay high school was well attended.

George Wilson, George Walker, Charles Moulti, Charles Valentine, Charles Young and William Ritchie were elected to active membership.

The exhibition tables were well filled and prominent among the exhibits was Mr. Robinson's collection of vegetables, of which there were twenty-nine varieties. Judges Milburn, Gale and Hothersall reported as follows: Three heads lettuce, Joseph Robinson, society's prize; fifty violets, Princess of Wales, George Wilson, society's prize; seedling chrysanthemum, J. Bell, certificate of merit; collection of vegetables, J. Robinson, cultural certificate.

James Bell gave an interesting talk on his new type of mum, to be known as the cactus type. J. J. De Vyver talked on hickory bark beetles.

Exhibits for next meeting are one pot primula, one pot schizanthus, twelve mushrooms. A. R. K.

The Market.

Everybody seems to be well satisfied with the Thanksgiving trade. Business did not really start until November 24, when it came with a rush. This year's trade compares favorably with that of last, but more stock was on the market this year. Local growers sent in some choice stock, most of it of the highest quality. There was too much yellow on the market. The huge quantity of pompons, as well as the larger yellow mums, hurt their sale. Eaton in white and yellow, Chadwick, Bonnaillon, Golden Wedding, Patty and Queen were all good sellers. There is a scarcity in all kinds of roses, barely enough of which were shipped. Pink and red carnations are plentiful, but there is a shortage in white. The trade called for a lot of valley, but there has not been sufficient to go around. Orchids are scarce and in fair demand. Bouvardia is in fine condition, but is shortening up. Violets are plentiful and of good quality at $1 per hundred.

Large quantities of yellow, bronze and red pompons are on the market and are fair sellers. Christmas greens have arrived and appear to be in good condition. Potted plants and ferns move well. Asparagus plumosus, adiantum, smilax and galax leaves move more briskly. Christmas novelties are being displayed and are selling well.

Various Notes.

Frank R. Bohnke has opened a flower store on Monroe avenue. It is the only flower store in that vicinity. It seems to be a favorable location. Mr. Bohnke is doing a good business at his other store. He is growing good stock.

Among recent visitors were James Karins, of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia; Stephen Green, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia; F. Murphy, of N. F. McCarthy & Co., Boston; W. P. Craig, of the Robert Craig Co., Philadelphia, and R. E. Blackshaw, of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago.

A Thanksgiving dinner table in the window of J. B. Keller Sons was tastefully arranged with napery and a profusion of yellow and bronze pompons. At each plate was a basket of lilies of the valley. A bank of palms in the back of the window formed a striking contrast.

E. C. Armbrust's Thanksgiving window was prettily arranged with mums and small baskets of other flowers. An exquisite blanket of white mums and pink roses recently was sent from this shop to an out-of-town funeral.

The Rochester Floral Co. had a pretty decoration in its window for Thanksgiving. The color scheme was in yellow. On mats of the same shade on the floor of the window were dainty baskets of yellow pompons. The center of attraction was a large arch of yellow button mums and smilax, from which was hanging a quantity of silk ribbons. A large jardiniere of yellow mums was beneath the arch.

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Dildine and family spent Thanksgiving at Harrison Valley, Pa.

James Vick's Sons say that their bulbs are clearing fast and that they expect to make a clean sweep in a few days. Their large office staff is working on the 1916 catalogue.

Hugo Teute had a good holiday trade. His mums are about gone. The call

The Market.

A complete change was noted in the market last week. Everything in the line of flowers became extremely scarce, especially roses. Business was good, in many instances considerably better than at this time last year. Large consignments of mums and pompons arrived, and cleared rapidly at good prices.

The receipts of chrysanthemums are now rapidly declining, although many nice, large varieties are still arriving. Pompons are not as plentiful as a week ago, but still the buyers hesitate. Carnations in the first part of last week were abundant, but as Thanksgiving approached they cleared and there has been no difficulty in selling them since. Some extra nice carnations are arriving, with good color and stem. The oversupply of roses disappeared last week and they have been scarce ever since. Orchids and valley are about equal to the demand. Violets are moving satisfactorily. Lilies are inclined to hang, although not in large supply.

Various Notes.

S. A. Anderson has added another delivery car. Both his cars are finished in white, with light green trimmings. Mr. Felton, formerly with S. A. Anderson, has resigned the position and has opened a store at Main and Utica streets.

Among the visitors this week were W. Preisach and Wm. Ehmann, both of Corfu.

On visiting the greenhouses of F. J. Baum, I saw some excellent azalea plants which will be ready for the Christmas market. He also has a large quantity of geraniums for Easter. All his stock looks well.

While rushing his Thanksgiving orders, J. V. Metz met with an accident which delayed his delivery.

The Thanksgiving business at W. G. Palmer & Son's was better than last year. A. E.

Chester, N. J.—The Morristown, N. J., Record recently gave a full column write-up to F. W. Rochelle, of F. W. Rochelle & Sons, who believes in peace. Last summer Mr. Rochelle wrote to 252 United States senators and representatives, asking their views in this respect. Interesting extracts from the replies of the statesmen were printed, 118 of whom were opposed to war.

A Dry Season Next Year

THE RAIN RECORDS for this past growing season have everything beaten for years. Have you ever heard of two years like this in succession?

A dry year with the Skinner System rain is the year of big profits. Plants grow under ideal conditions—prices are usually sky high.

Next year promises to be dry.

Drought and big profit is a strange combination—but they go hand in hand to a user of the Skinner System of Irrigation.

The house is 48 feet wide and 400 feet long. Note that there is a center side entrance gablet for connecting passage for a future house.

Smith's New Greenhouse, at Bound Brook, N. J.

ONE of the interesting things about our commercial business this year is that so much of it has been right around within thirty miles or so of our factory, here in New Jersey.

As a result every one of these growers has saved a good bit in the freight on materials and fares of workmen that other concerns would have to send a greater distance.

For nearby jobs we can, in most cases, deliver the entire material by motor truck, overcoming the vexatious delays in shipping materials by freight and having it take longer than if it were going away out to the Pacific Coast.

The short distance from the factory often makes it possible for our President, Mr. Sefton, to run out to the job in his car once in a while and see how things are going on.

As a result, these men are getting the finest jobs possible to be turned out, and at a decidedly worth-while price.

This job of Chas. Smith's, at Bound Brook, N. J., is now all done and planted. Drop around and see it. Find out what they think about Hitchings' way of doing things. But, before you go, let us send you a list of names of nearby houses, so you can get several growers' points of view and compare the work on all the houses. You will then see that all the houses show that same careful attention to every little detail and have that look of everlasting lastingness. Of course, we go anywhere for business or to talk business.

The rafters are not spliced at the eaves. Neither are they welded. The rafters and posts are in one piece from the first column purlin to the foot base. The bending is done when hot. No part of the post is below the ground. The base is cast iron.

The columns are XX Pipe, each supported on four-way-braced cast iron foot bases. Note the strength of the column cap and framing connections. Let us send you a circular on our Reconstructed Construction.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Market conditions for Thanksgiving day trade were poor. The shortage of stock was so acute that hardly an order, especially of roses, was filled completely. The slump in the rose crop during the previous week was even more marked and it was impossible to do anything on most orders. This condition helped the sale of chrysanthemums to a great extent and, although there was a large crop of mums, they cleaned up entirely. Taken all in all, Thanksgiving trade was satisfactory. There was a general clean-up and the demand was brisk to the last minute.

Mums are on the wane and will not last much longer, with the exception of some Bonnaffons, which are arriving in fine shape. Carnations were in abundant supply, but the stock was exceptionally fine and the demand was larger than the supply, thus cleaning up the market daily at good prices. Lilies are scarce at this time. There is not much demand for this stock and the dark weather has retarded the crop greatly. Valley remains extremely scarce and the demand is quite heavy. Orchids are short in supply and are cleaning out at top-notch prices. The charity ball will create an extra large demand for valley and orchids.

Violets are not increasing in number and the demand still far exceeds the supply. This stock is steadily improving in quality and some exceptionally fine stock is being disposed of. From present indications, the shortage on roses will not be alleviated for some time. Prices are holding up well; everything that looks like a bloom is being disposed of with no trouble. During Thanksgiving the shortage was principally in Russell, Ophelia, Hoosier Beauty and the other fancy roses.

Various Notes.

Alfred Schiller, of the Schiller Floral Co., is ill and it is expected that he will be taken to the hospital to undergo an operation. His many friends send him best wishes for a speedy recovery.

At the regular meeting of the Milwaukee Florists' Club, December 2, Thomas Kennedy will give a talk on his western trip, taken this summer, and will illustrate his talk with stereopticon views.

It might be well to mention the fact that Thanksgiving day was about 10 degrees warmer than the Fourth of July. It can be seen from this that this year has not been normal and has interfered with greenhouse work to a great extent. H. J. S.

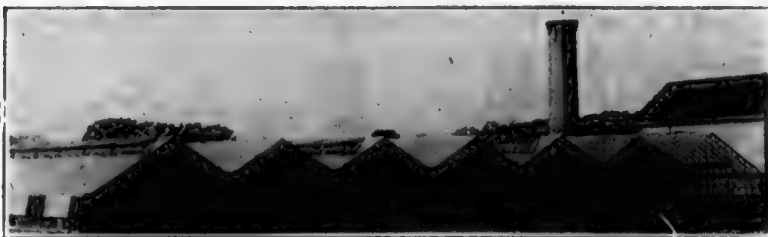

The Edlefsen-Leidiger Co. last week sent out an engraved and embossed folder announcing the opening of its east side store, 419 Milwaukee street, December 1. Miss Semler is in charge.

SUMMIT, N. J.

William Death reports that business is excellent at present and the outlook for the future is bright. He has had a great deal of funeral work of late.

The greenhouses of M. MacDonald now make a fine appearance from the street. The leading greenhouses are connected and the ends are of glass, so that passers-by can see into all parts of the range. Mr. MacDonald reports that business is first-class.

Supply and Demand

Are you running to full capacity? Profit is realized only when a full volume of business is being done. Do you supply the demand or is it met with the aid of flowers purchased from other sources? Ask yourself the above questions and then decide if you are reaping the profit that rightfully belongs to you.

THE TIME OF BIG PROFIT IS ALMOST HERE

Winter is the time when greenhouse profit is the highest and the man who is prepared to meet the full demand is the man who can write success after his name. Write us your ideas and we will be prompt in sending our estimate and prompt in turning out the material.

...NEWS NOTES...

Des Moines, Ia.—C. W. Crum, formerly manager for U. L. Crawford, has opened a store of his own in the Kirkwood hotel.

Goshen, Ind.—A football game is a good market for chrysanthemums, according to Miss Dora Brown, manager of the Colonial Flower Shop, who has been developing this channel of trade this fall. Recently she filled a large order for a game at Ann Arbor, Mich.

Waterloo, Ia.—Spontaneous combustion was given as the cause of the conflagration in the boiler room of the Kemble Floral Co., which for a time threatened to spread to the greenhouses. The fire, however, proved more spectacular than disastrous. Claude E. Culley, secretary of the company, stated that the damage did not exceed $400 and that the burned building was covered by insurance.

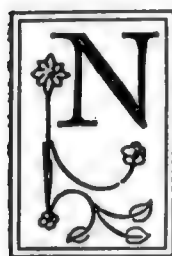

Beatrice, Neb.—Twenty-five years ago Mrs. Sophie H. Dole launched into the florists' business with the munificent investment of $1 for flower pots, 75 cents for seeds and a hotbed sash for a greenhouse. Despite this inauspicious beginning, Mrs. Dole prospered exceedingly, and in 1904 the business was incorporated under the name of Dole Floral Co. The hotbed has become a range of 21,000 square feet of glass and there is a large building downtown which contains the retail store and wholesale salesroom. On the occasion of its twenty-fifth birthday, the Dole Floral Co. held a flower show and invited everybody to participate in the celebration.

Tiffin, O.—Because none of the civic associations has seen fit to establish and sponsor a flower show is no reason why Tiffin should continue to go without one. At least so thought E. J. Ullrich, of the Ullrich Floral Co., and, being a man of action as well as thought, Mr. Ullrich held a flower show in his store just before Thanksgiving. The event was a success from start to finish. More than 4,000 carnations and roses were distributed as souvenirs, at the rate of one to each feminine visitor. Mr. Ullrich says: "We were so much pleased with the interest the people took in the show and the advertising received from it that we intend to hold another show at Christmas and one at Easter."

CHRISTMAS

Who doubts that for Christmas there will be Plants and Cut Flowers in plenty? The problem is to sell so much in so few hours.

NOT in many years, if ever before, has the trade taken hold of Christmas with the enthusiasm now apparent. Last year's conservative view of the situation is a thing wholly unknown today, for buyers are stocking up with evident confidence that the Christmas demand for 1916 will suffice to clean up all the plants, cut flowers and accessories the stores will hold. It is quite the usual thing to hear a retailer say he is planning to buy twice as much stock as he did for Christmas last year and it seems probable that the demand will clean up the wholesale sources of supply unless it be that the wholesale dealer depends too much on the buyers hunting him up. Today there are so many sources of supply that the man who does not speak up is likely to be overlooked.

While the trade is buying more heavily than ever before, still the supply in most lines is larger than in any previous year. It is true of cut flowers, due to a steady increase in glass, and it is especially true of plants, of which it is well known the supply this Christmas will break all records. Consequently the principal problem the retailers will have to solve will be how to sell such large quantities in the few short hours of the Christmas rush.

Retailers' Capacity.

One of the chief weaknesses of the retail end of the business is that our facilities are inelastic—they do not permit of more than a limited increase in the volume of business, either in time of glut, when stock is pressing for a market, or at a holiday, when the public would buy more flowers if it comfortably could.

Probably the condition is general, but it affects our trade more seriously than most others because the average person puts off buying flowers until the last minute, thereby throwing all the holiday business into a few enormously busy hours. We all know how it is.

This year Christmas comes on Saturday, probably the most favorable day of the week, unless it be Sunday. With Christmas on Saturday it gives five possible days for selling—if we can get the people started. There won't be anything doing up to the Saturday before—the business practically all will be done in Christmas week; most of it in the afternoons of five days.

Sunday will be spent in making the store attractive and the selling will begin Monday, only there will be little doing until Wednesday. And Wednesday is the shortest day in the year, according to the almanac! Really, the two following days will be shorter as compared with what we shall try to crowd into them. Perhaps twenty-four selling hours to do the whole Christmas business!

Is it any wonder that after a holiday you will hear many a retailer say, "I could have sold more if we could have waited on the people"?

The trouble is we have not given sufficient attention to getting the selling started early.

The growers have placed themselves in a position to supply all the stock the retail stores can handle under the present system—if not just the stock called for, either cut flowers or plants, at least some kind of good, salable stock.

Does not, then, the future increase of the Christmas trade depend, more than anything else, on the ability of the retailers to develop a system that will permit the movement of a greater quantity of stock than can be done by the present methods of handling the holiday rush?

Increase Is Difficult.

The consideration of this and other trade problems by retailers who have not been content to drift with the tide—which is well known to flow in and out, and get nowhere—has led to the conclusion that it is easier to increase the every-day turnover than it is to increase the holiday business. At ordinary times the store is overmanned—nobody sells as much as he might. But at Christmas each one goes the limit of his ability during the shopping hours on each of three days. And the reason the holiday business does not increase faster is that the retailers have for some years been doing about all that was humanly possible in the few hours in which the business is handled. If they could get the people in earlier, they could do more, but the orders usually come as a grand rush at the last minute and how they will compare with the stock on hand the Lord only knows! Perhaps they won't clean it up. Perhaps they will run to one item so that it runs short, while something else is unsold. Perhaps they will come out even—everything sold. Let us hope!

In looking back over a holiday rush it is apparent that the store facilities are taxed for only a few hours—perhaps not more than two or three hours on two or three days. Of course it is possible to increase the holiday capacity by renting near-by vacant stores for the overflow, by opening branches in various parts of town, and by similar means, but in general extra space and capable extra help both are difficult to secure and command a premium at such a time, so that the easiest way, really, is to begin preparations in season and work with the definite object of booking early orders from one's regular customers.

Early Orders Important.

A retailer who has figured long and carefully on the system of handling his holiday sales has a neatly printed card ready for mailing December 14 to all his regular customers. This is the way it reads:

In the three days before Christmas there is a large increase in our transient trade. It therefore is urged that regular customers place their orders during the previous week. During these days there will be an advance showing of holiday plants and cut flowers and our regular customers can be waited on without being inconvenienced in their selections by the presence of those who buy flowers only at holidays.

If necessary to postpone Christmas selections until the last days, we urge shopping in the morning hours.

This retailer has sent out a similar notice each holiday for several seasons and says he notes an appreciable increase in the number of advance orders booked each year, both at Christmas and Easter. He always is careful to see that the early orders are taken excellent care of, to ask the customer if the flowers pleased, and to comment that it pays to give orders early.

The Newspaper Ads.

The newspaper advertising this year should appear not later than Sunday, December 19, or Monday, December 20, and the copy should be written with a view to getting people to leave their orders early. Any space used after December 18 should emphasize the advantages of buying early in the day, avoiding the afternoon rush, especially of avoiding the rush and depleted stocks of the last day.

The coöperative advertising that is being done in a number of cities offers one of the best means of correcting the tendency to crowd all the business into one or two days. One of the advantages of the coöperative advertising is that it not only permits the use of larger space than the individual ordinarily feels he can afford, but it seems to carry a greater weight from the fact that it is the concerted action of the leading members of the trade in a given locality. This extra weight should by all means be turned toward starting the business early, as well as toward arousing interest in the use of flowers as gifts. As a matter of fact, under the conditions of the past it is more important to get the buyers started early than it is to increase the volume of business offered at the last moment.

A complete clean-up depends on getting orders early enough so one may know where he stands.

OPEN LETTERS from READERS

ASHES EXTERMINATE GRUBS.

In The Review of November 11, C. B., of Ohio, asks for an exterminator of the grubworms in his carnation field. If C. B. will procure some unleached hardwood ashes and place a small handful in each hole before planting, he will have no further trouble from grubs. Two or three light top-dressings of good ashes during the growing period will free the plants from all dangerous insects. Potash exists in ashes in a readily soluble form and, being caustic, it kills the larvæ of all insects. It will not destroy the foliage of the plants.

FORCING BY ELECTRIC LIGHT.

Noticing your comments on page 34 of The Review for November 18, on Charles H. Totty's report of my using electric lights to accelerate the development of William Turner mums for the Madison, N. J., show, October 28 and 29, it occurred to me that some of your readers might be interested in this modern method of hastening plant growth. I give a few of the details:

I used five Mazda 115-volt lamps for this purpose. These I strung on a board, twelve inches apart, and suspended them across the bench, directly over the Turner mums. The light was so strong and dazzling that one could not remain in close proximity to it for any length of time without discomfort. I kept the light going all night for a week before the show and succeeded in attaining the desired result, for the blooms so treated finished at least a week ahead of those in another house. I, as well as Mr. Totty, think that this treatment had something to do with the favorable decision given me at the show.

Mr. Totty did not speak of the excitement occasioned by a fire alarm sounded on the village fire gong at 1 a. m. of a morning when the lights were in full blast, which suddenly brought 200 guests to view the mums at that unearthly hour and roused all hands to subdue the supposed flames. It was quite a surprise party.

NOVEL CLASS AT N. Y. SHOW.

What will be something of an innovation at a flower show will be the class added to the premium schedule for the forthcoming International Flower Show to be held April 5 to 12 at the Grand Central Palace, New York, covering a window box of wood, to contain flowering plants of a nature to last through summer, outdoors. The first prize, $25, is offered by Miss Georgie Wayne Day, of New York. Louis Sherry, the well known restaurateur, has offered, through A. L. Miller, a $100 cup, to be awarded at the discretion of the committee. The Hotel Astor, also through Mr. Miller, offers a $50 cup. Emil W. Savoy, of Secaucus, N. J., offers $25 for the best specimen bougainvillea exhibited at the show.

Even the Most Inexpensive of Plant Arrangements Must Each Have its Basket this Year

Art of Arrangement and a Gift for Color Combination Supplemented by an Appreciation of Form.

There still is a good supply of copies of the preliminary schedule on hand. Anyone interested, not in possession of a copy, should make application to the undersigned at 53 West Twenty-eighth street, New York.

RESURRECTION PLANT DUTY.

The Board of Customs Appraisers has decided that resurrection plants, or moss, imported from Mexico, are admissible free of duty. Henry S. Beach imported some moss at El Paso, Tex., and was assessed for duty by the customs collector at fifteen per cent ad valorem. He made a protest and the board sustained him in the following decision by Appraiser Waite:

"The merchandise under consideration here is described in the invoice as sixteen bales of 'musgo,' which we understand to be the Spanish word for moss. It was imported from Mexico City into the port of El Paso. It was assessed for duty at fifteen per cent ad valorem under paragraph 211, tariff act of 1913, the last part of which paragraph provides for 'stocks, cuttings, and seedlings of all fruit and ornamental trees, deciduous and evergreen shrubs and vines, and all trees, shrubs, plants, and vines commonly known as nursery or greenhouse stock not specially provided for in this section.' The collector reports as follows:

" 'This article is regarded as a plant and classified for duty under the latter provision of paragraph 211, tariff act of 1913, following the practice of the port heretofore in classifying this article under the tariff acts of 1909 and 1897, the provision referred to being the same in the several tariff acts.'

"It is claimed to be free of duty under paragraph 552 as a moss.

"Mr. Sharp, the examiner of the port of El Paso, was called, identified the sample which is before us, and stated that this article had been classified as here classified for the last twenty or twenty-five years. It does not, however, appear to have been ever before the board for classification. The evidence really furnishes little assistance except the light thrown upon the question by the sample. The sample on inspection resembles a club moss. It is rolled up somewhat in the shape of a ball, and on being dampened or wet it spreads out and becomes flat, with branches and leaves radiating from a common center, supported by a very thick clump or cluster of roots. The entry describes it as moss. It is known as one of the resurrection plants. The New Standard Dictionary gives the following regarding the resurrection plant:

Resurrection plant.—1. The rose of Jericho (Anastatica Hierochuntina). When the leaves fall off the branches fold into a ball, having the seeds inside. If put into water, the seeds will germinate long after the plant's death. 2. Any of the several club mosses, especially the bird's-nest moss (Selaginella lepidophylla), a native of Texas and Mexico.

"We think the merchandise here before us is described by the latter definition, and is undoubtedly a club moss and might be characterized as bird's-nest moss. We do not consider it nursery or greenhouse stock. There is nothing to indicate that it is ever cultivated or sold by nursery or greenhouse men. As imported, we have no means of knowing what use it is to be put to except what may be gathered from the protest. We are of the opinion that it should be classified under paragraph 552, which provides for 'moss, seaweeds, and vegetable substances, crude or unmanufactured, not otherwise specially provided for in this section.' The protest is therefore sustained."

Altoona, Pa.—Myers Bros. have opened a branch store in the Olympic Theater building.

Paris, Ill.—J. A. Helfrich has received word that his brother, Joseph Helfrich, a soldier in the German army, was severely wounded on the battle front "somewhere in France." A few months ago, Carl Helfrich, another brother, was killed while fighting with the German troops in Poland.

CHRISTMAS PLANTS

SOME OF THE MOST SALABLE VARIETIES, WITH TIMELY SUGGESTIONS ON MAKING THEM READY

CHRISTMAS is the banner plant holiday in the business calendar of retailer and grower. The sale of plants on that occasion is steadily increasing, the call being particularly strong for plants with bright colored flowers, foliage or berries. Plants shown without pot covers still may sell in some places, but the man who puts up or arranges attractive combinations of plants in baskets, with the aid of ribbon, will be in line for more sales and bigger profits. Moreover, in these artistic plant gifts the florist can charge for his knowledge of the business.

Following suggestions are especially for the man who grows the plants he will sell for Christmas, but some of the plants named are the biggest sellers on this holiday and, after reading these suggestions, many a retail store man will want to take another account of his stock.

Primulas and Cyclamens.

The primulas are favorites with purchasers of moderate means. Both P. Sinensis and P. obconica should now be in nice flower, provided they have been grown on a shelf or light bench in a sunny house. P. malacoides, the most decorative and charming of all the greenhouse primulas, is never seen at its best for Christmas. It dislikes heat, and, for that reason, it is far better to grow it cold and use later in the winter. Cyclamens for Christmas may be grown a little warmer than primulas. From now on any sun we may have will not harm them. It is a mistake to shade them at this season, as it will only mean drawn foliage and flowers. Half the beauty of a cyclamen is lost when the flowers fail to stand up rigidly. If your plants are late and not yet showing color, it will be far better to place them in a cool house—40 to 45 degrees at night suits them—and flower them toward spring.

Begonias.

Many thousands of begonias are sold at Christmas and the smaller sizes are usually in undersupply. While Cincinnati is a much better house plant than Lorraine, many of the latter still are sold. Then, Gloire de Chatelaine is not to be ignored. Nicely flowered plants of this perpetual-blooming variety will bring as much money as Cincinnati or Lorraine, and it is a decidedly better house plant, for, if given anything like reasonable care, it will flower the whole winter in the average home. This year, I believe, for the first time, some of the beautiful English winter-flowering varieties, such as Mrs. Heal and Winter Cheer, are being offered in small quantities. These are of real Christmas color, with flowers equaling those of the tuberous section in size. There are now quite a variety of these begonias raised by Veitch & Son, of London, and Clibrans, of Altrincham, England. When more of these begonias have been imported and then propagated and culture is mastered, these will jump into the front rank as Christmas favorites. Growers who are looking for something out of the common should secure some of these plants.

Poinsettias.

The present fall has been an exceptionally warm and bright one and, as a consequence, it has been a comparatively easy matter to get the poinsettia bracts developed in good season for the holiday trade. If, perchance, any are somewhat backward, give them more heat at once; 60 to 62 degrees at night will suffice. A higher temperature will tend to make them drawn and lacking in substance. Cool them off gradually, as sharp drops in temperature will soon cause a crop of golden foliage to appear. Careless watering will achieve the same object. It is better to under-water than the reverse. Do not use any stimulants after the bracts are one-fourth expanded.

Poinsettias have their ups and downs in favor, but they have the real Christmas colors and are not likely to be displaced for many years to come. While in the store, give them a location free from drafts and do not let them stand in saucers containing any water, or they will soon lose their leaves. In cutting the bracts it is a good plan to gradually drop the temperature of the house for a few nights. As the stems are cut have some water as near boiling as possible and dip the ends in it for a few seconds, or sear them on a hot iron or some hot coal to stop bleeding. Then plunge in a deep vase of cold water and keep in a temperature of about 45 degrees. An ice chest is too cold for these flowers.

Freesias.

We do not see many freesias at Christmas, either in pots or in the cut state. Not being of a Christmas color, it pays much better to cut them than to run any risk of left-over plants. The bulbs which were placed in the soil about the middle of July now have growths twenty-four to thirty inches high and buds are showing quite distinctly. The bulk of these will be on time for the holidays. These plants have for some weeks had a minimum temperature of 52 to 54 degrees and have been on shelves close to the glass.

The Cyclamen Has Become the Big Seller Among Christmas Plants.

The Retailer Who Seeks Individuality Makes Use of Material that is Not Seen in Every Store on the Street.

Christmas prices are always good for freesias and any laggard plants should get a little more heat at once. Purity is far ahead of all other freesias for Christmas forcing.

Euphorbia Jacquinæflora.

Euphorbia jacquinæflora is an old plant and, like many other old plants, it has come much into favor of late. Its brilliant color makes it a grand Christmas plant. While it may be grown in an ordinary greenhouse, it succeeds best in the same house with poinsettias and does not at all object to a brisk heat. This plant is specially desirable when grown in pans containing six to twelve plants, each grown to a single stem. The graceful drooping stems, each thickly studded with little, bright, orange scarlet bracts, are most effective.

Camellias.

There has been a most decided return of camellias to favor and indications are that more than ever will be sold this Christmas. They are plants which need cool treatment and object to bright sunshine. They cannot be subjected to anything like warm treatment without suffering a loss of buds, but, if they are a little late for the holidays, they will stand 50 degrees at night, but do not expose them to bright sunshine or the flowers are liable to be burned. If one or two flowers can be even half expanded, the plants will be in good condition for selling. When fully open they need careful packing; each flower must be wrapped in cotton-wool and tissue paper to prevent bruising. Camellias can be kept in a cold part of the store, being of a tough nature. They will withstand a temperature which would soon prove disastrous to tender plants like poinsettias.

Early French and Dutch Bulbs.

Paper White narcissi have been on the markets for some weeks. It is a simple matter to have these in flower for Christmas by simply standing the flats below the benches in a warm house until flowers start to open and then placing them on a bench. There is often a glut of this flower in the wholesale markets, but the country florist with a retail trade will find them valuable, and any uncut flowers can be held for some days on the floor of a cold cellar. Roman hyacinths can be had without much trouble for the holidays. They also prove useful. In 6-inch pans, nicely flowered and neatly trimmed, they are salable. French Trumpet majors and Golden Spurs do not carry flowers of anything like the size and quality of the Guernsey and Dutch, but are a welcome addition to the list of Christmas flowers. I doubt, however, if there is much money in them. The same is true of tulips, such as White Hawk, La Reine and the little Duc van Thol. Critical customers are willing to pay a good price for these harbingers of spring. The tulips all need a good top heat and must be kept dark until the flowers start to open, or the stems will be short.

Bulbs placed in flats in September are now all well rooted and where growths have started a couple of inches the following sorts can be started: Tulips—La Reine, White Hawk, Yellow Prince. Narcissi—Golden Spur, Dutch and Guernsey; Silver Spur and rugulosus. In addition, Spanish iris and gladioli of the nanus type, such as Blushing Bride and Peach Blossom, can be started in a cool house.

Berried Plants.

Christmas is the one season when berried plants will sell. For some varieties fancy prices are necessary, but there are others which can be profitably sold at moderate figures. Imported berried hollies are good this season, with plenty of dark green foliage and an abundance of fruit. One or two of these in tubs at the entrance to the store or on the sidewalk, where this is allowable, are effective and will at once attract attention. Be sure to keep these cool and moist at the root; the same applies to skimmias and aucubas. In the way of greenhouse fruiting plants, Ardisia crenulata is always a fine seller provided the berries are well ripened. If they are a little tardy, give them all the heat you can and full sun; also, a good syringing each day. For purchasers of moderate means there are Christmas peppers and Jerusalem cherries. The latter are the hardier and more satisfactory. Plants propagated from cuttings are low-habited and do not make nice, bushy plants like seedlings. Furthermore, they ripen so early that berries will often fall before the holidays, even when grown cold. Give the Jerusalem cherries lots of water and tell purchasers that they will last much longer in a cool than in a warm house.

Christmas Greenery.

It does not pay the average florist to make up pine, laurel, hemlock and other forms of wreathing, or to make up wreaths which can be bought by the yard or barrel, as the case may be, at reasonable prices. When supplies are received, keep no more of them than is necessary in the store where there is fire heat. Sheds, cellars, or even empty coldframes from which all but a little frost can be excluded are ideal storage places. In addition to the evergreen we have the beautiful deciduous hollies, such as Ilex verticillata; some varieties of roses, such as Rosa multiflora, rugosa, Carolina and Setigera; Berberis Thunbergii and vulgaris; the various crataegus and cotoneasters, to mention some of the more prominent red fruited plants which are most valuable for use in wreaths and for various decorative purposes. The common snowberry, Symphoricarpos racemosus, with white fruit, and S. vulgaris, the Indian currant or coral berry, with its smaller purplish red fruit, are other valuable Christmas-fruited shrubs. It is well to lay in a good stock of these in a cold storage shed while the weather holds good. It is a difficult matter to secure these when frost and snow hold full sway.

Christmas Trees.

The call of late years has shown a decided increase for Christmas trees in pots or small tubs painted green. The pots answer well for small Norway or other spruces up to three or four feet in height, but for larger sizes tubs are preferable. They have the additional advantage of not being breakable, and after these little trees have been used in the house a day or two they can be kept in a porch or vestibule or even outdoors. They will keep green until spring. The pots will burst with the frost, the tubs will not; therefore, use tubs when possible. While selling the spruces for Christmas trees, why not have a porch box filled with suitable evergreens as a sample of what you can offer? Also, have a few retinosporas, hemlocks, junipers and other varieties in tubs and suggest their use in locations where they will get little or no fire heat.

THE CHRISTMAS PLANT BASKETS.

The illustrations of the Christmas plant arrangements in this issue of The Review were prepared from photographs made at the establishments of the E. Wienhoeber Co., Chicago, and Max Schling, New York.

BUSINESS EMBARRASMENTS.

Easton, Pa.—H. W. Baker has been appointed receiver for Howard P. Kleinhans, who has left Easton with his family.

THE FIRST WOMAN CHAUFFEUR.

The London Flower Shop, Ltd., of 1800 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, has the distinction of having in its employ probably the first commercial woman chauffeur in this country. She is Miss Blanche Ferree, 23 years old. The Evening Ledger considered this departure from the ordinary of sufficient news value to reproduce a photograph showing the masculinely attired young lady standing by her truck ready to mount to the driver's seat. Miss Ferree thinks that driving a delivery truck for a Philadelphia flower shop is the finest kind of a job for a girl, and says that in a dozen different ways it beats working in a store. Incidentally, the London Flower Shop will find that hiring a woman chauffeur beats hiring a man in the same capacity by a dozen different ways, especially in regard to publicity of the kind that spells success.

IMPATIENS NOT THRIVING.

What kind of treatment do sultanas need that grow to be good plants and then begin to look brown and diseased at the ends? M. F. T.—Kan.

I suppose you mean Impatiens Sultani, and not sweet sultans. If the plants are impatiens, I should say that the trouble comes from starvation at the root, or too low temperature and an insufficient water supply. In winter, to keep these in good condition, they must have a warm house.

C. W.

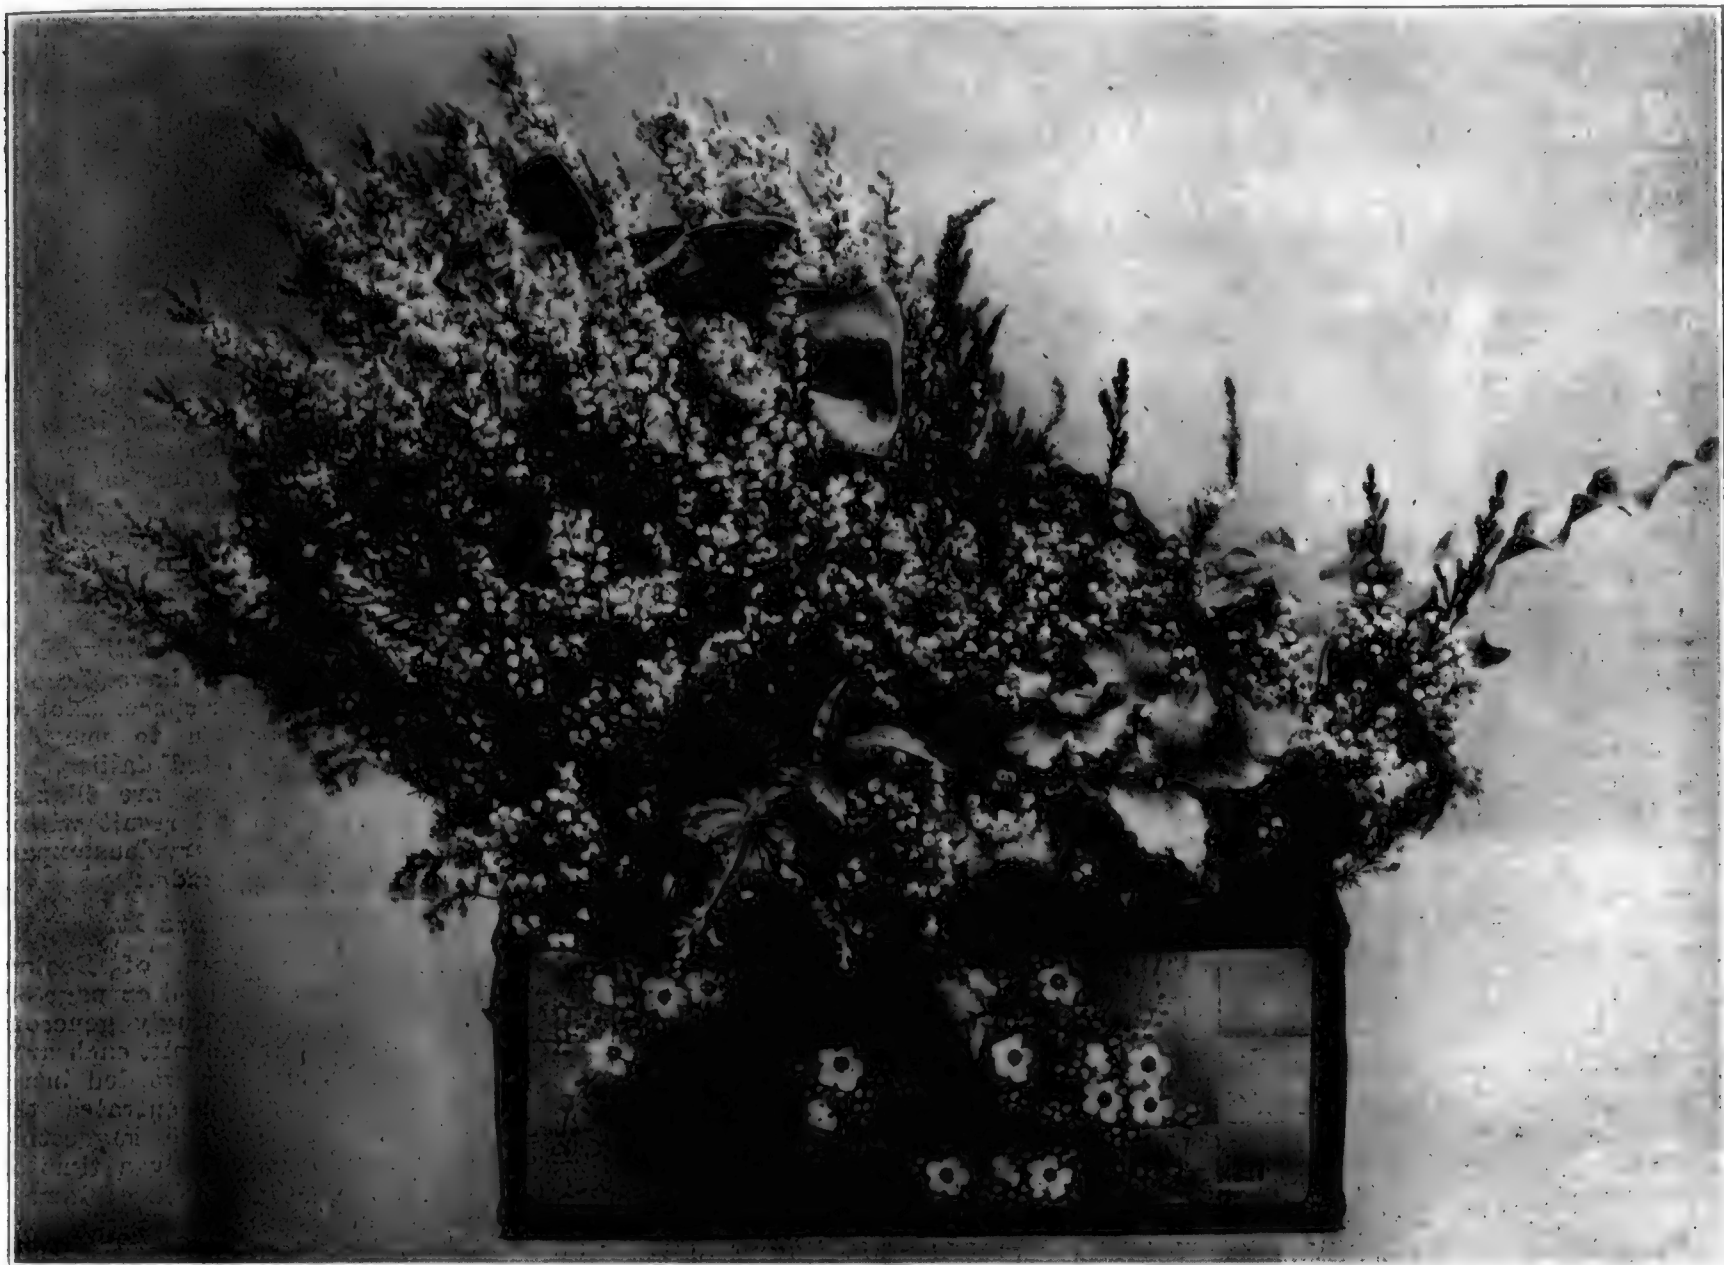

ANTIRRHINUM MOST SUITABLE.

Please tell me of some good flower for cutting that I could grow on a ground bench, 5x150. I would like a good commercial variety, which will bloom from February to June. I have sweet peas. F. C.—Ind.

Seeing that you already have sweet peas, I do not know of any other continuous bloomer that would give you better returns than antirrhinum. Pink varieties are decidedly the best sellers. You will find some good varieties offered. Ramsburg's Silver Pink and Nelrose, and Buxton's Pink are a fine trio. I would rather plant seedlings than rooted cuttings, if they can be had, as the former possess greater vigor and prove more disease-resistant. Set the plants 8x10 in the benches. If you have a demand for ten weeks' stocks, you could plant them for Memorial day trade, but I am sure the snapdragons would net more money.

C. W.

SWEET PEAS DROPPING BUDS.

Kindly tell us what is the matter with our sweet peas. They have a fine start, are about seven feet tall, grow rank, show good foliage, and are free from insects, but recently they began to drop their blooms before they opened. They come with two or three blooms to a stem, but lately many of the buds have been turning yellow and dropping off.

Could it be possible that they have been overwatered or overfed? We have been feeding them twice a week with liquid cow manure. They are planted in a solid bed in the ground. There is no tile running through under the bed, but we intend to do this next year. The soil is dark and somewhat heavy.

On two or three occasions, through the carelessness of the night man, the temperature has run up to 65 degrees, but we aim to keep the temperature from 50 to 55 degrees.

H. J. V. H. & S.—Ohio.

Sweet peas usually drop more or less buds in the dark weather of early winter, but you are both overwatering and overfeeding your plants. To feed twice a week at this season is excessive. The plants should not need any stimulants until the flowers are opening, if your soil has a good depth and good drainage. Keep your plants drier at the root and do not feed them. If the plants show that they need some stimulant, give them a top-dressing of cow or sheep manure and wash it in. During midwinter feeding must be done with extreme care or the buds will continue to drop. Erratic night temperatures are bad. Before the flowers open 45 to 48 degrees is a suitable night reading. Later keep the minimum as near 50 degrees as you can, and certainly not over 52 degrees if you want good results. Sweet peas like a deep, rich soil into which a heavy coat of well decayed cow manure has been worked. A little fine bone can be used with the animal manures when top-dressing.

C. W.

TEMPERATURE FOR LILIES.

Please give us some information on giganteum lilies. Some say to put them immediately in a temperature of 60 degrees, and some say 50 degrees. We intended to put them in a rose house. What is the proper temperature and when should they be started? Do they need any shade to draw the stems?

A. & S.—Ia.

A temperature of 55 to 60 degrees is better than 50 degrees. Give them this temperature right from the start. Later, as the plants become well rooted, a higher temperature, say 60 to 65 degrees, can be given. Giganteums need a good heat from start to finish. A little shade helps to draw them up and give the necessary stem. Give this shade after the plants are six to eight inches high.

C. W.

TO HOLD BACK POINSETTIAS.

On account of the warm weather and hot sun in this locality, my poinsettias are quite far advanced. What shall I do to hold them back so that they will still be in good condition for Christmas? I shall greatly appreciate any information you can give me.

M. F. T.—Kan.

Gradually lower the temperature in your house to 50 degrees. Place the plants where they can be given some shade from the rays of the sun. Do not keep them too cool, however. Be sure to water them carefully, or they will soon lose their foliage. It is safer to run the plants a little on the dry side when they are in a lower temperature.

C. W.

Hoopeston, Ill.—E. A. Raasch is busy making preparations for the construction of two additional greenhouses. He reports excellent business.

Columbia City, Ind.—The North Side Greenhouses, owned by Elmer Cox, have been sold to Charles Adair, of Fort Wayne, for a consideration, it is said, of $10,000. A tract of land comprising 160 acres in Moore county, New Mexico, was taken over at $3,000 by Mr. Cox as part payment on the deal.

THE CHRISTMAS ADVERTISING

BOOSTING THE BUSINESS.

The Old-Fashioned Idea.

Not so long ago, as time is measured by years, the florist in the smaller cities took himself a little bit too seriously in many ways. He prided himself on his artistic, mechanical and botanical knowledge rather than on his ability as a merchant or tradesman. He considered himself more of a scientist than a salesman. According to his way of thinking there was only about so much business in town anyway. He had no faith in what were to him new and unproved methods of stimulating demand. What trade he did not get his competitors would, and that's all there was to it. He did not even believe in meeting the customer halfway. He thought he could not have a separate, downtown store, yet his greenhouse was so far from the general line of travel that his fellow townsmen looked upon it as a sight-seeing spot. They sometimes made it the objective of a Sunday walk, on which occasion they would do a great deal of looking but little buying.

Even the little room at the greenhouse in which customers waited while being served was dingy and cluttered. The old-time florist could do a piece of landscape gardening for a leading citizen in a way to make the townspeople rub their eyes in astonishment and to grudgingly admit that Smith certainly knew his business. But this same Smith was in the kindergarten class when it came to making a selling display at his own place; that is, he would have been had he attempted one. With the old-school undertaker, he believed that "everything comes to him who waits." Possibly, a day or two before Christmas, he would insert an inch ad in the local daily; something like this:

JOHN SMITH, FLORIST

Special attention given to the Xmas trade. Tel. No. Central 24. No. 2700 Out of the Way Pl. Of course, a business card of this description had about as much pulling power as a Phytomyza chrysanthi attached to a furniture drow would have.

Some Modern Methods.

Happily, the John Smith type is now something of a rarity, even in small towns. The average florist is up and doing. He no longer relies on people visiting his inaccessible greenhouses, but has a store in a busy section of the town. Both greenhouses and store are neat and clean. There is an apparent effort to show the stock in such attractive ways that people will wish to buy, and many florists have become large users of newspaper space. Not all retailers are in position to use full pages in widely circulated dailies, but here and there pioneers are blazing publicity trails that will result within a few years in a truly marvelous expansion of the Christmas trade.

How Boston Does It.

Note the ad of Penn, of Boston, photographically reproduced on page 39. So far as space—exceedingly generous for a florists' ad—will admit, each article is priced. A cleverly worded introduction to the ad concentrates the reader's attention on the suggestion that Christmas is essentially a time of good cheer, and that no gift of human workmanship, regardless of expense, can so well express this sentiment as a single flower of nature's handiwork. It is a suggestion that should carry a stirring appeal to everyone who is himself a flower lover.

Some Typical Examples.

In direct contrast to the foregoing is the dignified Wienhoeber ad that makes no mention of prices, but implies quality and service in every line. It gives an idea of exclusiveness, of prestige, of a highly reputable house of long standing and unblemished reputation, like the ad of a high-class bank or jewelry or furniture store.

Then there is the ad that makes a colorific splash; a full-page, 2-color display in a Sunday edition, as was that of the Jones-Russell Co., reproduced herewith. Its first appeal is to the eye and then to the pocketbook.

Last is the coöperative ad, usually engineered by an enterprising newspaper solicitor. It is argued that in union there is strength and that every advertiser in this venture gets the benefit of a full-page display although only paying his proportion of the expense. The reader simply cannot ignore such a page.

What Will You Do?

The retailers' advertisements reproduced in this issue are to illustrate modern types—there are ideas here that can be adapted to the needs of any business. The question, then, is "What are you going to do about it?" Shall you be content to serve what trade naturally comes through your door, or are you going to do your mite to put flowers before the gift buyers in at least as strong a fashion as other specialty stores do their wares?

PLANTING EASTER LILY BULBS.

We are about to plant three cases of Easter lily bulbs which came from Japan. We should like to get some advice as to what fertilizer to use and how to care for them, as this is our first attempt. D. B.—La.

You do not state which variety of Easter lily you have. There are several, but the one mostly grown is longiflorum giganteum, and I assume this is what you have. Use a compost of decayed turfy loam, to which is added one-fourth of well-decayed manure and some sharp sand. Do not use any commercial fertilizer or fresh animal manure. Pot the bulbs singly in 5-inch or 6-inch pots, according to size of bulbs. The larger size of pots is most in use. Only half fill the pots with compost at planting time. Leave an ample space to fill in as the bulbs grow. Remember that many of the roots come from the top of the bulb, and if you do not cover the bulbs well the results will not be so good.

After potting, give a good watering. Then stand them in a frame, or below a bench in a greenhouse where a minimum temperature of 55 to 60 degrees is maintained. When the growths push, stand the plants on a bench where they will get lots of sun and not less than 60 degrees at night. Giganteums need warm treatment all the time. They usually come quite dwarf. About the time the buds show, shade the house well and keep them warm. This helps to lengthen the stems. Stand them in a cool house as soon as the first flowers open. Be careful to water sparingly until the pots contain plenty of live roots. C. W.

RISE AND FALL OF THE VIOLET.

Fixing the Responsibility.

Many growers, or those who have kept in touch with the wholesale cut flower market situation, may recall the almost phenomenal rise in favor of the double violets about fifteen years ago and how, especially in certain districts in the east, many persons of both sexes started to specialize in this flower exclusively. Some were successful and made comfortable fortunes in the venture in the space of a few years, but the apparent ease with which this was done acted like a will-o'-the-wisp to lure others, who proved less successful, to the bog of destruction, or failure. Perhaps more failures were noted than successes, so that after a time violet growing was regarded as a more or less hopeless thing to attempt, especially during the last few seasons, when violets, as a commercial proposition, have been at the lowest ebb.

Personally, I consider this rise and fall of the violet in public favor as most justifiable, under the attending conditions. I do not blame the violet for its fall so much as I do the growers, or the men who handle them in the market. The violet of ten seasons ago was, on an average, of splendid type. The fine, large double blooms, on long, firm stems, bunched well and carefully, were worth the good prices asked and obtained in the market. I can recall seeing bunches of 100 blooms that were a foot in diameter, with stems six and seven inches long, and plants that were ideal types, free from disease and producing the maximum number of blooms per season, without any apparent trouble to themselves or to their growers. These flowers had splendid keeping qualities, too, lasting in water for a week in a cool temperature, losing their fragrance but not their color or shape.

The Decline of the Double Violet.

Growers who started to cultivate violets usually had success the first season, beginner's luck, as some called it, and being encouraged, built more houses and went into the game extensively, only to find that after a few seasons, for some reason, their stock was not up to standard. It was apparent that the plants did not have the vitality they formerly had. This situation, instead of improving, grew steadily worse; one by one violet growers dropped from the running, either to take up another branch of floriculture or to enter a profession of less uncertain nature than violet growing. Those who continued to propagate violets have generally conceded that, taken alone, violet growing is no longer a paying proposition and that the successful culture of the double varieties is a thing of the past.

Another reason for the failure of the double violets in the market was the great carelessness which characterized the bunching and shipping methods of some of the growers. Consignments numbering thousands of blooms would be sent in day after day with flowers so loosely bunched that the slightest shake would send a dozen or more from the center of the bunch. Inferior blooms would be bunched with good ones and often muddy, ill assorted foliage would be used. As the wholesale merchant could not take time to remedy this, the good, bad and indifferent violets were sold together. The grower was probably notified, but meanwhile his stock had been given a black eye. This could not fail to have a bad effect on the violet trade, especially as this inferior stock arrived in an increasing quantity. The demand decreased rapidly.

The Single Violet.

The commercial development of the single violet, notably Princess of Wales, has been a less rapid one, but bids fair to be more lasting. Some years ago the principal value of this variety was to provide foliage for the double violets, but even then it was at first accepted as a doubtful substitute for California. However, Princess of Wales has now outdistanced California, both from a cultural and commercial point of view. While I doubt if the Princess will ever equal the popularity of Lady Campbell or Marie Louise, it has a secure and constantly advancing position in the market.

Although several years have elapsed since I have been interested in violets from a commercial point of view, I have made a few experiments with Lady Campbell plants that have been interesting to me. I will tell of one experiment in particular, which may interest others who grow this variety.

In the early fall of 1914 I took a few plants from a grower who complained that his stock was going back on him for no apparent reason; the plants, after having been properly cared for through the summer, seemed to reach a point where all growth stopped. The leaves became a sickly yellowish color and while the plants were not dead, they gave no evidence of vitality. It was with little hope of their even being able to stand the transplanting that I took them to my own violet bed. Every known care was given the plants, but it was not until January that the plants really appeared to have an interest in life. At that time they sent out a few thin shoots and buds, which I removed as soon as they appeared, until the first of February, when I let them grow as they would.

Experimenting with Lady Campbell.

At this time the plants were sending up a strong, fine, healthy crown growth. The foliage was bright green, on long, firm stems. Before long, blooms appeared that were the largest I had ever picked. Immediately after Easter I took the few cuttings there were from the plants and divided the crowns, putting all of them in the regular cutting bed, later transferring them to the freshly made greenhouse bed. Here they have remained and have proved to be ideal types of plants, showing a decided tendency to produce earlier and better blooms this season than any of the other stock.

Whether this is a solution for the improvement of Lady Campbell stock I cannot say until the experiment has been given a more thorough test. My theory is, however, that this violet has been forced—it is almost impossible to grow Lady Campbell without forcing it—to such an extent that it needs a rest every few seasons, not in a coldframe, where it is subject to wide variations of temperature, but in a place where all the conditions for it are as ideal as possible.

From a personal standpoint, luck plays but a small part in the successful culture of violets. My failures to get good plants and blooms were always traceable to some carelessness in details that appeared insignificant at the time, but which proved fatal later. From the time the cutting is taken from the plant in the spring, constant vigilance will prove to be the price of success.

Probably a day will come when violets will bask in the sunlight of public favor, but do not forget that there is always a certain demand for this particular flower, which no other flower can fill. A conscientious care in marketing as well as in growing them is likely to bring its own reward to the grower, when that day comes.

NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW.

Premiums Increased.

With a view to adding to the attraction of some of the display classes, the schedule committee of the National Flower Show has decided to increase the prizes in the class covering rose gardens to $1,000, offering $500 as first, $300 as second, and $200 as the third prize. The prizes in the class for the best display of rose plants to cover 200 square feet have been increased from $125 and $75 to $200 and $100. The show will be held in Convention hall, Philadelphia, March 25 to April 2.

The second preliminary schedule has just been mailed. It comprises forty-four pages, and the prizes offered approximate $20,000. It is the largest schedule ever put out for a flower show in America.

The Ubiquitous Poinsettia and its Willow Basket, A Steady Seller Among "Average" People.

Many of the prizes offered by outside interests appear in the new edition. A number of classes are underwritten by Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Pennock-Meehan Co., M. Rice Co., Henry F. Michell Co., H. Waterer, Leo Niessen Co., W. Atlee Burpee & Co., all of Philadelphia, and Zandberger Bros., Valkenburg, Holland. Other donors of special prizes noted are Philip Breitmeyer, Michigan Cut Flower Exchange and Harry Balsley, Detroit; H. G. Berning, St. Louis; Hugh B. Barclay, Marion, Pa.; Emil Buettner, Park Ridge, Ill.; John Cook, Baltimore; Eugene Daille-douze, Brooklyn; J. H. Dunlop, Toronto, Ont.; W. H. Elliott, Brighton, Mass.; A. Farenwald, Roslyn, Pa.; Gude Bros. Co., Washington, D. C.; George B. Hart, Rochester, N. Y.; Hess & Swoboda, Omaha, Neb.; Benjamin Hammond, Beacon, N. Y.; A. H. Hews & Co., Cambridge, Mass.; William F. Kasting, Buffalo; J. A. Peterson & Sons, Cincinnati; A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn.; Max Schling, New York; United States Cut Flower Co., Elmira, N. Y.; Mrs. Charles Wheeler, Bryn Mawr, Pa.; Anton C. Zvolanek, Lompoc, Cal. Other special prizes have been received and will find places in the final schedule.

New Rose Ruling.

Exhibitors of roses in both commercial and private classes are reminded that under a new ruling of the American Rose Society all roses with more than two growths (one pinch) will be disqualified, except in the classes calling for displays, and for 100 or more blooms in a vase, when two pinches will be allowed.

The rose section, as prepared by the American Rose Society, contains an unusually liberal list of premiums, which aggregate considerably over $4,000. Almost all the varieties of roses used commercially as cut flowers are classed, and new varieties are provided for; while perpetuals, teas, Wichuraianas and polyanthas, and their hybrids, grown in pots and tubs, are amply provided for.

A liberal carnation schedule has been prepared by the American Carnation Society. The prizes for the best dis-

The retail classes in the carnation section are somewhat novel. In the class for table decorations, $50 will be awarded to each table scoring not less than 90 points; $40 to each table scoring not less than 80 points, and $30 to each table scoring not less than 70 points. Another class covers basket arrangements, and the same idea prevails as to awards. To each arrangement scoring not less than 90 points, $25 will be awarded; $20 to each arrangement scoring not less than 80 points, and $15 to each arrangement scoring not less than 70 points. Only six entries will be accepted in either of these classes. Immediately following the judging the secretary will remove the entry cards from all the exhibits in these classes, and only the regulation display cards as prescribed by the management will be permitted on the displays. The reason for this ruling is obvious to retailers.

Carnation Jubilee.

The carnation display will really form the jubilee exhibition of the American Carnation Society, celebrating that society's twenty-fifth anniversary. In its commemoration the society will award a special silver jubilee medal to each winner of one or more first premiums in the vase classes.

The American Sweet Pea Society includes a schedule covering winter orchid-flowering, standard winter orchid-flowering and varieties, and 1915 novelties.

Notable in this section of the schedule are the classes covering the Burpee prizes for the largest display of sweet peas, winter or summer-flowering, or both, and the Zvolanek prizes for the best and largest collection of winter-flowering grandiflora and orchid sweet peas, all correctly named, varieties introduced prior to 1916. Liberal prizes are offered for retailers' exhibits.

play covering 150 square feet are $200, $150 and $100. Prizes of $50, $35 and $15 are offered for the best vase of carnations, not to exceed 300 blooms, one or more varieties, greens and ribbons allowed.

for a display of forced blooms at this show, and has prepared a section of the schedule calling for about $300 in prizes.

Little change has been made in the plant sections, the provisions made therein having been considered ample.

Copies of the second preliminary schedule may be had on application to the undersigned at 53 West Twenty-eighth street, New York.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Mignonette.

The earliest sowing of mignonette is now giving us some splendid spikes; not so fine, however, as we shall have later in the winter, for mignonette is always of the best quality when the temperature outside is low. The plants love cool, moist weather and abominate heat. For that reason the house where they are planted must be kept cool and given an abundance of fresh air. The night temperature must not exceed 45 degrees, and 40 to 42 degrees is better.

There is not any great call for mignonette while mums are in season, but from Christmas until late spring it sells well. See to it that the plants are properly supported, either by using cross strings, or by using short pieces of brush. Rub off all weak side growths, and, if really fancy spikes are wanted, reduce the number of spikes to be carried by each plant. Mignonette will not tolerate bottom heat, and for that reason it should not be sown in benches above heating pipes. Its roots love to be in cool, moist material, and, if the drainage is good, the water will pass freely through the soil. Now that the benches are full of active roots, a light mulch of old manure will be beneficial. If this is not available, apply liquid manure once a fortnight, but be careful that it is moderately weak. Sow mignonette now for a late spring crop.

Lilium Candidum.

An early batch of Lilium candidum always comes in useful. L. candidum cannot be subjected to hard forcing without being, in a large measure, spoiled. Place the plants intended for early blooming in a temperature of 45 degrees and never grow them in a higher minimum than 50 degrees if flowers of the finest quality are wanted. Keep the plants wanted for Easter flowering in a coldframe for some time yet. Keep the sashes off except to prevent hard freezing, which might crack the pots. This beautiful lily needs radically different treatment from L. longiflorum, to grow it successfully.

Lilium Giganteum.

The longiflorum lilies should all have been potted before now if they are wanted for Easter flowering. It is true that Easter comes unusually late in 1916, but it is a mistake to assume that for this reason the potting can be put off a month later than usual. Giganteum is the lily par excellence for Easter and needs heat from start to finish. Some growers still make the mistake of placing the bulbs, when potted, in coldframes or pits. This treatment will answer well for some lilies, but not for giganteums. Give them not less than 55 degrees at night at the start, and later in the season increase this by 10 degrees. Then the plants will be seen at their best. Water sparingly until the growths are several inches high and the roots are active in the pots.

Poinsettias.

The warm fall has been favorable for the development of the poinsettia bracts. Many were fully open at Thanksgiving and must be kept moderately cool for the next two or three weeks; not too cool, however, or a loss of leaves will soon ensue. From now on careful watering plays a great part in the successful care of poinsettias. It is more dangerous to keep the plants extremely wet than the reverse. Strive to strike the happy medium. Plants with undeveloped bracts will need 60 degrees at night. Such as are well opened must be kept 10 degrees cooler, but be sure they are watered with care and not subjected to cold drafts.

Gladioli.

The small-bulbed gladioli of the nanus type, such as Peach Blossom, The Bride, Blushing Bride, etc., should have been in the soil some weeks ago. If not, get them in at once, as they naturally start to grow early. The large-flowered varieties, such as Augusta, Chicago White, America, Mrs. F. King, etc., make a useful crop to plant after chrysanthemums. They succeed well in a carnation temperature. They are often seen dotted among carnations—a bad practice. There is no objection to planting them where carnations may have died out, but they do far more harm than good if dotted here and there among the plants. America still seems to hold its own as the best seller among forced gladioli.

DATES TO START NARCISSI.

Please state the earliest dates on which the following bulbs can be forced; I mean the dates when the flats can be brought into the houses: French Golden Spur, Guernsey Spur and Trumpet Major. J. H.—R. I.

French Golden Spurs can be placed in heat the first week in December, provided they were planted in the flats by the middle of September. These may be had in flower for Christmas. Guernsey Trumpet majors and Golden Spurs come a little later than the French, and it does not pay to start them earlier than from December 15 to December 20. These are much superior in quality to the French stock. C. W.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS FOR SOUTHERN FLORISTS

ROSES IN THE SOUTH.

Hints on Their Propagation.

No time should be lost in getting the cuttings of such varieties as Radiance, My Maryland, Kaiserin and other roses of that type into the sand. In the south the cuttings will root much better now than a month later. Varieties like Killarney, Richmond, etc., which bloom freely through the winter, will root easily for a few months yet.

The cutting bed should be deep enough to hold about two inches of rough cinders for drainage, and three inches of sand when it is pounded firmly. Enough bottom heat to keep the sand at a temperature of 60 degrees is essential to success.

The wood for cuttings should be carefully selected and not cut haphazard. All the varieties mentioned throw a good many short, blind shoots, and these shoots, taken off with a heel when a little more than half ripe, make the best kind of cuttings. Do not crowd the cuttings in the sand bed, or they will probably lose lots of foliage. When this happens, although the cuttings will make roots, the chances for getting good plants are slim. See also that your knife is sharp enough to make a clean, even cut.

Water the bed well after inserting the cuttings, and keep them shaded until rooted. A light spraying once, or perhaps twice, on bright days will keep the wood and foliage fresh and give just enough water to keep the sand moist without its being clogged. The temperature in the propagating house should run the same as the houses in which the roses are growing. L.

CARNATIONS IN THE SOUTH.

Begin Propagating Early.

To have well branched plants when the southern planting-out time comes, in March and April, it is necessary to make an early start in the propagation. I like to have the main batch of cuttings ready to come out of the sand just as soon as the Christmas rush is over. To have the cuttings well rooted by that time, they ought to be in the sand as early as possible. There is no need of a special propagating house; a side table in any of the carnation houses will answer just as well. Prepare the bed in about the same way as for rose cuttings.

To have plenty of good cuttings at this time, it is always necessary to have a table or so planted with batches of all the varieties wanted. Allow the flowering shoots to run up to bud; then pinch it out and in a short time you will have a wealth of fine cuttings. Where this has not been done, you will have to depend on the wood on the flowering shoots of the plants you are picking flowers from. These cuttings are somewhat small yet, but will root readily enough. Select only the best cuttings, from healthy stock. Cuttings carefully severed from the stems need not be touched with a knife, but can be inserted in the sand as they are.

Water thoroughly at first; thereafter keep the bed only well moistened. The quantity of water will depend on the quality of the sand, as coarse sand takes a great deal more water than sand of a fine grain. The cuttings should be well rooted in thirty days. They will need some shade the first three weeks. Maintain a night temperature of 50 to 52 degrees. L.

GIGANTEUMS IN ALABAMA.

When should Lilium giganteum bulbs be planted in Alabama to secure blooms at Easter? We sometimes have rather warm weather in March and Easter next year is unusually late. F. B.—Ala.

In Alabama, giganteum bulbs should be planted as soon as they can be secured from the dealer. There is nothing gained by delaying the time for planting. Early planting allows time for making many roots by the time forcing is needed. If you have not yet planted your bulbs, lose no time in doing so, and place them in a night temperature of 50 degrees. A good place for them at first is under a carnation bench. About January 1 bring them into a night temperature of 60 degrees. In Alabama this probably will be all the forcing needed. If you can see the buds five weeks before Easter, you will have them in flower on time, with a few days to harden them off in a cool house. You will have to increase your temperature at least 5 degrees to do this. These plants will stand a night temperature of 75 degrees if needed to hurry them. I have always found it wiser to push them a little at the finish, as it is difficult to hold them if they are too early. L.

COLD WEATHER NOTES.

Protecting Hardy Roses.

The word hardy seems somewhat improper when applied to roses in the open air. Probably a better word would be outdoor. Only a limited number of roses, even in the hybrid perpetual class, can be considered perfectly hardy in the northerly states. Tie the shoots of the individual plants up together; then draw earth up to them to a depth of at least six inches of the last season's growth. Wood thus covered will invariably come through the winter fresh. As a general rule this protection suffices for hybrid perpetuals, and in the more favored states it answers well for hybrid teas also, if a mulch of strawy manure or leaves is added. Where hybrid teas are likely to be killed back badly, the best plan is to dig up the plants and bury them in a trench on any well drained ground. This is far preferable to storing them in a cellar. Coldframes may also be used to store them in. Sometimes climbers cannot be depended upon; in this case it is a good plan simply to lay them on the ground, after they are cut loose, and give them a light covering of leaves or straw.

Protecting Miscellaneous Plants.

Bulb beds and borders should have a mulch of leaves when the ground is well frozen. The aim should be to keep this frost in the bed rather than try to exclude it, as many are still attempting to do. If bulb plantings are covered while the land is soft, mice and other rodents will raise havoc, and in spring it will be found that the bulb growths have pushed so far through the leaves that the mulch cannot be removed without breaking many growths.

Pansies, daisies, forget-me-nots, etc., in coldframes, need a coating of perfectly dry leaves. Place the sashes over these, but, of course, give air on all possible occasions. Outdoor pansies will need a mulch of straw or leaves.

Hardy herbaceous perennials should have a mulch, especially newly planted ones that are not properly established; use boards, brush or a scattering of littery manure. All herbaceous and alpine plants need a good mulch and now is the time to apply it. All newly planted deciduous trees and shrubs are benefited by a mulch. This, however, will not save them. The manure on the surface will leach down and do good, but manure mixed with the soil and coming in direct contact with the roots would do much more harm than good.

Broad-leaved Evergreens.

Thousands of rhododendrons, laurels and others of the broad-leaved evergreen class died last spring, the cause of death being, in practically all cases, dryness at the root and not winter's severity. To make absolutely sure that none of your plants are dry, draw a ring around each plant and let the hose run in it. Fill up more than once if necessary. Treat all valuable evergreens in this way before the ground freezes up, and spring losses will be small. Give rhododendrons a liberal mulch of leaves as soon as you are sure none have dry feet. It is a common blunder to give this mulch of leaves before fall rains set in at all. The leaves keep practically all rain from the roots, and the owners in spring will be found counting the number of losses among the evergreens which had been so liberally mulched.

Galesburg, Ill.—Walter Pillsbury, of Pillsbury's Flower Stores, reports the autumn trade as the best for them in four years. The plant business has been particularly good. As a proof of this, he says the firm is making preparations for the construction of three houses, which will be devoted to pot plants.

THE CALM BEFORE THE STORM

By Beatrice Plumb.

I should know it's close upon us, though my calendar denied it,
I should know that Christmas sure is on the way,
For the telephone's in order—solid proof, for oft I've tried it,
That it means to strike a week 'fore Christmas day.
Now the furnaces and boilers are behaving, whereas mostly
They invoke from Sam, the fireman, language warm,
And the houses reek of peacefulness that's really almost ghostly,
Which I know is just the calm before the storm.

The delivery autos, mind you, all are scheming like the others,
And their engines run the smoothest ever heard,
But the driver knows the devils—and he asks you, florist brothers,

Won't they spring a leak December twenty-third?
Now, our water hasn't been cut off for ages by the city,
And it's Christmas week that duty they'll perform.
Not a rush of pesky agents here for weeks and weeks—oh, pity!
It's the calm that always comes before the storm.

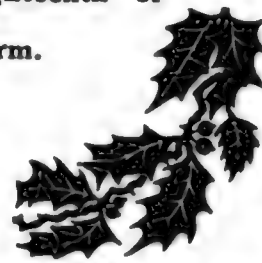

I should know it's close upon us, though all Christendom denied it,

I should know the rush was looming into sight,
For the men up on the greenhouse did not fall through glass inside it,

And for days the office girls have had no fight.
Oh, I've lived through many Christmases, and well I can remember,

And I take no stock in rapid-rate reform.
There'll begin the reign of cussedness the eighteenth of December,

And we'll end this calm and fight against the storm.

ROSES

BLACK SPOTS ON ROSE LEAVES.

I am sending you a few leaves of Killarney and American Beauty rose plants, which seem to be affected by some strange insect or disease. The blooms of these are fine. Recently I dusted the plants with sulphur to kill mildew and also gave the plants a top-dressing of rather fresh cow manure. Do you think this treatment could have caused the trouble? Kindly tell me what the disease is and how to get rid of it. W. H. R.—Pa.

The black spots on the foliage sent me were caused by the application of fresh manure. It is a fungus carried up by the moist air, and has the appearance of soot sprayed over the plants. The spots disappear in a few days and do not seem to damage the plants. No doubt the spots have disappeared by this time. W. J. K.

ROSES FOR MAY FLOWERING.

I have received some roses which I wish to have in bloom the last week in May. They came in 2½-inch pots and I have placed them in 4-inch pots. They are greenhouse-grown stock of the following varieties: Clothilde Soupert, Countess of Shaftesbury, Coquette de Lyon, Erna Teschendorff, Dorothy Perkins and Crimson Rambler. They show some signs of mildew and leaf-spot. Should their leaves be stripped off, and should the stems be dipped in some sort of solution? What varieties would you suggest to use in place of the foregoing, and what is a good red in the Soupert or C. de Lyon type? G. A. E.—Ill.

Roses such as you have, I am afraid, will not give you many flowers at the time referred to. Remember, the wood now on the plants must produce the flowers. How much wood have you on your plants of sufficient strength to produce flowers? The fact that the foliage is mildewing is also against the plants. If they are kept cold, such foliage as they have should naturally fall. If you want roses for May flowering which are sure to give satisfaction, do not depend on the small plants you have, but buy some field-grown stock and pot them up. With these you are virtually certain of a good crop of flowers. Keep the plants in a cold pit or cellar; never mind if they get a little frost. Place them in the greenhouses about the middle of March. If they are started at that time, hard forcing will not be needed to flower them.

The varieties you mention are good. One or two others to be recommended are: Tausendschon, Hiawatha, Mme. Norbert Levavasseur, a red baby Rambler; White Dorothy; Baby Dorothy, pink; Mrs. Cutbush, cerise pink, and Leonie Lamesch. C. W.

HARD, UNDEVELOPED BUDS.

I am sending a rose plant under separate cover. What is the reason for the hardened buds and what is the remedy? The trouble seems to spread, for at first it appeared on only a bud or two on each plant, but now whole plants are affected. G. G.—Mich.

The rose branch was pretty well dried up on arrival, as no provision had been made to preserve it during shipment, but it seemed to be a branch of Kaiserin Augusta Victoria. This variety, being strictly a summer rose, always gets bull-headed as soon as cold weather arrives, and the only way to prevent this as long as possible is by keeping the house warm during the fall, at a temperature of 65 degrees at night and 75 to 80 degrees in the daytime. In this way it is possible to cut fair flowers until Christmas. After that time it is advisable to let the plants rest until about the middle of February, when they may be started up for another season by taking off part of the soil, giving a good dressing of bone meal and then placing on top of this some soil and manure in equal parts.

If the plants are in a house by themselves, the temperature may be allowed to drop to the freezing point during the time the plants are resting. This will save fuel and harden the plants off, and they will start more strongly when the heat is applied again. W. J. K.

WINTER PROTECTION OF ROSES.

We have several hundred rose bushes planted out for summer blooming. We have a piece of ground that is high and sandy. Would this be a suitable place in which to bury them. If so, would it be necessary to have them below frost? Any information will be appreciated. M. B.—Ohio.

The location you mention should winter the roses well. You can bury them. Merely covering the shoots will answer as well as burying them deeply. You can mulch the surface with straw, meadow hay, leaves or some other material, which can be held in position with brush or boards. This will exclude nearly all the frost. Even if a little reaches the shoots, it will not harm them. C. W.

THE CHAMP WEILAND ROSE.

The accompanying illustration shows the house in which the new Champ Weiland rose is growing at the establishment of Weiland & Risch, at Evanston, Ill. The variety was registered with the American Rose Society last May, when the following description was recorded as that of the introducers:

A sport of Killarney, originating in our establishment at Evanston, Ill., and under deepest scrutiny for the last three seasons. Buds large and full. Color a bright, clear, glistening pink, inner and reverse side of petals identical and fadeless. More free than the parent and more sweetly scented. Foliage remarkable, of a glowing reddish character prevalent from planting time to end of season. It may be said that this rose represents a distinct advance in growth and grandeur over any of its predecessors.

It is the belief of John Risch that Champ Weiland will create a new standard. The rose is certainly most pleasing in color. Mr. Risch, whose firm was the first to go into Killarney extensively for the Chicago market, says the Champ Weiland is more prolific than Killarney or Killarney Brilliant, and far more sweetly scented.

CARNATIONS

BRANCH-ROT AND LEAF-SPOT.

I am sending you, under separate cover, some carnation stems and leaves. A great number of our plants are affected in the way indicated by the samples. Please give us the name of the disease and suggest a remedy.

E. G.—Ind.

Your carnations are affected with what is known as branch-rot. There are also a number of leaf-spots on the foliage. For both of these you should use practically the same remedy. Pick off all the leaves showing these round spots. Cut out all the branches that seem to be dying. Then give the whole bench a thorough spraying with Bordeaux mixture, getting it well into the crown of the plants, as that is where the branch-rot operates. A. F. J. B.

A READY PREY TO DISEASE.

We are sending you some samples of carnation plants which are stunted and unsatisfactory in growth and cracked in the stems, and which seem to be suffering from some sort of disease. Can you tell us what is the matter and what we can do for them?

J. S. W. F. C.—Ia.

The submitted specimens show plainly that they have not had a fair deal. The cuttings may have been properly made, but they appear to have been of the long, many-jointed kind. Perhaps, also, the leaves were pulled off carelessly when the cuttings were being prepared for the sand. They may have been potted when properly rooted, but more likely they were not. They appear to have been allowed to become hard in the sand; if not, they were allowed to become hard and stunted in the small pots. That made stem and bark hard, and when they were either shifted into larger pots or planted in the field, the bark was not in condition to expand with the swelling stem and therefore it burst in places. These are the finest possible opportunities for fungi to lodge and that seems to have happened in your case.

You may expect plenty of trouble from these plants before spring. I would suggest that you spray them thoroughly with Bordeaux mixture or some other good fungicide, getting right into the crown of the plant with the nozzle. Repeat the application every week or so, for some time. Be careful to avoid, as far as possible, atmospheric conditions that would be favorable to the development of fungous diseases.

A. F. J. B.

BLOOMS BECOMING SMALLER.

Until now our carnations have been first-class and of large size, but they seem to be getting smaller. We do not think the soil needs fertilizing, as the plants are healthy and strong. There are numerous new shoots on every plant; could these be the cause of the decrease in the size of the blooms?

J. H. C.—Mich.

The fact that your carnation blooms have been of good size and quality would indicate that there is a lack of nourishment, if the blooms are diminishing in size. Ordinarily, when carnations are benched in August, in good, rich soil, there should be little call for extra feeding until after the holidays, but that cannot be laid down as a hard and fast rule. If your plants were benched in July and have made a vigorous growth, they might appreciate a little light feeding now. Expert growers begin light feeding as early as October or early November, and when this is properly done it gives excellent results. There is great danger of overdoing it at that time of the year and I have refrained from advocating it generally for that reason. The danger is not so much in giving too much at that time as in not knowing when to stop, as during the dark days of winter the plants are easily surfeited.

I would suggest that you apply sheep manure at the rate of a 3-inch potful to the row, halfway across a 5-foot bench. Dried blood is also a splendid article to use applied in slightly smaller quantities. A dose of each, a month apart, might be just what your plants want. After that you will have to be guided by weather conditions and the apparent needs of the plants. B.

A BAD CASE OF RUST.

I am enclosing some carnation leaves which seem to be affected with rust. Please tell me whether that is really the trouble and also state what is the best remedy. J. W.—Minn.

Judging from the specimens submitted, you have a bad case of rust on your hands. The first thing to do is to pick off the diseased leaves; then spray with Bordeaux mixture, which I have found valuable in checking this disease. Dispense with overhead watering or syringing, unless you find it necessary in fighting spider. Give all the ventilation consistent with weather conditions and follow a moderate course of culture. A. F. J. B.

Geraniums

LEAF-BLIGHT ON GERANIUMS.

Under separate cover we are sending you some leaves that were sent us by one of our customers. Can you tell us what is the trouble with them?

A. N. K.—Minn.

The canna leaf was so much dried up that it was impossible to tell what had affected it. The geranium foliage was attacked by leaf-blight. This fungoid growth, when it appears outside, is usually caused by damp, muggy and sunless climatic conditions. Dry, sunny weather usually improves the plants. If the trouble is serious, it may be somewhat relieved by one or two sprayings of Bordeaux mixture or Fungine, applied on a warm day when the foliage is dry. Any badly diseased plants would better be burned, to prevent the trouble spreading. C. W.

PROPAGATING OUTDOOR PLANTS.

Will you kindly describe the best method of rooting field-grown geranium cuttings? Would it be advisable to give them a gentle bottom heat when first put in sand? Any advice will be appreciated. J. G. B.—Mass.

Outdoor cuttings this season are unusually soft. After making them, let them lie on a bench over night. They may then look a little dry, but the drying out makes them less liable to damp off. Cuttings do not need any bottom heat at this season; in winter they prefer it. Root them in clean, sharp sand. Place them either in a cutting bench, or, if preferred, in flats. The cuttings can go in quite thickly. A flat 12x24 inches will contain 120 to 150 cuttings. Soak after planting; then water only moderately until the cuttings are rooted. Pot off before the roots become too long. C. W.

STEM-ROT ON GERANIUMS.

I am enclosing some rooted cuttings of geraniums, many of which were rotting above ground. Is this a contagious disease? Can you suggest a remedy? The cuttings are some I bought. Those I have grown from my own stock do not seem to be affected, although the conditions are the same. C. A. P.—Me.

I think the cause of the cuttings damping off has been that they were allowed to stand too long a period in the cutting bench before reaching you and the stem-rot probably developed there. In potting up any of those bought in cuttings, do not use soil containing decayed manure unless it is well rotted. Give the plants the fullest light possible and water sparingly until they are established. Avoid burying the stems, when potting, to any greater depth than they had been in the cutting bench. C. W.

DUTCH BULBS

AMERICAN-GROWN BULBS.

Experiments in Northern Tennessee.

The last season we carried further our experiments in bulb growing at the Hillcrest School Farm, where bulbs are grown for the trade. Thanks to the liberality of several of the seed houses, we had a better assortment of bulbs for these experiments than ever before. The bulbs were not planted, with the exception of a few, till after January 1, and, owing to the unusually dry winter and spring, the season did not permit a fair test. Yet there was such a measure of success as to enable us to form conclusions which, we believe, will be of value to the trade.

Last season's results in the forcing of home-grown bulbs add greatly to the value of our experiments. We planted approximately an acre and a half of the bulbs commonly known as Dutch, planting them on heavy, yellow clay soil that had been manured well with barnyard manure at least twice, and used in gardening two or three seasons. Part of the land had received three annual dressings of manure and so was in a reasonably good state of fertility. Most of it would have been classed as rather poor clay loam. One small plot had been used as a dumping place for both wood and coal ashes for several years and had afterward been well manured and tilled. The work was done with the hope of demonstrating that bulbs can be produced in this country at a profitable figure and yet compete with imported stock. The experiments have been carried on in a small way for from five to seven years, but not to any extent till the last two years. Last season's tests were more than twice as extensive as previously.

The bulbs were all planted in drills, much as we set onion sets, and the rows were planted forty inches apart, so as to allow horse cultivation in the same way as with corn. The bulbs planted were either surplus bulbs that had deteriorated considerably, or were small offsets broken from double-nosed bulbs, and so would not have been salable at any price. A few were bulbs that we had grown two or more years, selling each season the mature bulb and planting the small offsets. Of course these did better by far than the others. A few were mature bulbs of our own growing and were planted in September, when all should have been planted to give them a fair chance, and it is from these that we feel warranted in drawing our conclusions.

Early Hyacinth Blooms.

Five years ago we planted a few offsets in mixture, bulblets no larger than a half-inch in diameter, taken in the latter part of January from the base of regular bulbs that were yet unsold. These have matured into full-grown bulbs and were forced or else bloomed outdoors this season. In the house they proved ten days to two weeks earlier than imported stock and had as good blooms. As we do not grow pot or cut flowers commercially, of course these tests were of only a few pots and hence the results were inconclusive. Outdoor stock of this lot, and another lot of about 500 Distinction planted three years ago, not only bloomed fully ten days before the imported stock, but produced better spikes and more of them.

The bulbs produced are not so beautifully symmetrical as the imported stock, probably because they were grown in clay instead of sand, but they are not diseased in any way. They are of good size and as solid as any bulbs we have ever seen. We have not followed the Holland practices to cause them to reproduce rapidly, but have allowed them to increase naturally. We are not yet convinced that they can be produced cheaply enough to com-all be propagated here, but not with equal ease and profit. The parrots and the double earlies are the hardest to grow well here, and we doubt whether they can ever be profitably produced in this part of the country. They divide readily enough, but we have not yet hit on a method of culture that brings mature bulbs freely.

Varied Results from Tulips.

The single earlies do much better and some of them are easily produced. We believe that as soon as we learn their requirements better, they can be made profitable. We have not forced any of them as yet and so are not prepared to tell of their value to florists. For bedders they are fully equal to imported bulbs.

Byblooms, breeders and Darwins, with the newer Rembrandts, can all be grown readily here and they seem to increase rapidly without any special treatment. They bloom earlier than the imported stock. The bulbs are of excellent size and appearance.

The cottage garden sorts, especially the Gesnerianas, are the easiest of all to handle here. They seem to stand any amount of neglect and will still bloom and even increase. We have one lot that have been planted in the grass for five years and they are still blooming fairly well. Where cultivated they increase rapidly and produce better bulbs than the Holland-grown stock.

Good Success with Narcissi.

Narcissi have constituted the greater part of our stock for trial thus far, and if there is any variety of these, outside of the polyanthus sorts, that is not hardy enough to stand our winters or that cannot be grown here as well as abroad, we have not found it. In a test we have grown nearly 200 varieties, and all do well.

Emperor, Empress, Sir Watkin, princeps, Barrii conspicuus, the Poetaz varieties, Golden Spur and the different varieties of poeticus have been grown long enough and in large enough quantities to prove that they are a success from every point of view, and that they are both earlier and better for forcing than stock produced in a colder and more northern climate. Besides, they can be ready to plant in June, thus insuring their earliness. In the latter part of May we had already begun digging the first bulbs, and in June latest varieties were entirely dormant.

None of our bulbs have been given the careful tillage they receive abroad, and when they receive this the results should be even better. It has been our plan at first to grow them under more adverse circumstances, to be sure that they were a success. We predict that before many years a large part of the bulbs that are used in this country will be grown in America.

This year, for the first time, we gave pete with regular Holland-grown stock, but we are convinced that they can be grown successfully in this country, and that where there is a market for the blooms, or where it is desirable to get bulbs that can be forced earlier than the Holland stock, they can be grown profitably.

For four years we have conducted a small varietal test of something over 100 varieties and we find that many of these lack vitality and do not take to our climate and soil. Others seem perfectly at home here. Fortunately, those that do the best here are among the best for florists' use.

We have grown tulips of all of the races, or nearly so, and find they can

Paper Whites a trial. We had feared they would not stand the winter and so did not plant them until January, so that they would not start too soon. They bloomed satisfactorily and the bulbs that we dug a few months ago looked well. Of course, we shall not be able to tell their value before the blooming season. We had a small test made farther south last winter and the results have been satisfactory. We are sure that along the gulf coast these bulbs can be produced as well as in France. We shall give them another and more extensive trial here next season.

To sum up, we believe that most of the bulbs we are now importing from Holland can be grown in the southern half of the United States with profit.

We believe that these bulbs will bloom at least as early as those grown in southern France and sold at a fancy price. We believe that if these bulbs are allowed to increase naturally, instead of being propagated to the limit, we shall soon have healthier bulbs, that will give better results in the hands of the people, and hence the demand will increase.

WADSWORTH'S INTENSITY.

Intensity still is hard to beat when a crimson mum is wanted—as hard to beat as the wearers of the Crimson proved to be for the Blue this year—you know the trade in New England grows Intensity for the followers of Harvard's eleven. William P. Marshall, who sent the photograph reproduced on this page, alleges that this house of Intensity was so fine it was one of the reasons why Harvard beat Yale in the big final game this season and we must concede him the point, because it is certain most of the flowers were on the grounds at the time play was called.

This house of Intensity was grown by R. E. Wadsworth & Co., at Northboro, Mass. The illustration will be of interest, not only because it shows the best all-round commercial mum of its color, but because it shows that in common with many other growers Wadsworth & Co. had to deal with an unusually tall growth this season, probably due to the cool summer.

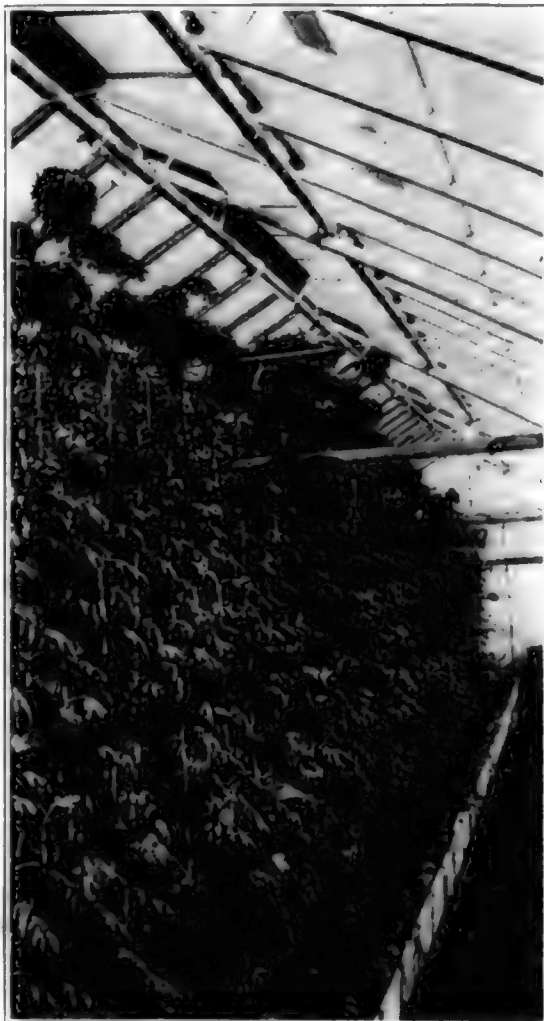

MUMS IN THE SOUTHLAND.

Far south, on placid Tampa bay, Florida, chrysanthemums grow in the open all the year round under a semi-tropical sun. The grower in the southern part of the Peninsula state is no respecter of seasons. No need for greenhouses has he. Mums can be propagated there at little expense, but this does not indicate that their culture in Florida is a mere song—no trouble at all. As everyone knows, the chrysanthemum is a cool-growing plant and balks when placed under a hot sun like that of Florida. Moreover, the state abounds with all manner of insects and pests, the green fly and aphid being the most destructive.

Arthur Dervaes, of Tampa, however, has overcome the disadvantages attending the culture of mums in semi-tropical Florida, and sends as proof of his success a view of some of his mums as they appeared in October. The illustration is reproduced on page 48. In his letter Mr. Dervaes states that "the photograph was taken October 20, when fifty per cent of the mums were in full bloom, ready to be cut, and the remainder due a week or fifteen days later. As can be seen in the picture, there is no shortness of stem, for some of the mums are as tall as my daughter, Flora, who stands four feet six inches. At the time of writing, November 5, all the blooms have been cut and disposed of by the local florists. During the last six months prices have ranged from $2 to $3 per dozen.

"From start to finish, everything is done in the open. The insects and plant diseases in Florida are numerous, but by frequent sprayings of tobacco extracts and clear water, the danger is considerably diminished. We do not have to build greenhouses, nor do we need any heat, for there is always plenty of that, often too much, in fact. We may not attain the perfection of bloom and foliage that the growers of the north and east and west do, but the queen of autumn flowers certainly can be grown successfully in the most southerly part of cotton land, and at little expense."

A Fine Bench of Intensity.

CHRYSANTHEMUM ALICE DAY.

Among the new mums staged by C. H. Totty at the fall shows were an unusual number of sports. Of chief interest, of course, was the yellow sport of William Turner, on account of the showing its parent has made. This variety is identical in every respect with the parent, the only difference being in color, which is a light yellow. If the color was a little deeper it would be better and, as often happens, in this case doubtless in a year or two the deeper color will manifest itself. Others of his set were a white sport of Wells' Late Pink, that has been called Elvia Seoville, and a blush-white sport of Patty.

A commercial variety that was certificated by the C. S. A., both in New York and Philadelphia, is Alice Day, a white of good form and absolutely pure in color. It is said every bud produces a perfect flower and it comes in from October 10 to 20. It is a seedling raised in Oregon and therefore can qualify without any hyphen, under the heading of "Pure American." It is illustrated on page 48.

CALANTHE VEITCHII.

Will you please give me full cultural directions for Calanthe Veitchii, stating what material to use for potting, the temperature required, when and how long they should be rested and when they flower? P. V.—Pa.

Calanthe Veitchii flowers in December and January. If kept in a moderately cool house, the flowers may remain in good condition until nearly the end of February. After flowering, the plants should be kept in a warm, dry place until signs of growth appear at the bases of the last season's bulbs, when the bulbs should be placed in flats of sharp sand with some finely chopped moss mixed with it, and started in a warm, moist house. Spray lightly once a day, but do not water the sand unless it gets quite dry. As soon as the roots start to push out, potting must be done. One good-sized bulb is sufficient for a 5-inch pot; three will go in a 7-inch half pot or deep pan.

A suitable compost consists of one-half fibrous loam with the finer particles shaken out, one-fourth dried cow manure and one-fourth lumpy peat, coarse sand and broken charcoal. This insures a porous compost. Firm the bulbs well in the pots or pans. Water sparingly until the roots are active, then gradually increase the supply. When the pots are full of active roots, apply liquid cow manure once a week. Reduce the water supply as the leaves start to decay and keep them quite dry while in bloom. Calanthes need a brisk heat, not below 60 degrees at any time, and in summer it can run up to 90 or 100 degrees. They dislike violent changes in temperature and do their best when a little fire heat, just sufficient to warm the pipes, can be given what order it belongs. I have been calling it a periwinkle.

J. C. M.—N. D.

The plant is a variety of impatiens. As no flowers were enclosed, I cannot tell which variety it is, but probably it is Sultani. According to some botanists, this belongs to the natural order Geraniaceæ, but others place it in Balsaminaceæ. The name impatiens, Latin for impatient, was undoubtedly given to these plants on account of the tendency of the ripe seed pods to fly open and scatter their contents when touched.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

Conditions up to December 4 were fair, with a good supply. The end of the week was featured by a heavy demand for the better grades of stock for the first "Monday German," the formal opening of the social season in this city. The demand for stock was confined to the usual line, such as Beauties, valley, cattleyas, fancy roses and novelties. Beauties were fairly plentiful and sold well. Valley was in good demand and cattleyas sold well, even at a high figure. The rose supply was hardly sufficient. Fancy red roses were in special demand, as were fancy pink and white. Killarney was plentiful but rather off color. Novelties in colors, such as Ophelia, Ward and Sweetheart, all were in good demand.

There was an unsupplied demand for gardenias, but few of good quality were to be had. Peas sold well, but there was not a large supply. Violets were only in average demand. Cypripediums were slow movers, even at a low figure. The mum crop is getting smaller in size, quantity and demand. There was a surplus of white. Other colors sold up fairly well, but prices were nothing fancy. The supply of

MEALY BUG ON FERNS.

What will kill mealy bug on ferns? We have about 5,000 Bostons, Roosevelts, etc. We got them only lately. Most of the plants are free from bugs, while others have three or four in the tips of the fronds. We do not know where we got them, but they are here.

T. J.—Pa.

Dipping or spraying with nicotine solution is the best remedy for mealy bug on ferns; the solution to consist of one part of forty per cent nicotine to 500 parts of water, by measure.

If the plants are in pots, dipping would be the most satisfactory treatment, the plants to be laid down on the bench after the dip, so as to prevent the solution from draining down into the soil; also that they may be protected from the sun for at least twenty-four hours. If the stock is planted out, it would be necessary to depend upon spraying, this method being less satisfactory, however, from the fact that it is more difficult to reach all the insects and that it would probably require several sprayings to get the desired result.

carnations is not so large as usual, but large enough to supply the demand.

Various Notes.

Mrs. Elizabeth Lehr, wife of William F. Lehr, a retired florist, died at the home of her daughter, 19 East Twenty-first street, December 3, at the age of 84 years. Mrs. Lehr was the mother of William G. and Henry Lehr, both well known members of the local trade. The funeral services were held December 6 and interment was in Cedar Hill cemetery, close to her former home in Anne Arundel county.

C. E. Akehurst & Sons have recently put in service a handsome delivery truck of large capacity. The body has paneled sides and is finished in olive green. It is used between the firm's greenhouse establishment at White Marsh and this city, and is the best appearing truck in the service of the trade.

Pierce & Co. report a brisk business for the German. Novelties, both in flowers and arrangements, were featured by them. Bouvardia, yellow marguerites and cornflowers were some of the novelties used. A light delivery car with special body was recently put in service.

Samuel Feast & Sons had a heavy demand for Beauties and cattleyas, as well as for the more staple flowers.

E. A. Seidewitz is using many Primula obconica and cyclamens in his window decorations.

John Cook had a heavy business on roses and valley for the German. Some good Francis Scott Key are being cut.

Henry Bestér, of Hagerstown, was a recent visitor.

The Hamilton Flower Shop is showing some good cut poinsettias, some of the bracts measuring fourteen to fifteen inches across.

Mrs. Charles Klutch, aged 41 years, died at her home on Gittings avenue, December 1, after a short illness of pneumonia. She is survived by her husband and six children. The funeral services were held December 3 from her home and were largely attended. A large number of handsome floral offerings were received, which speaks well for the esteem in which she was held by her many friends.

Mrs. M. P. Johnston, in addition to having a good share of the trade for the German, was called on to decorate the private car of President Williard of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, for the conveyance to New York of the body of Vice-president Bacon, who died December 2 in a local hospital. Palms were used extensively in connection with cut mums.

The next club meeting will be held December 13. Many interesting topics will be up for discussion and it is hoped every member will be on hand.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

Business was good last week, following, as it did, a brisk Thanksgiving trade. Colder weather has set in and conditions appear more seasonable. This should have a good effect on trade in general. According to the local growers, flowers for Christmas will be fairly plentiful, excepting carnations, which are shortening in quantity. There is a great quantity of mums on

WHO'S WHO IN THE TRADE—AND WHY

FRED BREITMEYER.

THERE are a lot of reasons why Fred Breitmeyer is "who" in the trade. In the first place, perhaps, is the fact that he is proprietor of one of the oldest and probably the largest greenhouse establishment in the state of Michigan. And, at this time when Carnation Philadelphia is making good, there is the fact that he was one of the three men who pinned their faith in that variety, invested their money and won out. But the fact that counted first of all was that he is one of the sons of John Breitmeyer, a brother of Philip, and a good fellow. Few florists visit Detroit without calling at the Breitmeyer store and running out to Mt. Clemens on the interurban for a look at the Breitmeyer greenhouses. That's what makes a man "who" in this trade.

the market, especially in yellow, and it is hard to move them. They are sold at the buyer's figure. Good Yellow Eaton, Timothy Eaton, Patty, Pacific Supreme, Golden Queen and Bonnaffon are seen. The rose supply was somewhat heavier than that of the week previous and it satisfied all demands. Ophelia, Sunburst, Ward and Francis Scott Key are of fine quality and each variety possesses good foliage. The demand for violets is increasing a little. They are good and fragrant. Orchids and gardenias are not prominent. Valley is extra good and plentiful. Bouvardia is slackening up some, but sells easily. Mignonette is large and good and is found useful in basket work together with yellow and white daisies, which are plentiful. Paper White narcissi are coming in now and sell well. Roman hyacinths are here and sell nicely. Carnations are good and are good sellers, but they are becoming scarcer. Easter and calla lilies are scarce, but there is not much call for them.

Potted plants sell well and a good collection is found, including begonias, Romans, primulas, cyclamens, poinsettias, etc. Ferns and palms have been selling unusually well.

Various Notes.

Sincere sympathy is extended to Ransford W. Wilson in the loss of his wife, whose death occurred suddenly November 28, at the age of 36. A baby boy was born two weeks previously and both mother and child were doing well. The end came suddenly and unexpectedly. The funeral took place from the home, 825 Hudson avenue, December 1, and interment was made at Mount Hope cemetery. There were many beautiful flower pieces, which included those from the three stores and from several of the florists.

A. Wermuth is offering a large quantity of Boston ferns. These are in fine condition and should find ready customers.

Visitors last week included George Arnold, of Ensenore, N. Y.; Julius Berg, of Lion & Co., New York; W. A. Stearns, of the Sefton Mfg. Co., Chicago.

H. B. Stringer has been ill during the last few days with a heavy cold.

E. R. Fry has an attractive looking window at his West avenue store. Large baskets of flowers and birch boxes of plants form a pretty decoration. His large McCray refrigerator was installed last week.

The James Vick's Sons store is showing a large collection of Boston ferns. An additional attraction is the colored photograph plates, framed, with an electric light from the back. The pictures are good and distinct reproductions of their asters. It is a novel advertisement and attracts much attention.

H. E. Wilson has placed a new counter icebox in his store, which will be used exclusively for roses.

The Rochester Floral Co. had a unique window decoration for the week end. It advertised flowers by telegraph by means of telegraph poles strung with wires from each corner of the window. In the background was a map of the United States, with ribbons attached from a small sign bearing the name of the company. Several original telegrams and night letters were shown.

George T. Boucher reports satisfactory business. His Thanksgiving trade was better than ever. He is installing a large refrigerator built to order by the McCray Refrigerator Co., which contains all modern improvements and is about the first of its kind on the market.

George Cramer is in the employ of S. A. Anderson, of Buffalo. H. J. H.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

The first week of the new month opened well. Business shows a continued though slight improvement, for November was satisfactory. The cold weather has curtailed stock to some extent and while there are more than enough chrysanthemums to fill all orders, the supply has slackened up and better prices prevail for good stock. Cattleyas are again to be had in small quantities. The price remains at from $7.50 to $9 per dozen. Roses and carnations clean up well daily. The former are now bringing from $3 per hundred up, with a marked scarcity of stock in the cheaper grades. There has been a large amount of wedding and society work of a high grade, calling for large supplies of roses. Hadley, Mock, Moorfield Storey, Sweetheart, Radiance and American Beauty have been in heavy demand and good prices have prevailed on choice stock. American Beauty roses are bringing from $3 to $5 per dozen. Both the local and northern crops are excellent.

Gardenias are improving both as to size and quantity, and are in good demand. There is an oversupply of double violets and while the prices on these and the good single violets of local production are quoted at from 60 cents to $1 per hundred, yet doubles are to be had in large quantities at far below the former price. Valley has been selling well. Paper Whites have made their appearance. Sweet peas are being received in larger quantities and move fairly well.

Various Notes.

The announcement of the desire of President Wilson that no gifts be sent on the occasion of his marriage to Mrs. Edith Bolling Galt will mean that the florists of Washington will lose the large amount of business which would ordinarily result from such an event. It is said to have been the intention of the Latin-American diplomats, the heads of embassies and legations to accompany their letters of congratulations to Mrs. Galt with flowers. This mode of recognition was carried out to a large extent on the occasion of the marriage of Miss Jessie W. Wilson. At that time the attaches of the White House faced a problem as to what to do with the large pieces that were sent.

The big float of the Gude Bros. Co. was one of the features of the parade held in connection with electrical prosperity week in Washington. A platform twenty feet in length was built on a motor truck. The bottom of the truck, including the wheels, was covered with colored bunting and from the front of the machine there was an arch, covered with flowers which extended over the entire platform. That part of the truck back of the chauffeur's seat was used to advertise the firm's telegraph business. Two poles were set up with wires stretched between them. On the platform were a number of boxes, some of which were open at the ends, showing the contents. A double sign visible from both sides of the machine read, "Flowers by Telegraph Everywhere," while another sign stood easel fashion above the space between the chauffeur's and footman's seats, and bore the name and address of the concern and its crest. All of the signs were of blue glass and electrically illuminated. The float was not entered in competition, but the firm was awarded honorable mention and a letter to that effect was sent it by the committee of judges.

Another attractive float was that entered by J. H. Small & Sons. One of their large delivery wagons was trimmed with bunting and roses and carnations. The truck was outlined with miniature electric lights and strings of these were hung in festoons among the flowers.

A large number of Philadelphians were among the visitors in Washington last week. Those seen at the stores were I. Rosnosky, representing the H. F. Michell Co.; James F. Smith; Joseph J. Goudy, representing Henry A. Dreer, Inc.; S. H. Bayersdorfer.

George L. Freeman, of Fall River, Mass., called on a number of the trade last week. Mr. Freeman states that this has been a good year with him and that his business in the west has been satisfactory.

Miss Frances Kingsbury, who is employed at the F street store of Fred H. Kramer, was declared the winner of the beauty contest held at Laurel, Md., of which place she is a resident, and as a result is wearing a handsome watch, the prize offered in the contest by the Mount Rainier, Md., Times.

The Gude Bros. Co. had the decorative work incident to the national convention of gas men at Hotel Willard last week. The eighty-one booths were decorated with flowers and there were a like number of vases, which were refilled daily, alternately with Glory of Cincinnati begonias and pink cyclamens. Large quantities of chrysanthemums, a number of standards of American Beauty roses and huge palms completed the display. On the night of the reception there was sent to each lady who accompanied a delegate, and there were 151, a box of specimen Timothy Eaton and Nonin chrysanthemums.

FLOWERS FOR THE FAMOUS.

Now that the grand opera and concert seasons are in full blast in the larger cities of the country, some of the luckier florists will be commissioned to make up bouquets for admirers of the performing artists. An evening at the opera rarely passes without some of the vocalists being the gracious recipients of bouquets.

A Gotham florist, who mixes brains with his business and is highly appreciative of originality in designs, recently was commissioned to prepare a decoration for an ardent admirer of Josef Stransky, the distinguished violinist of the Metropolitan Grand Opera organization. Our craftsman put on his thinking cap and produced an arrangement that was distinctive because of its beauty and peculiar fitness as a gift to a master of the violin. The design is illustrated on this page.

The piece was nine feet high and created a sensation in the auditorium when it was presented to the artist. As can be seen in the picture, the decoration consisted of a horn of plenty, made of gold leaves. The mouth of the cornucopia was filled with 300 roses of all colors. This part of the decoration was further embellished by broad silk ribbon, on which "Josef Stransky" and the date of the occasion were richly embroidered. The master touch of the artist-florist, however, is in the violin shown at the right and below the horn of plenty. This was made of bronze pompons and small yellow roses. The violin strings and bow were not forgotten by the designer, who was Adolph Kottmiller.

NEWS, NOTES AND COMMENTS

Salem, Mass.—Sheridan H. Hall recently was married, his bride being Miss Irene E. Cutting, of Leominster.

Yarmouthport, Mass.—Samuel W. Hallett is advertising Christmas stock in the local paper. The early bird gets the business.

Evanston, Ill.—A fire in the boiler room of the greenhouses of John Becker, 1527 Washington street, recently damaged the building to the extent of $300.

Lawrence, Mass.—William C. Campbell has completely remodeled his store. The lower portion of the walls has been covered with beveled mirrors, which give the store a larger appearance. Above the mirrors is latticework, upon which artificial Rambler roses are entwined. The window has been improved to permit of a better and larger display of stock.

Madison, S. D.—The W. R. Renner greenhouses, the first and only greenhouses in the town, recently were completed and opened to the public. The establishment consists of two greenhouses, an office building and a service house. All are wired for electric lights. Mr. Renner, who was unusually successful as a farmer, has employed a capable grower and florist to attend to the technical end of the business.

Columbus, O.—It is said that a half dollar that he gave to a "down and outer" five years ago in Seattle, Wash., may bring a fortune to Edward C. O'Neill, 25 years old, who is employed in Wilson's Seed Store, 116 South High street. According to a message in a bottle washed ashore in Puget sound, the recipient of O'Neill's charity died alone at sea in a launch that sank during a gale, his last act being to bequeath the young man Alaskan mining claims which, the scrawl said, are worth $250,000!

Greensboro, N. C.—A killing frost the second week in November bid good-bye to outdoor chrysanthemums and other outdoor flowers. Business Thanksgiving was the best florists hereabout have had during a similar period for several years. Mums and all other flowers sold well. The demand for red carnations was heavy. Florists are beginning to realize that with the aid of advertising, Thanksgiving business can be made to pay unusually well. The Van Lindley Co. furnished the flowers and was in charge of decorations for the Cannon-Lambeth wedding at Concord. This was one of the most elaborate weddings that have taken place in this state for a long time. The decorations consisted of smilax, palms and other plants, with white chrysanthemums and pink Killarney roses. The outlook for Christmas business is good.

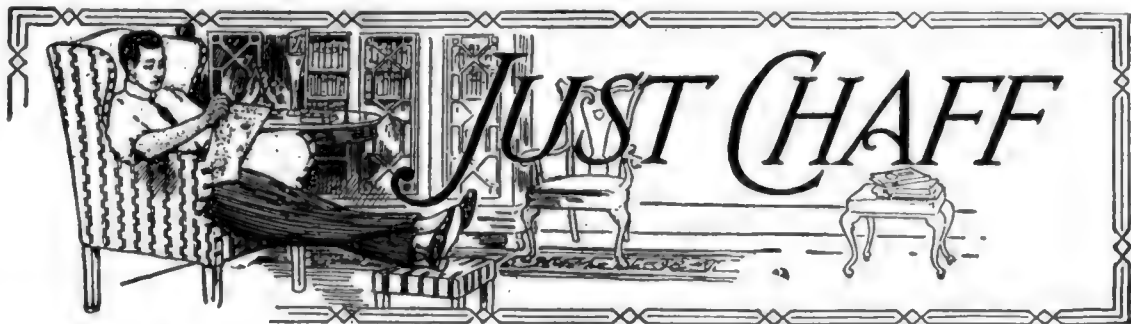

Houston, Tex.—W. W. Coles, of Kokomo, Ind., made a creditable display at our flower show, but his name was left off the list through error. He made a magnificent display of carnations, roses and chrysanthemums and contributed greatly to the success of our show.

Mound City, Ill.—H. Hillerich has acquired a good reflexed early pink mum said to be a chance seedling raised by one of his customers, for whom he has named it Mrs. Trampert. He is considering the advisability of disseminating it, several growers having asked for stock.

Rahway, N. J.—John W. Salig calls attention to the practice of certain growers who mail wholesale quotations on postal cards. He says he knows of instances where these have fallen into the hands of those who were not entitled to the information, to the detriment of all engaged in the business.

Greenville, S. C.—The Graceland Greenhouses, which are owned by the Greenville Cemetery Association and take their name from their location opposite Graceland cemetery, are developing a considerable wholesale business, especially in ferns. J. Melvin Clark is the managing director of the corporation and F. F. Gilliam the manager of the greenhouse department.

Champaign, Ill.—C. F. Swayger has been made head of the gardening department of the Illinois Central railroad. The I. C. has just finished rebuilding four large greenhouses. The site on which they formerly stood has been leased to the Alexander Lumber Co., which will erect storage houses thereon. The removed greenhouses have been set on brick foundations and furnished with an entirely new heating system. The I. C. also has a greenhouse in Louisville, Ky., in charge of George Hillebrand, division gardener.

A Conundrum.

Why is the florists' business like an apple tree?

Ans.: Because it is subject to June drop. V. A. A.

During the Dog Days.

Florist: "Is this the Weather Bureau? How about a shower tonight?"

Prophet: "Don't ask me. If you need one, take it."—Chaparral.

Learning by Experience.

A young lady, a school teacher, came in and ordered a funeral spray. I gave her a card on which to write her sympathies and to enclose with the flowers. She wrote, "With congratulations, from Miss G—."

Since then we have kept printed cards reading, "With sympathy from —," for patrons' use. M. G. H.

"A True Story."

One day I was showing some ladies through the greenhouse and passed the bed of smilax.

"And now what is this?"

"Smilax."

"And what is it for? There are no flowers on it."

"We use it for greens."

"Well, I do declare! And how do you cook it?" M. G. H.

Sure Thing.

Ethel: Let's step into the florist's and order our masquerade costume.

Dora: The florist's!

Ethel: Why not? He has the finest line of bloomers in town. V. A. A.

Western Weight.

An easterner who had bought a farm in California had heard of his neighbor's talent for growing large potatoes, so he sent his farm hand over to get 100 pounds.

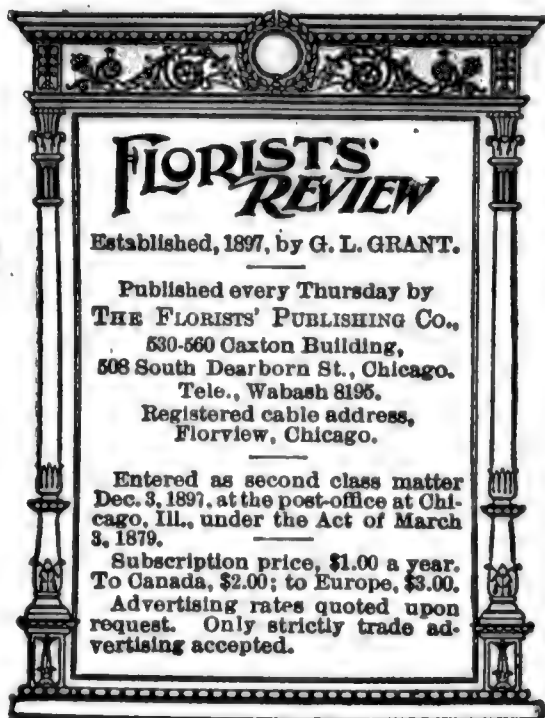

"You go back home," answered the talented farmer to the messenger, "and tell your boss that I won't cut a potato for anyone."—Ladies' Home Journal.

One for the Solicitor.

Samuel Slowe is an old-time florist. One day young Johnson, representing a live newspaper, came to him with a proposition to increase the business. He listened in silence for a few moments, but as the young man waxed eloquent, he lost patience.

"Don't I know every one of the tricks of your trade?" said Mr. Slowe, with considerable heat. "Do you think I have run a florist's business for twenty years for nothing?"

"Well," replied the solicitor, calmly, "I shouldn't be at all surprised."

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

It is time for the growers to begin to figure on what they will plant for next season.

THE man who follows mums with sweet peas wastes valuable time if he does not have his peas started in pots.

DON'T put the chrysanthemum stock plants "any old place" and expect best results from next season's propagation. Give the stock plants a chance.

CONDITIONS today are quite different from a year ago. Then the future was regarded with uncertainty; today there is general confidence and a big Christmas business is regarded as assured.

GLADIOLUS blooms have appeared in the wholesale markets much earlier than usual this season and large quantities are nearly ready to cut. It looks as though the gladiolus may have joined the sweet pea as an all-the-year flower.

Those who are interested in the continued growth of The Review will note that this is the largest Christmas Number thus far issued. For its printing 12,480 pounds of paper were required, or six and a quarter tons!

EXTREMELY high prices do not make for a large volume of flower sales, but living prices for the florist are not necessarily high prices when viewed from the standpoint of the public. General conditions seem to warrant a concerted effort on the part of the trade to put all prices on a profit-making basis.

HONORABLE MENTION.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper. Among those who have this week enrolled themselves for more than one year in advance are:

TWO YEARS.

Bollwinkle Seed Co., New Orleans, La.
Grigsby, A. R., Lakewood, O.
Kelly, Fred M., Kokomo, Ind.
Knechtel, L. S., Athol, Mass.
Teufel, Gottlieb, Adrian, Mich.
Nordine, Chas. G., Lake City, Minn.
Burhop, Walter, Maywood, Ill.

The Review stops coming when the subscription runs out. The green notice with the last copy tells the story; no bills are run up; no duns are sent.

GENERAL BUSINESS IS BOOMING.

Business in the United States last week, measured by the number and amount of checks drawn on banks, reached a greater pitch of activity than was ever before experienced.

Reports from all sections of the country telling of freight blockades on the railroads, enormous output of factories, mines and mills, and liberal purchases in advance of the Christmas holidays, established a pretty general tale of prosperity every day, but it remained for December 4, when returns were compiled of the summary of checks drawn on banks and passing through clearing houses, to show that the immense volume of trade had increased the drawing of checks to an unparalleled amount.

The total clearings for the country last week, according to the Financial Chronicle, were $4,936,000,000. More than half these clearings were at New York city, with $2,620,000,000. Chicago showed the next largest total, with $318,000,000.

In comparison with every other week of American history, the checks drawn showed an increase. The gain over a year ago equaled sixty per cent. At New York the increase was nearly 100 per cent, owing to important financial operations.

With general business so prosperous there is no question that the people will buy flowers.

BOSTON GETS GLADIOLIANS.

The vote of the members of the American Gladiolus Society, on the place to hold the seventh annual meeting and show, resulted as follows: Boston, 56; Cleveland, 12; Rochester, 9.
H. Youell, Sec'y.

PENNSYLVANIA TRADE WORKERS.

The recently issued annual report of Pennsylvania's secretary of internal affairs gives the following horticultural statistics concerning employment in that state:

Gardeners, florists, fruit growers and nurserymen, male, 6,283; female, 321.

Garden, greenhouse, orchard and nursery laborers, male, 8,645; female, 272.

IMMORTELLS.

The steamer from Marseilles that arrived at New York November 28 brought 178 cases of immortelles, 95 cases for H. Bayersdorfer & Co., 8 cases for the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., 63 cases for the M. Rice Co., and 12 cases consigned to a forwarder.

GOLDFISH AND BIRDS.

Among the scarce items this year, which interest an increasing number of retail florists, are goldfish and canaries. It has been several seasons since the supply of goldfish has been large enough to call for an effort to dispose of them and this year the war has reduced the supply of canaries. The best houses handle only imported stock, of German origin, and one of the largest dealers states that the supply in America today is not more than twenty-five per cent as large as it usually is at this date. The matter is of interest in the trade because so many retail florists found fish and then birds appropriate and profitable side lines.

THIS WEEK'S COVER.

The Review's special number covers almost always are a subject of admiring comment. The first question asked usually is, "Who is she?" but the second thought commonly is, "Where do you get so many pictures of pretty girls with flowers appropriate to the season?" Perhaps no cover has made a greater hit than did the one on the Autumn Number, showing the movie star, Lillian Walker, visiting a subscriber's greenhouse; so with this Christmas Number the second of the screen favorite series is presented. It will obviate all necessity for the interrogation as to the lady's identity, as nearly all readers will recognize Mary Pickford as readily as they will recognize her roses, the most popular variety for Christmas gifts. "Where do you get them?" Well, as for that, it is popular report that Miss Pickford is the highest salaried person in the United States, so it can be left to the readers to imagine the fabulous sum that induced her to pose for the picture.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Under the stimulus of the continued cold weather and its attendant effects, such as increased demand and decreased supply, the Chicago market is extremely active. There is practically nothing with the exception of Easter lilies that does not move in a satisfactory way. The shipping business is more than usually brisk, and the scramble to secure, for out-of-town orders, some variety in particularly strong demand is extremely keen. The natural winter craving for life and color is markedly manifest in the call for flowers, red being the first choice in everything.

Choice Beauties are enjoying a good demand. In fact, everything in the way of a rose has been clearing during the last week. Some varieties, however, have cleared more rapidly than others. Russell, Milady, Richmond, Killarney Brilliant and Killarney have been too short to fill all orders. Milady and Richmond in particular have been in great demand. Ophelia, Sunburst and Hillingdon have sold well. The shorter grades have had the first call in all varieties. White roses, though not enjoying the popularity of the bright ones, have yet moved unusually well.

Carnations, which were in such abundant supply a week ago as to create a condition bordering on glut, have performed a right-about-face and now are not only clearing, but are in some varieties too short to meet the demand. As early as December 4, red carnations were at a premium. Now, orders requiring them are filled short as a matter of course.

Mums are still in the market and are selling well, but their numbers and appearance plainly indicate that the end of their season is upon them. Pompons are practically done for, though still available in moderate quantities. Violets have recovered wonderfully in the last week and both double and single are clearing satisfactorily. Valley is not scarce, but it is not more than sufficient to meet the demand. Gladioli and snapdragons are also making a good showing. Mignonette, too, is growing in favor. Sweet peas of excellent quality have little difficulty in selling at a fair price. Cattleyas remain scarce and in strong demand. Poinsettias have appeared and sell well. Easter lilies alone have failed to reach the buyers with their appeal and the large supply only serves to aggravate the case.

Mistletoe has made its appearance on the market. Plumosus, Sprenger and, in fact, all varieties of greens are proving good property these days.

The flowers for which it is most difficult to realize old-time prices are those principally used for corsage bouquets. It seems that fewer flowers than usual are being worn at the opera, for the increased call heretofore felt at the opening of the opera season has not manifested itself this year.

November Business.

Now that the wholesalers have had time to foot up the November totals and make comparisons, it appears that the month makes a showing almost as good as did October. While the increase is not so good in percentage, in many cases it was about as good in dollars, November ordinarily being a much bigger month than October. The month was in most cases the best November thus far recorded.

Taking October and November together, this market has only cause for satisfaction. In general, business has been the best ever known for the corresponding sixty days, not only beating last year's record but also that of 1913, which heretofore has stood as high-water mark.

Christmas Prospects.

The prospect for Christmas has become the principal subject for conversation in the market. There is no doubt that a large demand is to be met, a demand that nearly everyone expects will be larger than ever before.

The consensus of opinion is that there will be an adequate supply of stock. Of course there will not be enough red, but if there were there surely would be too much white. Beauties will not be so plentiful as in other years, but prices are to be started lower. On the other hand, there will be many times the quantity of long Russell, to take the place of medium Beauties and at a lower price. The wholesalers nearly all have come to the conclusion that, with so many cut flowers and, especially, so many pot plants as in recent years, the Christmas prices of roses have been too high and they are booking orders, except for certain varieties, at lower prices for the same goods or giving better goods for the same prices. It is hoped in this way to make a better average. The same is true of carnations, of which the supply is expected to at least equal last year and much exceed that of two years ago.

Cattleyas will be the only short item. The miscellaneous flowers always are abundant unless a shortage develops in one or more of the big staple items.

Of plants it seems quite certain the supply will be the largest ever. All the growers have their houses full and the weather has been such as to assist in getting them into fine shape. Many already have placed a large part of their stock.

Greens will not cut so much figure as usual, good holly and lycopodium being scarce.

Various Notes.

Commenting on the business situation, E. C. Amling says the attitude of the trade is just the opposite of a year ago: Then everyone was cautious, whereas today buyers are not afraid. Manager Michelsen says the Amling concern in the first sixty days of its business year, from October 1 to December 1, increased its sales a little more than $30,000 as compared with the same period of last year.

Another store has been opened at Ninety-second street and Commercial avenue by Sullivan Bros., 871 East Sixty-third street.

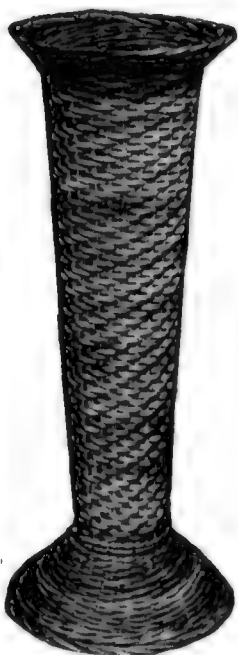

The family of Emil Buettner are doing their social duties via a new Marmion limousine that in the garage occupies the place of the Rambler that had made its hundred thousand miles. For lighter use Mr. Buettner has a Haynes touring car.

Among those who think Mrs. Russell the finest rose that ever happened one should not count E. Wienhoeber. While acknowledging its merit when perfect, Mr. Wienhoeber says it shows unfavorable weather conditions more than most roses, turns blue quickly and fails to open if cut in other than the right stage of development. He says the public buys the rose, all right, but notes the tendency to turn blue and any failure to open.

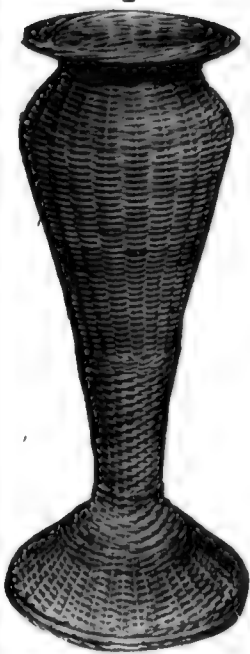

That the returns on American Beauty in the Chicago market have been steadily growing less and less for years is the showing made by the figures kept by Albert F. Amling, who declares he believes it has come to a point where it no longer pays to grow Beauty. But his company will not drop it just yet.

A retail store is to be opened at 1239 North Clark street by Victor Young. Mr. Young at one time was manager of the Clark street store of the Geo. Wittbold Co. and more recently was with Fred Ronsley, in the Westminster building. The fittings for the new shop will be designed and manufactured by Buchbinder Bros., of Circassian walnut with art glass.

It will take a really good white carnation to displace Matchless, according to N. J. Wietor, who says the houses of it show up particularly well just now at the establishment of Wietor Bros.

It is the belief of Erne & Klingel that the carnation is not so popular as a few years ago. To restore it, Charles Erne believes growers and retailers should strive to improve the keeping quality, so that the public always will get satisfaction.

Those interested in the Meyer & Dramm Co., Elmhurst, are all smiles these days. The reason is that the company has just begun to cut a crop of Killarney Brilliant that is expected to make December the best month in the history of the concern.

A new telephone switchboard is being installed in the store of the A. L. Randall Co., the capacity of the old one having been reached.

Red carnations were planted in larger quantity than usual this season at the Peter Reinberg establishment, the varieties numbering four: Beacon, Champion, The Herald and Blameuser's new one, Joy. At the greenhouses Champion, a Dorner production, is thought especially well of, but Felix Reichling, at the store, says The Herald is gaining many friends among out-of-town buyers because of exceptional keeping qualities.

The range of the National Plant & Flower Co., S. Freund, secretary, will be thoroughly remodeled in the spring and, if Christmas and Easter business comes up to expectations, more glass will be added during the summer. This was the C. V. Abeele place, at Sixty-first and Throop street.

A switchboard and five telephones will in the future facilitate the rapid conduct of business in the office and store of the John Kruchten Co. Two sound-proof telephone booths have been installed in the salesroom.

It is unfortunate that the regular meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club falls on the same night as the bowling tournament in which the club's team participates, December 9, but Captain Allie Zech has good hopes of creditable scores, even though the team works without its rooters.

The Ophelia rose has many boosters among the growers in and about Chicago. One of the most enthusiastic is Fred Hoerber, of Hoerber Bros. He thinks Ophelia is here to stay, for its delicate coloring renders it a popular flower with the buying public, and it has proved itself a prolific variety and a good shipper for his house.

The directors of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association will hold their first meeting in the association's new quarters in the Le Moyne building, December 14.

The Richmond rose has found another staunch champion in the person of Philip C. Schupp, manager of the J. A. Budlong wholesale cut flower house. For this time of the year he thinks its color is better than Beauty, and, in fact, it has no other rival in his affections than Milady rose.

After the performance he went to crank up and found that he was minus a perfectly good machine. December 3. They went to the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, to be used, so Bassett & Washburn understand, on orders for export to Europe. C. L. Washburn is well pleased with the reception the variety has received at the many shows to which it has been sent, and with the way mail orders for cuttings have been coming in.

Daniel Branch, 313 East Fifty-first street, has invented a non-oil-leaking cylinder ring for use in gasoline engines. He has not yet put it on the market, but fills a special order now and then. The rings are made in his shop back of the greenhouses.

C. W. McKellar indicates his belief that December will be the best month this market ever has known.

The number of estimates being made has compelled the American Greenhouse Mfg. Co., in the Masonic Temple, to secure a large additional room for its drafting department. P. L. McKee was at Redfield, Mich., last week and took an order from A. J. Stahelin for 800 boxes of glass for the new house to be built this season. The company is rapidly assembling the material at Maywood for the Amling contract, which has been increased to cover the complete range and service building, all except the boilers, for which Kroeschell Bros. Co. has the contract, as reported last week.

In the future, Poehlmann Bros. Co. will propagate its own rubber plants, according to August Poehlmann. The company recently has received a large shipment of French hydrangeas. Its Cattleya Trianae are in fine crop for Christmas.

At Winterson's Seed Store the annual job of winding green and making holly wreaths has been started.

To judge from the facial expressions of John and Joseph Ziska, Jr., of Joseph Ziska & Sons, there is nothing like being on the right side of a stiffening market. It is all in keeping one eye on the indicator when buying, they say.

Visitors.

C. W. Ward was in town several days last week, on his way to his home at Eureka, Cal., going via New Orleans. His new Cottage Gardens at Eureka soon will be as famous as the older one at Queens, and perhaps much in the same way, for Mr. Ward plans further the Eureka establishment, however, will be growing stock now imported, such as azaleas, rhododendrons, boxwood, etc. Mr. Ward also plans to have a try at producing hyacinth and tulip bulbs on a commercial scale. Many carloads of young stock already have arrived at Eureka, for growing on and propagating. After looking over this market, "Chicago surely is the place to see roses," said Mr. Ward.

PHILADELPHIA.The Market.

The week ending December 8 was active in the main, with a decidedly smaller supply of flowers. It began badly. The first snow of the season, December 2, appeared to take the life out of business, but the demand improved after that day and conditions now are much better. A comparison with business of last year is favorable, but business is hardly so brisk as it was two years ago at this time.

Carnations are decidedly scarce. The best flowers have advanced in price, as every wholesaler in the city feels the smaller supply. Those who had heavy stocks of chrysanthemums after Thanksgiving have worked them off; today it is difficult to get orders filled in full unless they are placed in advance. Even the late varieties are nearly over with most of the growers, although there will be some mums throughout this month.

Roses are increasing in supply; they sell well. The standard varieties go best in the short and medium grades. The novelties are the reverse of this, the fancy grades bringing fancy prices. Cattleyas are much more plentiful, of course at lower prices. Triana is coming into full crop. Cypridium are plentiful. Easter lilies have been selling well and there is activity in valley. Violets go rather slowly. Snapdragon has improved, a little long-stemmed stock being offered. Bouvardia and mignonette are popular, while greens have become a staple with every buyer.

North Wales, Pa., and Mrs. T. Hilles, from S. J. Reuter & Son, of Westerly, R. I. Zieger & Son, of Germantown, exhibited four vases of the finest double bouvardias ever seen here. The Cornwall Peach Orchard, of Cornwall, Pa., displayed a variegated carnation. The Michell silver cup was on view.

The debate of the evening was: "Is it Wise for the Producer to Depend Entirely on the Enterprise of the Retailer for Marketing His Products?" The affirmative was assigned to Charles H. Grakelow, admittedly one of our leading lights in debate; the negative to W. F. Therkildson. After a lively debate, the club voted it best not to depend absolutely on the retailer, but to help him create a demand for the product. The club also voted not to reduce the initiation fee, but the advocates of the reduction secured a 90-day suspension of the entrance tax. Victor I. Ridenour, Jacob C. Schmidt, Samuel Redstone, Henry F. Michell II and Frank B. Michell were elected to membership. Frank Farrell was elected to associate membership.

The New Twelve-Twenty.

Bids have been asked for the erection of a large building on the south side of Spring Garden street, west of Twelfth street. It will occupy the site of three buildings, Nos. 1220, 1222 and 1224. The new building is to be of concrete, six stories high and a basement. It will have a 54-foot front, be 100 feet deep and have about eighty feet of upright handsome appearance. The ground has been purchased and the building will be erected by Bernard Eschner, for the M. Rice Co. This is made necessary by the rapid growth of the M. Rice Co. business in florists' supplies, and will give the company three times its present space and, as Mr. Eschner claims, it will be the finest florists' supply building in the world when completed. November, Mr. Eschner says, was the largest month in the M. Rice Co. history, due, he thinks, to the success of its made-in-America goods. It is hoped that the new building will be completed by next summer. There is a bit of sentiment about the number, 1220, that being the number of the present building on Race street, which it was especially planned to retain on Spring Garden street. Furthermore, the house, No. 1220 Spring Garden street, was the scene of the wedding of Mr. Eschner's grandfather fifty-six years ago, a fact that gave the purchase additional value to Mr. Eschner.

Current Events.

I am indebted to J. D. Eisele, vice-president of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., for information as to how the Belgian azaleas, palms, bay trees and araucarias have reached this country. It seems that the governments of Germany and of Great Britain were able to agree on this, if on no other point. The plants grown in that portion of Belgium controlled by Germany were permitted to pass through both the German and the allied lines to Rotterdam, a neutral port. From there they were shipped to this country. The money for them must be paid in January to a specified bank in England, where it stands to the credit of the Belgian shippers until after the war is over.

A great change has come over the residence-looking flower shop on the east side of Broad street, just above

Thompson. There and thereabouts, Charles Fox, Sr., has flourished for forty years or so, half of the time in that exact spot—to be accurate, at 1307 North Broad street. The Cibotium Schiedeii, which was Mr. Fox's special glory, still is flourishing in the window, but Mr. Fox's jolly laugh will be heard as visitor, not as proprietor. For on the first day of this month, Richard Umfried purchased the business, good will and fixtures and assumed control. Mr. Umfried is a popular man among our florists. Curiously enough, he began work in that exact spot under Mr. Fox some twenty years ago. Then he went to Fred Ehret, at Broad and Fairmount avenue. His next step in advance was to the Cherry Market, as our foreign visitors were wont to say. When Charles E. Meehan formed his much-talked-of Ludlow street connection, Richard Umfried followed his chief and worked with him under the Pennock-Meehan banner with credit to the company and to himself. His friends wish him success.

There was a lively time at 1129 Arch street this week, when what was described as a trainload of imported French and German goods arrived at the Reading terminal. They were for H. Bayersdorfer & Co. Exactly why they arrived at this particular time nobody knows. They were shipped at a variety of dates from September on. They met the fortunes of war, but finally got through to port. A custom house official was in attendance to rush matters. It took him several days before and after to settle matters. Mr. Bayersdorfer's cheerful smile showed that he hoped to have the stock speeding on its way to his customers in good time for Christmas.

Prima Donna in the Limelight.

It so chanced that Eugene Bernheimer remarked in the corridor of Horticultural hall during the big fall show that Prima Donna was proving to be a good rose at the Florex Gardens, North Wales. Of course, anybody who wants to keep up with the times has to act on gentle tips like this one, and act promptly. So a visit was speedily arranged, and Prima Donna was at home. The facts were startling. Prima Donna had been on trial for three years in a quiet, unostentatious sort of way. So satisfactory had the trial proved that, at the end of a second year, a little house was planted with 400 Prima Donnas. Last March 12,000 cuttings of Prima Donna were struck and potted, and on the fifth of July they were planted out in two long houses. They have made fine growth and are producing excellent flowers—flowers that brought Beauty prices at wholesale at Thanksgiving, or, to be more accurate, Prima Donna brought $35, $30, $25 and $20 per hundred for four grades shipped ciently from his recent injury to resume work December 6. He found a scene of great business activity.

It is with deep sadness that the death of Mrs. M. J. Brinton is announced. Mrs. Brinton was the wife of the noted Lancaster county grower, a woman in the prime of life, who, with her husband, has many warm friends. The funeral took place from their home in Christiana, Pa., December 6.

Edward N. Habermehl, in speaking of the prospect of the coming season for his concern's beautiful flower shop in the Bellevue-Stratford, said that he thought prospects encouraging. The Charity ballroom, December 9, was handsomely decorated and there were two assemblies instead of one. The season will be a long one, which will be of great advantage, as it keeps people in town. Whether it will be a season of brilliant entertainments will develop later.

Joseph Meehan has sufficiently recovered from his recent operation to pay a pleasant visit to his friend of many years' standing, John Savage, at Gwynedd, Pa.

Visitors to Merion, Pa., report of the clever plant grower, Henry I. Faust, that his poinsettias are—well, each one of them put it so nicely in his own particular way that perhaps I can most clearly cover them all by saying—very, very fine, indeed.

Mrs. Stuart H. Miller will once more grace the wholesale district by assisting her enterprising husband, taking charge of the books at the store in the newly fitted quarters.

The Philadelphia Wholesale Florists' Exchange is proud of its fine Russell roses.

A. L. Fortunes is doing well with dagger ferns.

The opening of the social season at Baltimore and of Congress at Washington made but a slight impression on the market here. Phil.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The market all last week was dull and spiritless, as is customary just before the Christmas holidays. Shipments were lighter toward the end of last week, especially of mums and roses. Prices of Thanksgiving week were consequently fairly well maintained. American Beauties and the best of the new roses sold at last week's prices. The quality of the carnation arrivals is improving daily, but prices remain below the average of other years. Few even of the selected sold last week at over $2 per hundred.

Chrysanthemums of all kinds still are here. It looks as though there would be some late ones at Christmas. There has been a fine lot of Bonnaffons, Chadwicks and Eatons. Almost every window is adorned with yellow mums. Prices do not go above $2 per dozen. Orchids have resumed their old place at the head of the procession. The supply is not equal to the demand. Cypripediums sell at $2 per dozen. Violets sold at 75 cents per hundred. The singles seem most popular, especially Princess of Wales. Gardenias are still few and high, the best commanding $9 per dozen. Valley sold at $6 per hundred, the high tide for many a day. Lilies have not advanced above $5 per hundred. The rest of the arrivals include sweet peas, poinsettias, marguerites, pansies, stevia, Paper Whites, bouvardia, calendula, mignonette and wallflowers.

Various Notes.

We are the original manufacturers of the non-moulding Magnolia Leaves, which we have been shipping in plain Corrugated Paper Boxes for the past four years to the largest wholesale dealers. It has become necessary for us to protect you in the future from imitation and inferior grades of Magnolia leaves by having imprinted on our boxes our registered Trade Mark, U. S. Patent Office, as illustrated above, which is a guarantee of first-class quality.

WITHOUT ONE OF OUR

Natural Spruce Miniature Christmas Trees

WITH ROUND BIRCHWOOD STAND

"THE ONE BEST SELLER"

November, 1909, we introduced these beautiful Decorative Spruce Trees to the trade, and the supply each season has not equaled the demand. They are almost perfect in shape and in various heights of from 15 inches to 42 inches, with a spread of 12 inches to 42 inches. The base is firmly attached to a round block of selected white birch about 5 inches in diameter, and they are not only desirable for general decoration, but likewise suited for basket and other artistic work. We have arranged for an increased number for the coming season, but urge early purchase for shipment as wanted.

Dayton, O.—At a recent meeting of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club, the members unanimously decided to reserve the entire north end of the sixth floor of the Delco building, in which the Dayton industrial exposition will be held in January, for a flower show during the exposition. The committee in charge of the space consists of Horace M. Frank, J. W. Rodgers, W. G. Matthews and C. O. Siebenthaler.

San Antonio, Tex.—The trade exhibitors at the flower show held during the recent home-coming celebration were: Stuppy Floral Co., of St. Joseph, Mo.; Furrow & Co., of Guthrie, Okla.; F. J. Wilcox & Sons, of Council Bluffs, Ia.; Thomas Wolfe, of Waco, Tex.; Mrs. C. Jung, F. C. Suchy and the Star Floral Co., all of San Antonio. The affair was a great success, the exhibits of amateurs being extremely numerous and attracting an attendance so large as to give the florists an exceptional opportunity to bring their stock before the public.

150,000 NEPHROLEPIS (In Variety)

We are the largest growers of Nephrolepis Ferns in the country in the following varieties; in fact, we are the headquarters for them. The demand increases each year, and it is our aim to have every variety of Nephrolepis, in every size, every day in the year.

NEPHROLEPIS JOHN WANAMAKER

Introduced August, 1915

The Wanamaker Boston has more than made good. Everyone who has received early shipments from us has been greatly pleased with the variety and repeat orders have been coming in daily. We have a very large stock. A "sport" from Nephrolepis Scholzei, with longer, narrower, gracefully drooping fronds. It is not so compact in growth as Scholzei and therefore does not decay in the center, and is a durable house fern. It is a rapid grower, making an abundance of fronds, and is quite distinct from any other Nephrolepis. The following prices are for immediate and spring delivery:

2½-inch pots, strong plants $10.00 per 100; $90.00 per 1000.
4-inch pots, strong plants, $25.00 per 100; $225.00 per 1000.

TWELVE PAGES OF RETAILERS' CARDS

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

The Market.

The autumn, on the whole, has been good with most of us. The chrysanthemum season has been especially good. These blooms have been of fine quality; the flowers have been abundant, yet the prices have kept up well, though of course they have been much lower recently than they were early in the season. Not only have the retailers profited by this, but the growers have been able to sell their goods to better advantage than a year ago. The late varieties are beginning to come in. It is probable that fine mums will be in the market until after the first of the year.

Carnations are coming along well. Growers of them have ample stocks, the quality of which is improving. Valley is a little higher. Callas and Easter lilies are more plentiful in the retail stores than they have been. Sweet peas continue to come into the market in small quantities. Orchid sweet peas are beginning to appear. Snapdragons are not plentiful as yet. Potted begonias are beginning to be used more freely in window displays, as are cyclamens, primroses, etc. Stevia is arriving in considerable quantities.

Roses are abundant and of medium price. Florists are busy decorating graves for the winter. There is considerable activity in various flower shops in preparation for Christmas. Christmas greens, holly, etc., are beginning to arrive. Quantities of red frieze roping are being made into wreaths and other Christmas decorations.

Various Notes.

Davis & Davis, wholesale growers, East Orange, report a fine Thanksgiving business. The chrysanthemum season is lasting well. The late varieties are coming into bloom. They promise to be of as fine quality as the earlier varieties. Snapdragons are developing well. Geranium cuttings will be potted soon.

John Crossley has had considerable funeral work, a fair counter trade and a number of weddings, five coming in one week.

Ernest Radany is busy with Christmas preparations and has done a great deal of winter decorating in Fairmount cemetery.

Charles J. Connolly finds business fair. Funeral work is just now the most active.

Henry Hornecker, of East Orange, has used several tons of cedar within the last few weeks in decorating graves in Fairmount and Holy Sepulchre cemeteries. He has enough work ahead of this kind to keep him busy for several weeks, in addition to his regular store trade.

Ferdinand A. Kuehn is busy preparing wreaths and other Christmas decorations. He also has much grave decoration work.

The Market.

The cut flower market since Thanksgiving has shortened greatly and all seasonable stock has become scarce, with prices greatly advanced. The leading retailers say the cold weather of late has made a steady improvement in business, but that the business is not what it should be or what it was at this time last year in the wholesale houses. We find a limited supply of roses at present and there is no trouble in clearing them early at good, stiff prices for all grades. The Killarney varieties are at present in best supply and the quality is excellent.

Mums are of the past for this season; there were, however, a few good Bonnaffons arriving in the latter part of the week. This week, no doubt, will see the end of them. The carnation now is in better supply than any other flower and is up to $5 per hundred for the extra fancy; the ordinary grade brings $2 per hundred. As violets are not in so good supply as in former years, they clean up quickly on advance orders. The same may be said of sweet peas, with fancy stock up to $1.50 per hundred. Easter lilies, valley and a few callas come in daily and have a good demand at usual prices.

Christmas wreathing, ruscus and supplies of like nature are moving at the wholesale houses. Should the clear, cold weather continue, there should be no doubt as to a good supply of everything for Christmas.

Various Notes.

Joseph Deutschmann, secretary of the St. Louis County Growers' Association, says that the attendance at last week's meeting of the association was large and that the meeting was made interesting with good talks on the coming day here last week. This was Mr. Vaughan's first visit to St. Louis since 1904, and his many friends were glad to see him. H. C. Neubrand, representing A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., and Frank J. Farney, representing the M. Rice Co., Philadelphia, also were recent visitors.

Werner Bros., rose growers at Clayton, Mo., have been off crop on roses of late, but made up with good consignments of chrysanthemums and valley. According to Hugo Werner, they expect to be just right for Christmas, and that is when they are most needed. The Young Bros. Floral Co., on Waterman avenue, has its large show house filled with fine blooming plants for Christmas. John and William are hustlers and they have a great run of excellent business in this fashionable section.

Fred W. Ude, Jr., of Kirkwood, president of the St. Louis County Growers' Association, will leave this week to spend the winter in Florida, where his son, Emil, has a large tract of land under cultivation. Mr. Ude's other two sons will look after the Kirkwood place during his absence.

Julius Schaeffer is now the official window decorator at Mullanphy's downtown store. Arthur Ellison, who is also with this concern, is in the designing department.

W. W. Ohlweiler, chairman of the flower show committee, says his committee will hold monthly meetings from now on. Any suggestions from members in the trade for the good of the show will be given prompt attention if sent to any member of the committee.

attractions of this busy thoroughfare.

The O'Leary Floral Co. has moved its store from Grand and Lucas avenues to the Humboldt building, just a block away from the old location, the store being on Washington avenue.

The Bourdet Floral Co., at Tower good display of Christmas plants. The boys say their poinsettias and cyclamens were never so fine. They have heavy bookings for Christmas deliveries.

The December display at the Missouri Botanical Garden is decidedly a Christmas show, the prevailing colors being red, green, pink and white. There are fine specimen plants of Gloire de Lorraine begonias, poinsettias, Chinese sacred lilies and heather. A group of Begonia Erfordii in shades of red, white and pink, of which Adolph Jaenicke is the originator, is a sight worth seeing.
The display was staged by Max Schiller and is attracting large crowds daily.
This display is educating the people as

The Market.

The week following Thanksgiving proved to be an unsatisfactory one.
The arrivals of cut flowers were not especially heavy, but business at the retail stores fell off and the demand was feeble. As a consequence, prices
arrivals of quantities of chrysanthemums has a bad influence on the market. Many of the mums are of poor quality and show visible signs of old age, but it will be New Year's before they make their final bow. Bonnaillon is easily the leader. Enguehard hangs fire. A few Jeanne Nonin and Chadwick are seen, also Jerome Jones and the old Maud Dean. Prices are, on the whole, satisfactory. Roses have cleaned up, but prices have declined on all grades. At present there is a shortage of good red roses, the growers timing their crops for the holidays. Carnations have been sluggish and the general average has been no more than $2 per hundred.

Violets hold up well. Growers are holding most of their pick for the holidays. Good pink snapdragon is selling well. Callas, lilies and valley are all somewhat slow. Yellow marguerites only sell moderately well. Stevia and Paper Whites are now plentiful. Asparagus moves slowly. Cattleyas are scarce and expensive. Some Percivaliana and a few Trianae have appeared. Gardenias are scarce. The best make $6 per dozen.

There is increased activity in pot plants, of which a fine assortment now is coming in. The leaders in favor are begonias, cyclamens, ericas, poinsettias, azaleas, berried plants, primulas, camelias and fine-foliaged plants, such as crotons and dracenas. The demand for holly and other evergreens is heavy.

50 years' experience in the florist business guarantees efficiency to take care of all orders. 20 per cent allowed

Boston Bowlers' Scores.

The standing of the several teams in the Boston Florists' Bowling League is as follows:

Team.	Won.	Lost.
Galvin's	28	4
Coöperative Market	24	8
Carbone's	20	12
Pansies	15	17
Zinn's	15	17
Flower Exchange	10	22
Robinson's	9	23
McAlpine & McDonald	7	25

The Pansies made the highest team score, 1,378, December 2. Jacobs, with 132, was highest single scorer, and Bresnahan, 325, was highest triple scorer.

Various Notes.

Arrangements have been completed for the convention in Horticultural hall, December 9, of the National Association of Gardeners. Mayor Curley will welcome the conventionists on behalf of the city of Boston. Patrick Welch will speak for the S. A. F. At the dinner in the evening there will be quite a number of leaders in local horticultural circles. For the second day a sight-seeing tour in automobiles has been arranged, to include the Boston park system, Arnold Arboretum, Franklin park and a number of private estates in Brookline. Lunch will be served at the Dedham nurseries of Farquhar & Co., at 2 o'clock. A large convention attendance is assured.

Work is progressing night and day on Penn's new store at 124 Tremont street and Henry Penn thinks he will be able to open the store December 15.

The first forget-me-not of the season appeared December 1, from R. P. Peterson, of Saxonville.

Of the various pink snapdragons seen in the wholesale markets none is more popular than Virginia, from Paul E. Richwagen, of Needham. He has a large cut of stevia.

Inquiries at the various bulb stores show that nearly everything has been cleaned up, sales having been heavier than ever before.

The death of W. Atlee Burpee brought out numerous expressions of regret. Mr. Burpee was a familiar figure at the conventions of the American Sweet Pea Society held in Boston, and his presence was much missed at Newport last July. We are all glad to

At Carbone's business is good and decidedly ahead of that of a year ago.
Practically all of Mr. Carbone's recent European purchases have arrived.

There seems to be no regular hour for closing at the stores. Some continue open until 8, others until 8:30 p. m.; some much later. A recent evening visit to some of the leading stores showed numerous employees simply wasting time, and few customers. Does this late closing pay? Are enough flowers sold after 6 o'clock to pay for light consumed? Would it not be vastly better to close at 6 or 6:30, except on holidays? Are not the hours for employees, which average from 7 a. m. to 8 p. m., needlessly long and would they not work with more zest if they had the additional two hours to themselves? Flowers are perishable commodities, but there are other commodities equally perishable which are not purchasable after 6 p. m. This is a question worthy the attention of all retailers.

H. M. Robinson & Co. have a large staff working practically night and day on Christmas orders and have never before been so rushed at this season.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, John M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I.;
Secretary-Treasurer, O. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

THE steamers from Havre are this season bringing unusual quantities of French seeds.

THE seedsmen who attended the meeting of canners at Milwaukee last week had a pleasant outing, but found no one specially worried about his supply of peas for 1916 crop.

THE United States Civil Service Commission will hold an examination in various cities January 5, to secure laboratory aids in seed testing in the Department of Agriculture, at $600 to $720 a year.

THE Arthur T. Boddington Co., New York, is preparing to move downtown, into the district of the other retail seed stores, and has leased quarters at 128 Chambers street, which it is expected to occupy about January 1.

AFTER spending three and one-half years in Europe, Knud Gundestrup has returned to Chicago and plans reestablishing himself in the seed business, making a specialty of supplying market gardeners' seeds and of onion sets.

THERE is only a nominal market for bouquet green at Chicago, practically all stock in sight being required to fill orders taken some time ago. It is thought the arrivals of late picked stock will not be sufficient to change the situation materially.

THE difference in conditions between this year and last is well illustrated by the bulb market. Last season, it will be remembered, there was a surplus and the market was demoralized, while this season, with imports nearly 1,000 cases heavier, it has been impossible for late buyers to fill all their needs.

THERE should be a brisk demand for tomato seeds this season, as the total tomato pack for the 1915 season was only 8,469,000 cases. This is about fifty-five per cent of the pack that was made during the 1914 season and about sixty-five per cent of the pack that was made throughout the United States in 1913.

A. KRUEH, now sales manager for the Page Seed Co., Greene, N. Y., under date of December 2, sent the first 1916 seed catalogue to reach The Review this season. It is a well-printed stock book of forty-eight pages and cover, with a space for imprinting the name and address of an agent handling Page seeds. The prices are on small quantities only and, of course, are on the safe side.

THE government advises that lists of importers of seeds at San Jose, Puntarenas and Cartago, the leading cities of Costa Rica, Central America, may be obtained from the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, Washington, D. C. Before the European war, probably fifty per cent of the seeds imported into Costa Rica came from Europe, but now nearly all seeds, vegetable and flower, must be imported from the United States. The leading importer at San Jose buys chiefly in bulk and uses his own labels and packets, containing cultural instructions in Spanish. Prices f. o. b. on large shipments are well understood by the importers. Many buy for cash, taking advantage of the discounts.

ALREADY Texas is calling for seeds for 1916 spring truck crops.

JUST where to turn to acquire the usual quantity of spinach for 1916 is puzzling many a seedsman.

THE Illinois Seed & Nursery Co., of Makanda, Ill., has been incorporated by J. H. Bradley, A. L. Bradley and H. J. Bradley. Capitalization is $10,000.

AT the outbreak of the war Kelway & Son, Langport, England, had sixty employees of military age, of whom forty-five, or seventy-five per cent, have joined the colors.

CONDON BROS. and the Rock River Valley Seed Farms, of Rockford, Ill., have complained to the Interstate Commerce Commission against the freight rates of the Chicago & Northwestern railroad on peas from Brimley, Mich., to Rockford. They think 17 cents per hundred pounds instead of 30 cents, as at present charged, would be a fair rate.

A REPORT from Holland in a British trade paper says: "The export trade in bulbs to both England and Germany has just about reached one-half the usual quantities, but any of the other countries at war have drawn little or nothing, and if the export to the United States had not made up for this deficiency the results of this year's trading would have proved most disastrous. Under the present circumstances we may take it for granted that bulb stocks planted out have been so considerably reduced as to make up nearly for the reduced buying power of the civilized nations."

VALLEY PIPS FROM COPENHAGEN.

The steamer from Copenhagen that reached New York November 29 brought, in addition to considerable quantities of seeds, the following consignments of lily of the valley pips:

Consignee.	Cases.
American Express Co.....	262
Farquhar & Co.....	13
Loechner & Co.....	73

Total348

A previous boat this season brought Loechner & Co. 360 cases.

The Danish steamer, Frederick VIII, which docked at New York four days later than the Copenhagen, had on board 1,004 cases of valley pips, which were consigned as follows:

Consignee.	Cases.
Roehrs, J., Co.....	50
American Express Co.....	280
Maltus & Ware.....	674

Total.....1,004

DUTCH BULB RECEIPTS LOW.

Only 152 cases of Dutch bulbs were received from Rotterdam last week. These shipments probably are the tail end of this season's imports, which, according to the experience of former years, usually end at this time. The shipments last week, as declared in the New York manifest of the Holland steamers, were consigned as follows:

Consignee.	Cases.
MacNitt Horticultural Co.....	38
Boddington, A. T.....	1
Langelier, H.....	90
Lang, R. F.....	8
Maltus & Ware.....	2
Kuyper, P. C., & Co.....	11
Thompson Chemical Co.....	2

Total 152
Previously reported34,932

Total to date.....35,084

The total number of cases received to date through the port of New York is 35,084, compared with the 34,139 cases received through the same port in 1914. This year's total, however, includes the consignments to Canada. The bulbs actually imported for consumption in the United States, therefore, are slightly less than those of last year.

ESTIMATES FOR FREE SEEDS.

Estimates for continuing the congressional free seed distribution next year have been submitted to Congress. The same appropriation as available this year, $252,540, is asked. For foreign seed and plant introduction, $70,400 is asked, and for the purchase and distribution of new and rare seeds $140,920 is asked against $119,920 appropriated this year. For the Federal Horticultural Board $61,360 is asked, an increase of $11,360.

MR. BURPEE'S WILL PROBATED.

W. Atlee Burpee, who died November 26 at his home, Fordhook, left an estate estimated at nearly $700,000. His will was probated at Doylestown November 30.

The instrument is dated May 27, 1913. The executors are his widow, Mrs. Blanche Burpee; David Burpee, a son; Judge Harman Yerkes and

Burpee's Seeds Grow

Forty Years of Burpee Service

FOR forty years we have aimed to render faithful service. For forty years we have tried to make each year's service more nearly ideal. This untiring effort has built for us, not only the world's largest mail order seed business, but a world-wide reputation for efficient service and undisputed leadership.

More opportune than anything we ourselves may say about Burpee Quality Seeds are the many remarkable things our thousands of customers and friends have said and continue to say about them. These customers return to us year after year, not because seeds cannot be found elsewhere, but because of our superior quality and service.

THE HOUSE OF BURPEE

Has introduced more distinct new varieties of vegetable and flower seeds that are now in general cultivation than have any three other American firms, but never have we catalogued any one of these varieties until it had passed all the exacting requirements of the Burpee-Standard. This Burpee-Standard is maintained by rigid tests at Fordhook Farms, America's largest and most complete trial grounds. These tests are made each year for the purpose of strengthening this Bond of Confidence between our customers and ourselves.

THE FORTIETH ANNIVERSARY EDITION of BURPEE'S ANNUAL

The Leading American Seed Catalogue is unlike any other. The front cover illustrates the greatest novelty in Sweet Peas, "Fiery Cross," and the back cover the two famous Burpee Bantams, Golden Bantam Corn and Blue Bantam Peas. It is a safe guide to success, and of real value to everyone who plants seeds either for pleasure or profit. Florists and Market Growers should have our Blue List, the Market Growers' Handbook. This is the wholesale price list for planters. Write for these catalogues today. A post card will bring them.

Alexander Buchanan Scott. Eventually nearly the whole estate goes to the two sons, David Burpee and W. Atlee Burpee, Jr. One-third of the personal estate and a life interest in the Bucks county and Philadelphia properties goes to the widow. The sons receive the seed business, subject to the one-third interest of the widow, a share to a sister, Sarah Coburn Burpee Scott, wife of Alexander Scott, the well known rose grower, and one-sixth interest to the manager of the seed business, Howard M. Earl.

To allow for an advantageous disposal of the seed business, with the sons given power to incorporate it, the testator provides that the time for the settlement of the estate shall be extended for five years from his death. Miss Beatrice Kennedy, of San Francisco, a niece by marriage, and three cousins, Helen Burpee, L. Kate Burpee and Charles L. Atlee, share in trust funds.

An Appreciation.

W. Atlee Burpee is no more—the pen reluctantly records the sad message. Hundreds of personal friends will regret the untimely passing away of the most conspicuous personality in the American seed trade during the last quarter century. Thousands of his customers, who have become acquainted with him through his inimitable letters, will mourn the passing of this master mind. Hundreds upon thousands will gratefully cherish the memory of the benefactor to mankind who gave the world more really valuable new vegetables and flowers than any other man except one.

Three characteristics stand out boldest in connection with W. Atlee Burpee—his honesty of purpose, broadmindedness and liberality. With untiring energy he scoured the nooks and corners of the plant breeding world for more of better vegetables and flowers. It mattered little where he found the novelties which he decided were worthy of becoming famous—he gave just credit to the originators. And money was no object in acquiring what he wanted for America—European as well as American growers can testify to his liberality.

The Burpee business has become a national institution. It will always be the lengthened shadow of W. Atlee Burpee. Associated with Mr. Burpee are a fine set of younger men, who will make it their duty to preserve those sacred principles of Mr. Burpee's,

LILY BULBS FOR SALE.

It is a fine but true distinction that no florist ever begins a lily growing proposition for the purpose of putting money into it, but rather for the purpose of taking money out of it. And inasmuch as income runs in inverse ratio to investment, it is very important that florists get bulbs that will give a maximum number of blooms per thousand bulbs planted. If you grow lilies long enough and experiment with various brands, you will finally come to the only logical conclusion—that Horse-shoe Brand Giganteum are superior to anything you can plant. If you want to save yourself the cost of experimenting, follow the trail of the largest growers, and always insist upon Horseshoe Brand bulbs—because they are standard and are dependable.

be fall wheat, whereas it was sold on a representation that it was spring Fife wheat. (Keeler vs. Green, 149 Pacific Reporter, 286.)

The buyer alleged that April 1, 1913, the defendant sold him 145 bushels of wheat for spring seeding, warranting the wheat to be spring Fife wheat. After preparing the ground, he properly sowed the wheat upon ninety-seven acres, and used care to produce a crop. The wheat, however, did not produce a crop because it was fall wheat, which the defendant knew at the time of the sale, or could, with reasonable diligence, have ascertained. The court said: "The allegations are clearly sufficient to charge a warranty of character and quality by the seller. It was the seller's duty to know that the goods delivered were of that character and quality, and, if they were not, the responsibility is his, in the absence of an acceptance with knowledge by the buyer."

It is to be noted that this sale was not made under any disclaimer of warranty on the part of the seller, within the well settled rule of law that a seller of seed may avoid liability by inserting in the contract a disclaimer of warranty. S.

We have disposed of nearly 100,000 carnation plants this spring. Please discontinue the ad in The Review. The plants were fine, but we think much of the success in moving so many of them was due to your valuable paper.—The Florex Gardens, North Wales, Pa.

SALEM, ORE.

The officers of the newly organized Salem Floral Society are: President, J. W. Maruny; first vice-president, George F. Rodgers; second vice-president, Mrs. E. M. Wallace; secretary, Bessie R. Shinn; treasurer, Rev. H. C. Pemberton; board of directors, Mrs. W. P. Lord, Mrs. J. W. Minto, Mrs. Springer, Miss Lillian Boot, Mrs. Jerry P. King and Mrs. M. Cameron. President Maruny was father to the idea that resulted in the society's inception.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

As Christmas approaches, the retail stores begin to take on a holiday appearance. Plants are more in evidence and in demand. Business is better, but there is room for improvement still. Good shipping roses are on the scarce side according to the wholesalers, who have difficulty in filling orders for long distance shipments. There are plenty for the retail home trade when they can be handled quickly. Prima Donna and September Morn are both showing their quality as keepers, while Shawyer runs them closely along the same line. Dahlias are about over, though there still are a few to be seen. Mums also are past their best. Pompons and singles have been more freely used this year than usual. Pretty little baskets of pansies made a dainty show in one store and the waxed orange blossoms again are appearing.

Various Notes.

One of the most beautiful of our parks is Elysian park, northwest of the city. A good deal of money has been spent on new roads and, while the scenery and views opened up are different from those of the more mountainous parks, there still are magnificent views of the great San Fernando valley, the Sierra Madre mountains and the surrounding country. The plantings of cedars, pines and other trees, undertaken some years ago, are now developing and a little thinning out here and there will probably be needed both for the sake of opening up desirable vistas now closed and for the sake of the trees. An experiment was tried with thousands of yuccas on one hillside, but it can hardly be called successful. The yucca is not at its best in big groups and the great single spikes thrown up from rocky places among chaparral and sage brush look better than large masses, because it is more natural. But this seems to have been the only weak spot in the more recent plantings. In the nursery, Superintendent Lambert is doing good work preparing large stocks of many rare and useful trees and shrubs for planting in the various city parks. A new lath house has been built, but neither in this nor in the new propagating house have up-to-date construction methods been followed.

F. R. Hills certainly has hustled his new house to completion and has it working in double-quick time. It is now full of fine stock of ferns that will be ready for Christmas sales and the lower benches are largely planted to the new adiantum, California, one of the finest, if not the finest, adiantums ever sent out for cutting. In the older plants grown by Mr. Hills, the fronds are from eighteen inches to two feet in length and broad in proportion. The new Glory of Mordrecht is a great success here and far ahead of Farleyense as a market fern, because it is so easy to handle. Mr. Hills has selected a novel type of nephrolepis after the style of a glorified Pierisoni, which makes immense plants in a surprisingly short space of time. This will surely be heard from in the future. The whole of the new land taken in a short time ago is now covered with healthy nursery stock, including some especially good Cocos plumosa, which does remarkably well on the soil here.

The Germain Seed & Plant Co. handled over a carload of azaleas last week and, in spite of many orders being canceled on account of the late arrival of the stock, reports a heavy demand. As a large percentage of the stock was the early-flowering Mme. Petrick, this house will probably be well supplied for Christmas even should Vervaeana and Mardner not make the holiday.

C. Gutting, of the Superior Nursery Co., was so far recovered as to be in town last week, but inquiries of Mrs. Gutting led to the information that he still was far from well and would probably have to return to the hospital for further treatment. As Mr. Gutting makes a specialty of Christmas plants, he naturally feels that he has to be on hand at this time.

Paul Howard, the well-known landscape artist, has opened a store at 1521 West Seventh street. The present arrangement seems to be that Mr. Howard will make this his office headquarters and will show samples of plants. He does not, at this time, intend to go into the cut flower end of the business.

The California Cut Flower & Evergreen Co. has a big stock on hand of all classes of greens and supplies. Extensive alterations have been made at the Broadway store, opening it out in order to show the stock. Rumors of a coalition between J. Rollieri and a well-known man in the trade here are current, but at the time of writing there is nothing absolutely settled.

Wright's Flower Shop has received a consignment of azaleas, transshipped by water from San Francisco. While the season is late, the resources of the plant of this company are well known and there is no doubt that they will be there or thereabouts when Christmas comes around.

Some of the finest pompon mums coming to this market are those from the H. N. Gage Co. Mr. Gage has his bungalow at Montebello about finished.

Dr. A. D. Houghton is doing a good work in begonias, having made a wonderful collection of living plants at his home place, as well as classified many hundreds of species from botanical specimens and data secured from all kinds of sources. Mrs. Houghton is as much interested as the doctor and a great deal of the research work falls to her share. Two species Dr. Houghton is anxious to obtain are Begonia asplenifolia and the native B. Californica.

J. W. Wolters maintains a fine dis-

Quality Has First Consideration —AT THE—

Home of Asters

The quality of seed you buy is of utmost importance to you. Your most careful cultivation, your liberal application of fertilizer and your diligent attention to details will never produce a good crop from poor seed.

It takes time and thought and much hard work to produce the best results in any line, and in no business is the general public more deceived than in the buying of various seeds.

The poor quality of asters produced from seed sent us from time to time has caused us to take up the work of aster seed growing as a protection against crop failures; and, as a result, the H. & F. Quality Asters have become well known to all the leading florists of the Pacific northwest as first-grade stock.

Owing to the location of our plant, only a small percentage of the traveling public see our fine fields of asters and are therefore not in position to accept the facts so readily as one visiting the place and seeing actual results. However, many satisfied users of this seed have done us the kindness to write concerning their unusual success, and we feel sure the seed we offer will make friends for us of a large populace in the near future.

We trust that you may have the confidence to at least test the H. & F. Quality Aster Seed next year.

play at all times at his Hill street store and reports business as improving.

When the present depression in nursery business departs, it surely looks as though Jacob Dieterich is in line to make money. He has an immense amount of stock in his nursery and lath house at Montebello that is of a quality much above the average. During a hasty look through the place recently, a few prominent things seemed worthy of notice. There is a grand lot of Erica melanthera, nice bushy stock in 7-inch, that will be a mass of bloom by Christmas. An immense number of Phoenix Rebelenii is already tubbed up and there are many more in the beds. Kentias are here by the thousands, from 2-inch stock to fine specimens. Probably the finest lot of Rhapis flabelliformis in the trade is here, while ferns, asparagus and other green stock galore are on hand. It is wonderful stock, well handled by Mr. Dieterich's clever foreman, Gebhart Prechtel.

lar flowers of the time and there is a good supply in dealers' hands. Prices for them continue good and the quality is first-class. Carnations are none too plentiful, but somehow the price is hardly what it should be. There was a little acceleration for Thanksgiving. Since then they have been sold at prices far too low for this season. One of the basic mistakes of the carnation market here is that quality does not meet its corresponding value; splits and inferior flowers are expected to sell on an equality with first-grade stock.

There is a shortage of roses; few of local growth are coming in and most of the flowers shown are southern-grown. California violets are cheap and not in great demand. Good cyclamens are plentiful, and they almost monopolize the stock of flowering plants. Ferns are overstocked by almost every greenhouse, and prices are by no means remunerative.

Various Notes.

J. O. Hankins, of the Seattle Pottery Co., has his hands full. Orders never have been so plentiful. The company has lately installed machinery to turn out better and more pots.

The state horticultural commissioner is enforcing the new laws with respect to nurserymen's licenses for all those who import stock into the state. These laws are for the help and protection of all dealers in plants in this state and the sooner they are observed the better it will be for all in the trade.

J. J. Bonnell has received two carloads of European nursery stock. He also has benched a shipment of 30,000 Paper White narcissi from Vancouver, B. C., in one of his greenhouses. This should go far to make orders for Paper Whites scarce next season.

Mrs. L. W. McCoy has removed her retail store from 912 Third avenue to a larger and more central location in Second avenue, at Marion street, where she has one of the finest stores in the state.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The Thanksgiving rush was followed by a slump in local demand. Last week conditions were governed by the exposition, as apparently everybody in the city wanted to get a last look before the final closing, December 4, and as a result all regular business has languished. At the same time, funeral work has been rather light and the shipping business has not been enough to clean up the market, though supplies are dwindling. Comparatively speaking, violets are about the most plentiful item now and the stock is good, though rain might improve the quality. Mums show signs of playing out, though there will be a fair cut until Christmas. Bonnaillon is rather scarce, while there is plenty of Appleton, the demand for which is limited, and some nice pink and red stock is appearing. Pompons retain their popularity and offerings of outdoor mums are fairly liberal. A few belated dahlias and even gladioli are coming from frostless sections. A good many Paper White narcissi and a few freesias appeared last week.

Carnation prices are down again, with supplies moderate, but larger than the week's demand. Dark weather has shortened the cut of roses a little, though a few more Beauties are appearing and are well taken. Hadley is fine, but moves rather slowly, while Ophelia as usual cleans up readily. Baby roses are as strong as ever. Some of the local growers are offering fine, long-stemmed poinsettias and an excellent cut is expected for Christmas, in addition to a lot of good potted stock, some of which is now coming in. Orchids are not so plentiful, but cypripediums are more prominent and there are enough cattleyas. Gardenias are gradually improving and will be exceptionally fine for Christmas. In flowering plants, cyclamens are about at their best and many nice begonias and prim-prominent position. Greens of all kinds are in strong demand.

Various Notes.

This has been a remarkably late fall in the San Francisco district, there having been no continuous rains and little frost. The result is that outdoor stock in many lines has lasted well. The exposition gardens made a good appearance right up to the close. With a little help from oil heaters, the extensive beds of begonias have suffered practically no damage, and most of the dahlias showed complete recovery from the touch of frost of a few weeks ago. Even the cannas were not entirely gone.

During the last week of the fair, considerable interest was taken in an ex-held under the auspices of the Cali-

A. J. Rossi, formerly with J. Seulberger, of Oakland, recently opened a shop on Twelfth street, in the Bacon block, that city.

F. G. Cuthbertson, of C. C. Morse & Co., has been sending out preliminary notices of the sweet pea show, to be held in this city next June under the auspices of the American Sweet Pea Society. It is expected that the time and place will be decided and a definite prize list prepared within a few weeks. Meanwhile growers are being urged to begin planting and prepare to participate. Many prizes have already been promised. C. C. Morse & Co. offer $30 in three prizes for twelve vases of sweet peas from their grand prize collection; W. Atlee Burpee & Co. offer prizes for the best single vase of their new sweet pea, Fiery Cross, and for Spencer sweet peas; the Braslan Seed Growers' Co., of San Jose, has offered a prize; and prizes and other support have been promised by Waldo Rohnert, L. D. Waller Seed Co., Hallawell Seed Co., Mrs. Scannavino and others.

Mrs. R. E. Darbee has been doing some moving picture advertising locally. She is still shipping large lots of Cecile Brunner roses and reports some large eastern inquiries for violets for Christmas. California greens, she says, are finding great popularity with the trade as far east as New York state, and she has had good results from mixed shipments of mahonia, Mexican ivy, statice, etc.

The next meeting of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society will be a week later than the usual time, but a big meeting is expected, as James Keegan of the smoker committee has everything fixed for a big time. Officers are to be nominated for the new year.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

The rainfall last month equaled the general averages of September, October and November combined. The unusually inclement weather tended to depress the sales of flowers and, while the amount of business about equaled that of November of last year, the hopes engendered by the good business of October were not fully realized. The calls of charity for the relief of local and foreign sufferers have been heavy and the most charitably inclined have been forced to economize. Many of them are customers of the flower stores and as they have given their charities the preference, the loss of their trade has been felt.

High-grade cut stock and the more expensive classes of potted plants have been the hardest to move. Cheaper grades had the strongest call. The dull weather has cut down the output of carnations, roses and mums, so that there has been no glut of flowers. Prices on all high-grade stock have been from fifteen to thirty per cent lower. Lower grades have brought a normal figure. Last week was as might be expected after the Thanksgiving rush. The cycle of varieties of chrysanthemums has been completed and the latest are now here. Considerable stock is being held back for the holidays, but there is no need of retarding roses or carnations, as the indications are that

Our New Rose, PRIMA DONNA

It is most gratifying to note the reports in the trade papers, and especially those of the great Cleveland Show, where Prima Donna won hands down for best vase of 50 roses. We had every confidence in introducing it as a forcing rose, knowing if it had a fair trial it would make good. Note the prices it has been bringing in the New York market, which has been glutted with good roses. It is of splendid, quick, strong growth, throwing an abundance of two to three-foot canes, healthy and exceptionally free in production of blooms. A truly distinctive rose that is a big money-maker for the grower. We will have an elegant lot of plants from 2½-inch pots, Feb. 1st delivery and later.

THE FLAG IN A CARPET BED.

I expect next season to plant a carpet bed representing the American flag, and I am taking the liberty of asking you for a few hints on the subject. My location, you will notice, is northern California. What plants are the best to use for the white and blue colors? I intend to use Alternanthera Jewel for the red stripes and inwreath the flag with lobelias. The size of the flag will be 6x9 feet, and the entire bed will be 11x54 feet. How closely shall I plant the Alternanthera Jewel?

N. O. P.—Cal.

There is nothing better for a dwarf white bedding plant to flower over a long season in California than the white verbena, and it is easily grown and propagated. A good dwarf blue plant is not so easy to find, aside from the lobelia. There is a verbena that is almost blue, but the purplish tint is against its use. Then we have the blue marguerite, Agathæa cælestis, but the color is a little too pale. Plumbago Larpentæ is good if sufficient stock can be obtained. Salvia patens is also exquisite, though not as dwarf as the other plants noted. There are plenty of good blues in pansies that could be used in spring, and some up-to-date seedsmen are offering tufted pansies or violas that stand sunshine well. Convolvulus Mauritanicus is an elegant blue creeping plant, free blooming, but possibly more suitable for baskets than for bedding. Plant the alternantheras six inches apart.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

President, E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia.; Vice-president, John Watson, Newark, N. J.; Secretary, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treasurer, Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.
Forty-first annual meeting, Milwaukee, Wis., June 28 to 30, 1916.

ARTICLES of incorporation have been filed by the Samuel Frazer Nursery, of which H. C. Kinnins, J. R. Irons and M. J. Frazer are officers. The capital stock is $75,000.

JOHN C. CHASE, who has been at San Diego, Cal., since the A. A. N. meeting at Detroit, expects to return to his home at Derry, N. H., before Christmas. He is much improved in health.

THE Rotterdam steamer, Martensdyk, which arrived at New York November 28, had on board 93 cases of nursery stock, consigned as follows: American Express Co., 3 cases trees; P. C. Kuyper & Co., 4 cases roots; Maltus & Ware, 43 cases roots.

AN American consul reports to the Department of Commerce that a man in a Portuguese possession desires catalogues, prices, freight charges and full information concerning nursery stock, such as orange, plum, pear and apple trees and berry stock, especially gooseberry. Particulars may be obtained by communication direct with the Department at Washington.

WESTERN NURSERYMEN MEET.

Kansas City, Mo., December 8.—The annual winter 2-day meeting of the Western Association of Nurserymen, which opened here this morning, has brought together one of the largest gatherings of nurserymen in the history of the trade in the west. In addition to the meeting of the western people, many committees of the national association are here to push their work and there are more than the usual number of well known trade figures from a distance. The program for the meeting appeared in The Review for November 25.

THE WHITE PINE BLISTER RUST.

The alarming character of the white pine blister rust and the economic loss which it threatens in the northeastern and western United States are sharply emphasized by four recent serious outbreaks on pine trees and currant bushes in Massachusetts and New York, says the United States Department of Agriculture. This disease was introduced on imported white pine nursery stock and first appeared at Geneva, N. Y., in 1906.

In 1909 extensive importations of diseased white pine nursery stock were located and destroyed in New York and other eastern states, and warnings were issued against further importation of white pine from Europe. In spite of these warnings importation continued, even from the particular nursery in Germany which was definitely known to be the main source of disease, until finally in 1912 all such importation was stopped by federal action.

The white pine blister rust affects the eastern white pine, the western white pine, the sugar pine and indeed all of the so-called 5-leaf pines, producing cankers on the stems and branches, killing young trees and maiming and disfiguring old ones. It also produces a leaf disease of currant and gooseberry bushes. The fungus causing the disease must live for a part of its life on pine trees and part of its life on currants and gooseberries. The disease cannot spread from one pine tree to another, but must pass first to currant bushes and then back to pine.

The disease has made the culture of American white pine impracticable in England, Denmark and Holland and has seriously handicapped its cultivation in Germany. Since the trees which it attacks include three of the most important timber trees of the United States, the loss which this disease will produce if unchecked is great. Fortunately, the disease is not known to be present west of Buffalo, N. Y., but if it is not checked in the eastern states its ultimate spread to the vast forests of the Rocky mountains and the Pacific coast is certain. The disease now occurs in three localities in New Hampshire, two in Vermont, ten in Massachusetts, two in Connecticut, five in New York, one in Pennsylvania and three in Ontario, Can.

The disease could be controlled now by the destruction of the diseased white pines or the complete destruction of all currant and gooseberry bushes in the vicinity of infected pine trees. Whether or not this simple action can be accomplished depends upon the legal authority possessed by the various state horticultural inspectors concerned. If the inspector is not armed with authority to destroy currant bushes or the diseased white pines without the consent of the owner, all efforts at control will be unavailing, as a single person by permitting diseased pines or currants to remain on his place can nullify the work of an entire community.

TRANSPLANTING EVERGREENS.

Can hemlocks, junipers and spruces, of the evergreen family, which grow wild in our woods, be transplanted successfully? I would like to move these trees, which are three to five feet high, to my new tract about a quarter of a mile away. The soil is practically the same. Could the trees be moved now, or when would be the best time?

F. N. B.—Pa.

If the evergreens are of considerable size it would be better to dig around them before the ground freezes and remove them with frozen balls during the winter to prepared holes. Straw or hay can be packed around the roots for the winter and the filling in can be done when the ground has thawed. Most of

Do not allow the roots to dry and water well to settle the soil about the roots. Firm the soil thoroughly around the roots and nearly all should grow. CINCINNATI

The Market.

The supply of stock is rather limited, but apparently sufficient for present needs. The shipping business is good. Roses generally clean up nicely, the receipts including excellent Killarney, White Killarney, Taft, Richmond, Hoosier Beauty and American Beauty. Carnations experience a ready sale. Lilies continue plentiful and enjoy a much better market than during the chrysanthemum season. Valley and orchids meet with a steady demand, while violets and sweet peas sell moderately. Other offerings include narcissi, snapdragons, callas, forget-me-nots and baby primroses. Greens are plentiful.

Various Notes.

The regular meeting of the Cincinnati Florists' Society will be held Monday, December 13.

The flower tributes at the funeral of Mrs. C. E. Critchell last week surpassed anything ever seen in this city. Flowers came from all parts of the country and transformed the Critchell residence into a veritable bower. The casket was enshrouded in a blanket of violets.

Gus Adrian, Max Rudolph and Roy Rudolph went to Richmond and New-castle, Ind., this week.

P. J. Olinger has been rushed with shipping business.

C. E. Critchell has been having a strong call for Christmas greens and novelties.

A Question of Utility

A party of tourists were shown around in the vicinity of Rome when they came upon a flock of chickens, which the guide informed them were all descended from a noted rooster mentioned in the Bible. A Yankee member of the party, being of a practical turn of mind, asked him: "Do they lay?"

One of the principal tests of a good Carnation is: Will it bloom? Morning Glow will bloom and produce flowers of an even grade a month after they are planted and continue almost without a break to the end of the season. A variety of proved worth which can compete where there is strong competition, because of its great productiveness. See previous ads.

THE original Album of Designs was published in response to many requests from florists who felt the need for an up-to-date book that could be used in taking orders for Funeral Designs, Wedding Decorations and Bouquets, Table Decorations and all cut flower work where it was not practicable to show the customer the finished article as it would be when ready for use. With the publication of this album it became possible to show the finished work in beautifully printed pictures. The first edition sold like hot cakes, and a second edition went quickly. New Salmon Pink Carnation NANCY Color, light salmon pink, a little darker than Pink Delight and a more even color. Blooms are good commercial size, three inches and over, nicely formed and have never shown a bursted calyx. Stems always hold the flower upright. The habit is a quick productive growth and as a producer it stands highest among commercial varieties. Color does not fade. Fragrance is very noticeable. Having an excellent cerise pink and an improved yellow to offer in 1917, we have decided to disseminate the variety NANCY this year (1916). For a light pink that will produce quantities of bloom and is commercially good in every respect, plant NANCY. The stock is limited and orders will be filled in rotation as received. Price, rooted cuttings, $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000. First deliveries in January.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Business was good last week. Sales have more than maintained the standard of previous years and stock has been good. Cuts of the different varieties have increased to some extent and the prospects are bright for a good Christmas business.

Roses are becoming more plentiful from day to day and White Killarney, Killarney and Hoosier Beauty are more plentiful than the other varieties. Russell and Ophelia still are somewhat scarce, being considerably short of the demand. Carnations have not shortened as much as roses and, in consequence, are in large supply at this time. Red appeared to be somewhat scarce last week. The demand has increased with the supply and there has been nothing like a glut on the market. Valley is arriving in larger quantities and is in sufficient supply to take care of all orders. Lilies are not so plentiful, because the demand has shown some increase. There has been a sharp demand for cattleyas owing to the charity ball, which called for numerous corsages. The supply was limited and all orders could not be taken care of.

Bouvardia has had quite a call for corsage work, but soon will be out of the market entirely. Mums are just about gone, although there still are some Chadwicks and Bonnaffons to be had. The mum season has been good, which has been partly due to the shortage of other stock. Stevia is appearing in bigger quantities and is finding a ready sale.

Last week marked the first appearance of Paper Whites. The quality is excellent and the stock is moving as fast as it appears on the market. There has been a heavy demand for calendula and the supply has not been large enough to go around. The supply of violets shows no increase and there will probably be a big shortage for Christmas. At present the stock cleans up each morning.

$12.00 per 100 AVIATOR $100.00 per 1000

There is at present no thoroughly satisfactory scarlet carnation.
We believe we have such a variety in AVIATOR, and we have decided to disseminate it, beginning delivery January 1, 1916.

THIS IS THE FIRST TIME A NEW CARNATION HAS BEEN SENT OUT BY US SINCE WE INTRODUCED ENCHANTRESS, AND YOU MAY BE SURE WE ARE CONFIDENT IT'S GOOD OR WE WOULD NOT PUT OUR NAME AND REPUTATION BACK OF IT.

Description—Parents, red sport of Maceo and red seedling. Color, intense scarlet, very bright. Stem, thin, wiry and stiff. Flowers, fine, full and nicely fringed. Habit, clean; upright growth; every break makes a rapid advance, producing a profusion of fine flowers in a very short time. The most prolific carnation ever offered to the trade, barring none. No disease, no grass, easy to propagate. There are larger reds offered, but Aviator will outbloom them 3 to 1.
We have plants of Aviator on which we can count 24 buds for the first crop and the houses easily average 15 buds per plant.

Club Meeting.

The regular meeting of the Kentucky Society of Florists was held December 1, at the greenhouses of Anders Rasmussen, 1108 Vincennes street, New Albany, Ind. Although the weather was unfavorable, about thirty members and their ladies were present. After several hours had been spent inspecting the big plant of Mr. Rasmussen, at 5 o'clock the business of the society was entered into. The routine part of it disposed of, the election of officers took place, resulting as follows: President, Louis Kirch; vice-president, Herman Kleinstark, Jr.; recording secretary, August R. Baumer; financial secretary, Emil Walther; treasurer, Frank Kleinstaub; sergeant-at-arms, Thomas Christiansen; trustee for three years, Miss Clara Stuessy.

R. E. Jones, of the Advance Co., Richmond, Ind., a guest of Mr. Rasmussen, spoke on ventilation. Following the meeting a buffet luncheon was served in the large packing room. Thence the guests went to the recreation rooms, where some spent their time at the billiard table, some at crokinole; the majority went to the bowling alleys, where Miss Emma Kleinstark and August R. Baumer won the prizes.

Various Notes.

Kingsley Walker, a son of Herbert G. Walker, president of F. Walker & Co.—and himself manager of the Preston street greenhouses of the firm—and Miss Grace Garnett Funk, of West Point, Ky., a teacher in the Prestonia school, on the Preston road, were quietly married Thanksgiving evening.

CINCINNATI, December, 1915.

For immediate and the Holiday Trade we have the following choice plants to offer:

New Begonia MRS. J. A. PETERSON. We take pleasure in introducing, for the first time, this splendid novelty. The flowers are of a deep cerise, changing to a dark red as the flowers grow older; the foliage is of a dark reddish bronze, shading into green. It has been awarded a Silver Medal at the International Flower Show, in New York, March, 1915; Certificate of Merit by New York, Chicago and Pittsburgh Florists' Clubs. We offer good, strong plants, full of bloom, 6-inch pots, at $2.00 and $2.50 each.

Begonia GLORY OF CINCINNATI, Begonia MELIOR (new in 1914). No flowering plants of recent introduction have given better satisfaction or more flowers for the money; they last longer in bloom than any other class of flowering plants, if properly grown and taken care of. We have a splendid lot in bloom (now ready), full of flowers, strong plants, at 25c, 40c, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.50, $2.00 and $2.50 each.

CYCLAMEN PERSICUM GIGANTEUM. This strain is our own personally selected strain, and we do not believe it can be had better anywhere. The Market.

The last two weeks have been the best for the trade for many months. The Thanksgiving trade was heavier than last year; perhaps the heaviest local florists have experienced. The two features of this business were, first, a more general demand, not merely a heavy chrysanthemum day; second, a decided tendency to make the holiday a gift-sending occasion. The trade in potted plants and made-up boxes was heavy for several days previous to Thanksgiving.

There has been a heavy demand for funeral flowers and for flowers for society functions, a condition not usual immediately following Thanksgiving. More good mums are on the market than it is usual to see after Thanksgiving. They are selling well. A month ago it was feared mums would be in too early, but a decided change in temperature held everything back.

Roses are less plentiful than a fortnight ago, but there is enough of the ordinary grade for the demand. Valley is on the short side, as are lilies, though rubrums are fairly plentiful. Carnations are in heavy supply, but they have been cleaned up.

Begonias and other Christmas plants are making their appearance, as are made-up boxes. They are selling well. There is every prospect of early Christmas shopping, the streets being crowded. Greenhouse conditions are good, assuring a heavy supply for the holiday business.

Various Notes.

Wagon peddlers, few in number, report good sales of ferns and pot plants.

The writer has been especially impressed by some of the new begonias. Chatelaine appears to be about the best money-maker of the family, owing to its rapid, easy growth, freedom of bloom, and ease of propagation. Prima Donna is another good commodity.

The Joy Floral Co. will cut out Bonnaffons and some of the other chrysanthemums next season, and substitute newer varieties that, in its belief, will ship better.

L. Haury & Sons will move nearer to the heart of the business district after the first of the year. F. B.

The Market.

Business the last two weeks showed a general improvement in all lines. From all reports, Thanksgiving business was better than it was the previous season. Chrysanthemums are about done for. Carnations and roses are plentiful and are bringing good prices, with Russell the best seller.

Various Notes.

Baldwin reports a busy week in funeral work. This concern executed an order for a blanket of Killarney roses and valley and a number of large designs for the funeral of Miss Harriet Hand. Mr. Baldwin has added a motorcycle to his delivery equipment. The box on the side is six feet long and four feet high. The motorcycle attracted a lot of attention on the streets on account of the large side car.

The New York Floral Co. has some fine poinsettias and azaleas on sale. It reports a big increase in business, resulting from a larger and better window display. About December 15 it will open a branch store in Wilkes-Barre.

F. J. Moran, formerly with Baldwin, now is in the employ of the New York Floral Co., at 401 Spruce street.

B. E. & J. T. Cokely's force is working day and night rushing out Christmas orders. Mr. Cokely passed around the cigars last week—it's a girl.

F. W. Mackey reports a big sale on Boston ferns.

Muir & Co. were busy last week with funeral work and counter trade. Their store has on its Christmas attire, being decorated in red. F. J. M.

Good Poor QUALITY Better Best

Quality is a word of variable degree, whether applied to men or plants. Happily, it can be determined, and the test which brings out the best is the one that we seek. Last week we presented good evidence that our SILVER PINK SEEDLINGS were the best snapdragons to grow, and now comes the quality of the seed that we grow and sell:

G. S. Ramsburg,

Dear Sir:—Please send one packet seed Silver Pink Snapdragon. Both packets we got before averaged between 700 and 800 plants, which we sold for $5.00 per 100 right on the place, and ran short. Find enclosed check for $1.00.

Very truly,

WILLEY'S FARM.

Not a bit too early to sow seed for plants for early spring sales. Snap plants from four-inch pots in full bloom will bring double the price of geraniums at one-half the cost. Order today. New crop seed of our original Silver Pink Snapdragon $1.00 per pkt.; 3 for $2.50; 7 for $5.00. Fresh seed of Nelrose, Garnet, Yellow, White, and mixed, at 35c per pkt.; 3 for $1.00.

Plants of Silver Pink and Yellow at $5.00 per 100; $45.00 per 1,000. Other varieties later.

FORT WAYNE, IND.

The Market.

Business has been good, the demand active for funeral work and decorations for large social functions. The mum season is just about over, except for a few late varieties. Lilies are taking the place of mums as showy flowers for decorative and funeral work. Roses are in big demand, but are not abundant, owing to the close cut for Thanksgiving and the fact that many growers are holding back their stock for Christmas.

Carnations are scarce and, from the outlook, they will not be plentiful for the holidays. Orchids are scarce and gardenias are hard to procure. Violets are plentiful and sell readily. Valley sells well. Narcissi and stevia meet with a good demand. Asparagus plumosus is scarce.

The business during November was far better than for the previous November. The Thanksgiving trade netted fine returns, far surpassing those of the Thanksgiving of 1914. The flower stores are showing signs of Christmas activity. Many are displaying Christmas baskets, wreaths and novelties, which are selling well.

Various Notes.

The Flick Floral Co. had a large casket cover of Shawyer roses and valley for the funeral of Edward Coombs, a prominent business man.

Elmer D. Smith & Co., of Adrian, Mich., are shipping some handsome Chadwick to this market.

The Bradley Flower Shop, formerly in the Jefferson Theater building, has gone out of business. Mrs. Bradley will return to her former home in Chicago. The concern had been in business here for the last six years.

Visitors to this city were Larry Holland, of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, and Mr. Rosenbaum, of Wertheimer Bros., New York.

The Doswell Floral Co. is showing some handsome poinsettia plants and Christmas wreaths and greens.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Business last week was satisfactory to the grower, wholesaler and retailer. Everyone reports a clean-up in every line of stock. There was a large quantity of lilies of good quality, which helped to offset the shortage in other cut flowers. Chrysanthemums made a small showing towards the end of the week, Clay Frick and Helen Frick being the only two left. Roses were scarce but of good quality. Carnations are arriving in larger numbers, but there are not enough of them to fill the gap left by the mums. Paper Whites are more conspicuous. Pot plants were a big help to the cut flower departments, for a great many of them were used instead of cut flowers. Greens were scarce last week.

Various Notes.

Acting as a custodian of a greenhouse is vastly different from calling jurors and witnesses in a courtroom. H. Donnelly, deputy sheriff, discovered this the other night. He spent a night taking care of a greenhouse against which a judgment was rendered in the Circuit court. He had to act as fireman. He lost sleep and his hands were covered with blisters. Perhaps hereafter it will be an easier matter for florists to escape jury service.

The report from across the state line speaks of good business, a rush in all lines and enough stock to meet the demand. Funeral work was heavy last week.

J. Austin has a fine lot of small begonias which will be ideal for the holiday trade. He has finished cutting his mums.

W. J. Barnes is cutting a large quantity of yellow and white narcissi. He is putting his place in shape for the holiday trade.

The G. M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. has purchased a new automobile for its delivery service.

Visitors last week were Mr. and Mrs. Wilcox, of Council Bluffs, Ia.; P. J. Foley, of the Foley Greenhouse Mfg. Co., Chicago; Charles F. Meyer, of New York; H. C. Neubrand, representing A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn.

W. J. B.

Gloire de Chatelaine

We have a fine lot of plants in 5-inch pots, grown for the retail trade. We have kept the buds and blooms picked off until the plants have reached a good size and they are now ready to burst into full bloom. They will make fine stock for retailing from this time on and through the winter. They will be in great shape for Xmas selling.

We advise that you have them shipped now and allow them to come into bloom in your houses, as a plant in bud will always ship better than one in full bloom.

Greenhouse Heating.

WROUGHT iron boiler tube makers in the Pittsburgh district have notified the trade of an advance in price of tubes of $2 per ton. This is in harmony with the action of the steel tube makers, who took the same step earlier in the week.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

THE COAL MARKET.

After nearly a month of lively demand, the coal market is experiencing its regular December reaction or relapse. Many coal dealers hoped that in the last few weeks the trade had acquired enough momentum to bear it at full speed over the period of the annual lull, especially since the purchase of coal had been below normal all summer, but the lull is here, without any clear explanation or plausible excuse.

During the recent activity in the market, when most kinds of fuel were moving rapidly, the trade in smokeless was off at one side of the hurly-burly, maintaining a sluggish existence in a "Sleepy Hollow" of its own. Now the smokeless market at Chicago is still further demoralized by the dumping there of huge shipments of lump and egg. "For a good part of the week," we are told, "lump and egg have been sold at mine-run prices of $1.40 and dealers who had contracts for mine-run coal have canceled them in order to get the lump and egg to improve the quality of their mine-run. This threw a lot of mine-run coal back into the market which had to be disposed of at a cut in price. Sales were made freely at $1.25 and some few instances are reported where sales as low as $1.15 were accepted." Perhaps this was a final opportunity granted by Providence to florists whose coal bins were not yet chock-full.

PIPING A SMALL SASH HOUSE.

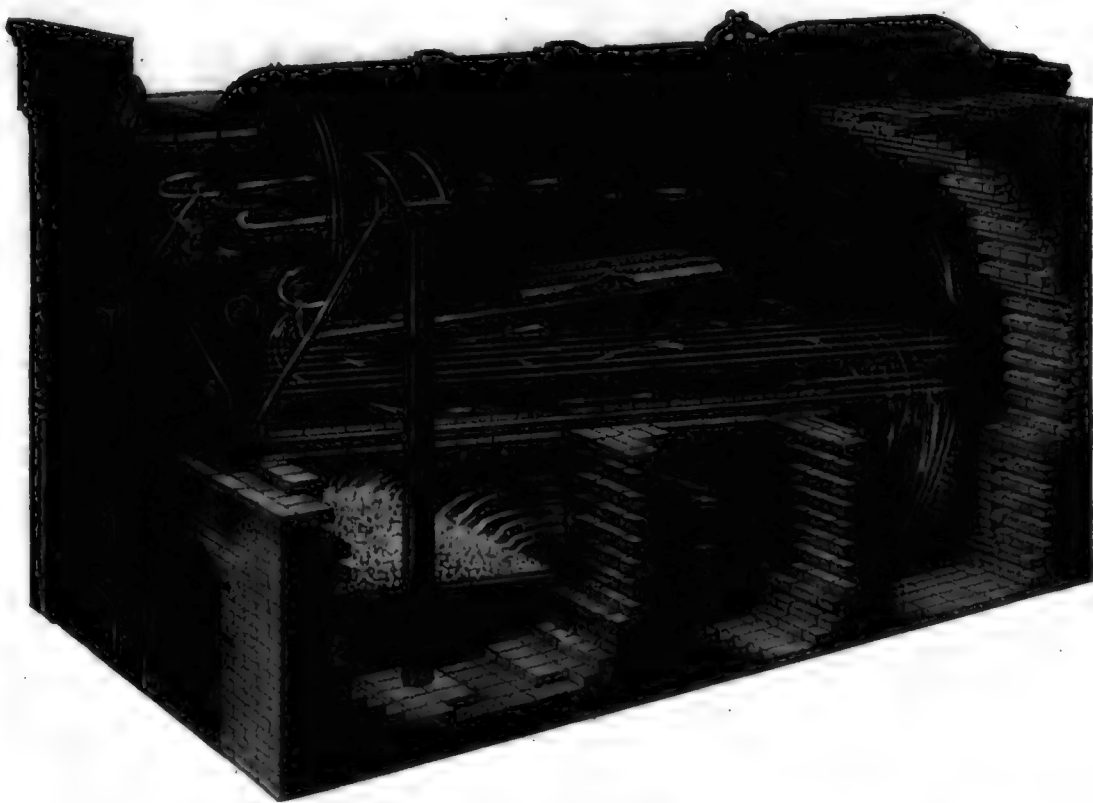

I am building a small greenhouse, 9½x19 feet, running north and south. There is a double-boarded base, rising one foot from the level of the ground and banked with earth to the top. On this base the house stands. The east side contains glass four feet high. In the two ends and west side there are three feet of glass and one foot of siding, lined with heavy rubberoid. This glass is in window sashes, fitted carefully in frames. The roof is made of twelve sashes, each three feet two and one-half inches by six feet, and the gables are three feet higher than the side walls.

The entrance is in the center of the north end, which is protected by a small shed of the same width and height as the main house. I am placing a good-sized coil, tank gas heater in this shed, and wish to know how to pipe the building for hot water. Can I use pipe all of one size, 1½-inch or 1¾-inch? Should the flow pipes be horizontal or

KROESCHELL FIRE & WATER TUBE BOILER

The new 1200 Horse Power Plant of the A. F. Amling Co., Maywood, Ill., will be equipped with four Kroeschell Fire & Water Tube Units each 300 Horse Power, set in batteries of two. This will be the most modern greenhouse boiler plant in the country.

The Kroeschell Fire and Water Tube Boiler Is Designed to Obtain:

A large storage capacity of water, affording abundant heat storage energy to respond to sudden demands for increased steam supply.

Large steam storage space, free steam liberating surface, and dry steam.

Thorough circulation to produce highest possible efficiency and rapid steam generating power.

Automatic self-cleaning, by which all scale forming material is deposited out of reach of the fire and where it can be readily removed. (Power plant owners who are forced to use bad water will appreciate the vital importance of this feature.)

Accessibility for inspection, cleaning, and repairs.

Perfect combustion under ordinary draft conditions.

Maximum heat absorption.

Absolute prevention of burnt or sagged plates.

A setting independent of boiler walls.

Freedom for expansion of all parts and equal expansion between shell and tubes so that there can be no leakage at tube ends.

Removal of gases at the rear.

Greatest possible capacity for a minimum of floor space.

Setting may be arranged for hand firing or mechanical stokers.

rise slightly as they near the far end? I was advised to place the flows up near the roof at the gable. The heater has 1½-inch and 1¾-inch openings. I expect to grow lettuce and sweet peas this winter, and tomatoes, celery, aster plants, etc., next spring. E. H. S.—Pa.

There are several methods of piping which would give good results in a house like the one described. A 2-inch flow pipe could be run a foot or so below the ridge and then dropped down at the farther end of the house, where it could be used to supply two coils of 1½-inch pipe. They should start near the middle of the south end of the house, and run to the corners and then back along the side walls to the heater. Another way would be to place a 1½-inch flow pipe on each wall plate, and at the south corners of the house each of them should be connected with a coil made up of the return pipes. If they are 1½-inch, there should be six pipes in each coil, but seven will be needed if 1¾-inch pipe is used.

It will be desirable to give the flow as well as the return pipes a fall of about two inches each, and the expansion tank should be connected with the highest point in the system. Unless the top of the heater can be dropped below the level of the returns, a mercury generator should be attached to the system.

USING 1½-INCH RETURNS.

I am about to erect a greenhouse and should like to get the right idea of the piping. The house will be 22x100 and twelve feet high to the ridge, and will contain about 3,000 square feet of glass, including the glass in the side walls.

The house will run east and west, with a store 16x20 in front. The west end will be fully exposed. The boiler shed will be at the north side, and the north and south sides of the house will be partly protected. The temperature wanted is 55 to 70 degrees, for miscellaneous pot plants. I have a lot of 1½-inch pipe on hand and should like to use it for the piping. Kindly specify the size of boiler that will be needed.

J. V.—Ill.

For a house 22x100, with 3,000 square feet of glass, to be heated to 60 degrees, I would use a boiler with a capacity for supplying 1,250 square feet of hot water radiation.

I would use three 2½-inch flow pipes, placing one on each wall plate and the other about three feet below the ridge. While better results would be secured by using 2-inch pipe for the returns, fairly good results will be obtained by using fifteen 1½-inch pipes in three coils, locating one coil on each wall and the other under the middle bench. If a temperature of more than 60 degrees is desired, one or more additional pipes may be placed in each of the coils.

THE RIGHT BOILER.

Can a tubular steam boiler be used for hot water? How many returns of 2-inch and 1-inch will be required to heat a house 22x50 feet to 65 degrees in zero weather? Would like to know, also, if the returns can be hung on the side walls instead of running them under the benches. M. B. S.—Ky.

A tubular steam boiler can be used for a hot water heater. The size of the boiler required will depend on its grate surface, but a 10-horsepower boiler would be large enough for the purpose; and, in fact, if you can get a smaller boiler with a grate containing four square feet of surface there should be no trouble in heating the house as desired.

We would prefer to use at least 1½-inch pipe for the returns unless they are well above the boiler, or a mercury generator is attached. We would use three 2-inch flows and ten 1½-inch or eighteen 1-inch returns, unless a generator is used, in which case the number of 1-inch returns might be reduced to fifteen. The foregoing estimate is with the understanding that there is no glass in the side walls and that the house is well built.

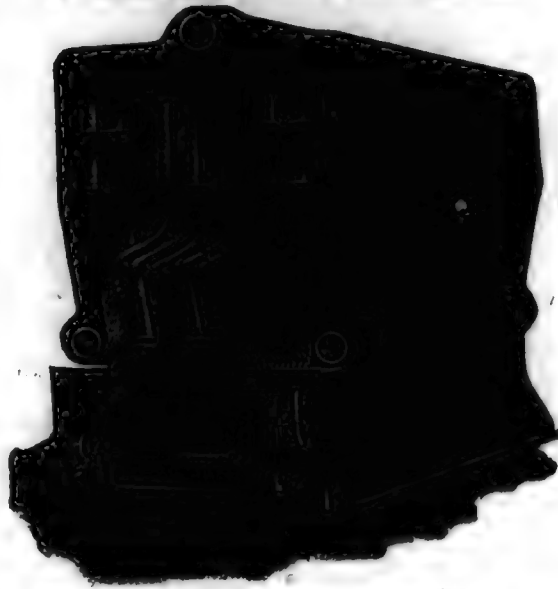

MOTT-LY MUSINGS.

Julius Eger, of Schenectady, N. Y., pointed to a window in his store that was filled with empty vases, in front of which was placed a large card which read, "Thank you," mute and satisfactory evidence of a big Thanksgiving business. M. P. Champlin, the Rosendale Flower Shop and J. W. Grupe all were busy. Hatcher's was taxed to the limit at Hoffman's to supply the stores at Schenectady and Amsterdam. E. V. B. Felthousen, of the Sunnyside Greenhouses, was glad of his release as a postoffice official for the day, to give his time at home. Altogether, it was the best Thanksgiving this city has experienced, in every respect.

Fred Goldring, of Slingerlands, N. Y., had a fine cut in prime shape for Thanksgiving and is well pleased with the returns.

THE HEATING PROBLEM SOLVED

Judging strictly according to mechanical merits, it's the METROPOLITAN PATENTED BOILER you want.

Because of their proven scientifically perfect construction, Metropolitan Patented Boilers will heat a given amount of water quicker, with less fuel and less attention than any other boiler on the market.

The remarkable heating efficiency and quick steaming qualities of these boilers are due to their large and effective heating surface.

Just a few points of Metropolitan Patented Boiler merit:—Smooth, perfect finished castings. Push nipple connections. Large fire box, providing ample combustion chamber, and permitting a sufficient charge of fuel to require attention only at long intervals. Deep ash pit, making the removal of ashes a slight task. Large flues, making the boiler easy to clean. Grates that are made for hard usage and long service. And above all, they are Fuel Saving, not Fuel Wasting.

We also make soft coal boilers which are smokeless, and save 50 per cent in coal.

Mann & Brown, of Richmond, Va., did not feel flattered when the city fathers recently included their property, consisting of some twenty-five acres and a big range of glass, within the city limits. The only consolation is that it is a splendid building tract and ere long must be too valuable for the present use. Stock is in fine shape. Belgian plants arrived in good order and are fully equal in quality to those of other seasons.

Fred Cowperthwaite, of the H. F. Michell Co., is authority for the statement that the presence of so many ladies at the pre-Thanksgiving entertainment given by the Florists' Club of Philadelphia will stimulate those in charge to consider them well during the big show next March.

The Market.

Business has been quiet, so everybody has had a chance to get ready for the Christmas rush. Mums are just about gone. Roses and carnations are off crop, with prospects for a good cut for Christmas. The weather is bright, with freezing temperature at night, which is about ideal for growing.

Various Notes.

The greenhouses of the William Blackman Floral Co. are in nice shape. This concern has a fine stock of Christmas plants, including poinsettias, ferns, azaleas, bulbous stock, primulas and cyclamens. Carnations are full of buds and will be just right. Roses will not be on for a large crop. Ed. Blackburn has bought a touring car and disposed of his horse.

Julius Niednagel & Sons have a fine lot of Christmas stock. The ferns, primulas, begonias and poinsettias all are excellent. The roses and carnations will be in nice crop for Christmas. Mums are about gone. Of the many thousand flowers they cut, there was only a small loss, the sales being extra good.

Miss Nellie Goodge has pneumonia.

Karl Zeidler and his son, Kunze, have returned from their hunting trip and report a great time. The party killed some big game.

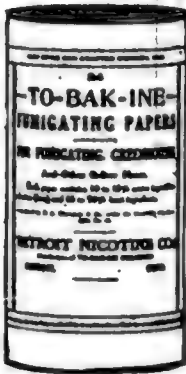

The Florists' Club will meet December 15 at J. C. Elsperrmann's.

Fred Chapman has a big batch of carnation cuttings in the sand.

J. C. Elsperrmann is still confined to his bed. His Christmas stock is in fine shape. He will have an excellent cut of carnations.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

Business naturally has not been so good as for the previous week, being about the same as the week prior to Thanksgiving. Consignments, although not so large, are of good quality. Good Beauties continue about the same, selling well. Poor ones are difficult to move. Russells and Richmonds are not so plentiful as they were. The old standard variety, Killarney, is more abundant. White Killarney is not selling so well. Carnations are arriving in large shipments, but they are none too plentiful and sell at a fair price. Although carnations usually have been overabundant after Thanksgiving, it has not been that way this season.

Chrysanthemums are still here, but in greatly reduced numbers. Their days have passed for the season. Pompons are also on the wane, but there still seems to be a call for the Wilcox. Easter lilies are on the market in large numbers. Callas are not so plentiful as they were. Paper Whites are here again and selling well. Violets of both kinds are about the same, only more plentiful. Some nice mignonette is on the market. Gladioli and snapdragons may be had if desired. Greens of all kinds clear easily. Boxwood and pine branches are arriving in abundance.

Various Notes.

John Schweichler, of North Tonawanda, is having marked success in marketing his begonias. They are as fine as can be had.

Charles Netsch reports that this year's business has been better than any of the past.

The Lenox Flower Shop had an attractive window. The business for Thanksgiving was good. To sum up, business for Thanksgiving in general was good, from the grower to the consumer. A. E.

The Market.

Trade has been heavy, with stock a little scarce in most lines. A few mums are to be seen, but they make little impression on the market. Consequently the demand for other flowers has increased accordingly and at times it is hard to get enough of certain kinds to go around. This is especially so with red carnations, which are far from meeting the demand.

Roses are of fine quality and are coming in about right to meet the heavy demand. The bulk of them are Killarney and White Killarney, Maryland, Richmond, Sunburst and Ophelia. Some growers are sending in Ward, but not in quantity. Beauties have been scarce. Carnations are coming in heavily. They find a ready market and are its mainstay at present. Valley has been somewhat scarce, with fair demand. Sweet peas are fine and heavy cuts are coming in from most growers.

Paper Whites are a favorite and, while large supplies of them are coming in, they are used up closely at all times. Violets are in heavy demand, both single and double, and the quality is about all that could be asked, unless for the stems on the singles, which are somewhat short.

Various Notes.

The Munk Floral Co. is putting in a new front, which will add greatly to the attractiveness of its store. It is also painting the interior.

T. J. Ludwig has a new delivery car. He looks for heavy business during the holiday season.

The Livingston Seed Co. has an attractive red window, the decorations consisting of red roping, ruscus and red azaleas.

Samuel Graff, of the Art Floral Co., has some nice gladioli, the first seen here. He still is handling a few mums.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. is cutting heavily on roses, carnations and narcissi.

Leo Miller has a heavy cut and reports trade good.

Plans are being made to have the florists undertake coöperative advertising in the local dailies. The initial advertisement will probably appear in season for the Christmas trade.

Club Election.

The Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island is instituting a campaign for membership. At the last monthly meeting the annual reports of officers and committees were presented, showing that while the organization has made no gains during the last twelve months, it has suffered no material losses. The attendance was one of the largest that the club has had in a long time and the enthusiastic spirit augurs well for the successful carrying out of the recruiting campaign. The matter of holding the annual banquet was discussed. The following officers were elected: President, James Dillon; vice-president, William Steele; treasurer, James Hockey; secretary, William E. Chappell; executive committee, Cornelius Hartstra, Owen McManmon and John Marshall.

HOW TO MAKE MONEY WITH CYCLAMEN

When a successful specialist tells how he won, his words are worthy of alert attention. In the main his manner of work may not be distinguishable from that of others, but somewhere in his methods lies the secret of his success. In this article a successful cyclamen specialist describes his methods.

THE natural order of events—first the growing and then the shipping—cannot be reversed, of course. Yet board of trade speculators, and even conservative seedsmen, frequently buy and sell crops, supposedly ripe crops, long before harvest time or even before the seeds are sown. They “deal in futures.” And in this article the last—the shipping—shall be first, because it probably has first place in the reader’s interest. Cyclamen shipping is so seldom discussed that there is no present danger of its being a stale or uninteresting subject. If the reader continues to read, however, he will find that the “growing end” gets due consideration farther on.

The Shipping of Seedlings.

In packing cyclamen plants for shipping, it is necessary, of course, to consider the time of year, but most cyclamens, from seedlings to blooming plants, are shipped in winter. Remembering that the plants are handled by inexperienced and often careless express employees, we should try to do at least a little better packing than is really necessary, thus providing for emergencies.

Seedlings are packed five to ten in a package, with the roots surrounded by moist, not soggy, sphagnum moss. They should be wrapped in paper up to the end of the leaves and tied with fine string or rubber. These little packages are set or laid side by side, not too tightly. Between the layers of seedlings is placed a double layer of paper. Not more than three layers of the plants should be allowed in a box. Use also a layer of paper to separate the varieties. The shipping box should be well lined first with strong, heavy express paper and from six to twelve newspapers, placed all around in such a way that the paper doubles up at the corners. Cleat the plants well, to prevent them from falling. Use newspapers and express paper on the outside of the box, to prevent damage from frost or other cause. Such a package will travel seven to ten days without injury to the plants.

Shipping Specimen Plants.

Specimen or blooming plants should be shipped in paper pots, as the roots of cyclamens are not strong enough to hold a pot-ball intact. Wrap the plants well up above the flowers, in newspapers, and tie at the pot as well as above. Use well nailed boxes, eighteen to twenty-four inches high, of ½-inch lumber, with the ends of 1-inch lumber, to nail the lid to. Line the boxes with heavy express papers and newspapers, according to the weather. Cleat every second row at least, and do not forget the invoice. A prominent sign, “Valuable Plants—This Side Up—Keep from Frost,” printed in large letters and, if possible, in two colors, on a plainly addressed shipping label, is essential for the protection of yourself and the buyer.

As to shipments in warm weather, open boxes or crates are used. The plants are put in paper pots and wrapped in paper so the leaves are free on top, to insure a circulation of air through the plants.

We should endeavor to let the express companies know that plants are not common merchandise, that they should steadily move onward on fast express trains and should be handled with special care. It is well, therefore, to have a sign on the box which reads like this: “Notice! If shipment is frozen or damaged in transit, notify express company at once. They are responsible.”

From Shipping to Sowing.

And now let us mutter, magician-like, these words of the old song: “Backward, turn backward, O Time, in your flight!” For we shall pass backward from the shipping to the sowing.

Nice, large blooming plants can be had by sowing well seasoned seed as early as the end of July and in successive batches till January. Some of those sown early in the season may be in bloom for Thanksgiving, but the larger percentage will certainly perform a profitable part in the Christmas trade. Of those sown later in the season, some may bloom for the holidays, but the majority will bloom continuously until March and April, so that the plants, if kept in a cool temperature, about 40 to 45 degrees, will be of good service for the Easter trade.

Packing Cyclamen Seedlings in a Specialist's Greenhouse.

Many disappointments will be avoided by selecting the best strains of seed, as on this depends, to a great extent, the future of the blooming plants. The soil should be of a light, porous kind, containing two-thirds leaf-mold, some loam and some old hotbed soil, with plenty of sand added. If you have no leaf-mold, old hotbed soil will be a good substitute. Under no circumstances use soil that will pack hard after a few waterings.

We sow in flats 3x12x20 inches, inside measurement. We fill the flats with soil, press it down lightly, make small trenches one-fourth of an inch deep, distribute the seed about one-fourth of an inch apart, and then fill the trenches and the general surface of the flats one-fourth of an inch above the seed. On top of this we place a thin covering of washed river or lake sand, to keep the surface free from moss.

The Seedlings in Flats.

The seed flats can be set in a cold-frame or a mild hotbed, preferably the latter, or they can be set in a greenhouse where there is not too much ventilation. It is advisable to put them under a greenhouse bench until the seeds start to germinate and then to set them on a bench where there is sufficient light to prevent the plants from growing spindly. Keep them well sprayed and loosen the soil between the little plants frequently.

After the seed leaf is well developed, they should be transplanted into flats. Plant the seedlings about one and a with from six to ten leaves, when they will be ready for a shift into 2½-inch or 3-inch pots. For this and the following shifts, it is well to use more loam each time.

Potting and Placing in Frames.

I prefer to grow cyclamens in pots after the first transplanting, as they can then be handled to better advantage; they also make stockier plants, and, last but not least, they set more buds. When they are shifted along into larger pots, they enjoy about one-fifth drainage of washed cinders or gravel, with a mixture of some coarse, shredded cow manure and broken up leaves.

Now, as the plants grow on, they can be potted so that the bulb extends above the soil about half, as the leaves will now shade the bulb and aid in retaining the moisture which is so essential in growing good stock. If the plants are potted too deeply, the leaves and buds may rot off and the plants will be flabby. In April or May they can be placed on a mild hotbed or on a greenhouse bench, and in bright weather they should be shaded. The shade should not be too dense. We use sashes 3x6 feet, the frames of which are 1x2 inches and strengthened by corner irons. To the frames we nail cypress laths one and a half inches wide, with 1½-inch openings. These sashes, dipped in paint, are durable, strong, and easy to handle.

The Culture in Midsummer.

Plenty of fresh air, with one to four

If the plants are wanted in bloom early, the final repotting should be done not later than August.

In growing cyclamens during the summer in frames, we use only the shades on them. The glass is not used except in excessively heavy rains. Here it is important to state that plenty of room is essential to the growing of good, well built plants. Do not make the great mistake of crowding the plants at any time, as this would mean poor, flabby, unsalable plants. If room is scarce, then dump some of the poorer plants and give the better ones more space.

Housing the Plants in Fall.

We commence to house our cyclamens in October. Here, again, it is necessary to give the plants plenty of room, all that can be spared, as now is the time when cyclamens make their strongest growth. Shade should not be required now. In fact, it would have been well to get the plants used to the bright weather while they were outside. Maintain a free circulation of fresh air all the time, to keep them stocky and strong. Water carefully, not dropping any water into the head of the plants. Syringe on bright days.

While cyclamens can be forced to some extent, it is poor policy to do it unless the most forward plants are taken into some other house which has a higher temperature. Do not try to force a few at the cost of all, or all of them will be a sorrowful looking lot a few weeks after the forcing. They are easily held back in a temperature as low as 40 degrees. Well rooted and potbound plants in their blooming pots appreciate a weekly application of cow manure and soot water; it gives them beautiful, glossy foliage and larger flowers, well colored.

To have extra choice specimens, it is well to select from the start the strongest and best built plants, with the finest foliage. Keep on selecting the best until you have the desired number, giving them the best place and care possible, and you will rejoice in the end in having some plants worthy of taking first prize at any notable exhibition.

Fighting Green Fly and Thrips.

As to insects, the green fly and thrips are the only ones that bother cyclamens. The green fly is easily kept in check with a nicotine solution, carefully applied once a week. This can be used as a spray, or the nicotine can be dropped on the hot pipes with a small oil can, or fumigating papers can be used with good effect.

Look out for thrips, the worst of all the cyclamens' enemies. You may have the finest batch of plants and yet the flowers will be unsightly, crippled and unsalable if the thrips get busy. Their nesting place is usually in the calyx of the flowers. It is hard to detect them with the unaided eye; yet they are there and it is well not to postpone fighting them until the flowers begin to open. The following solution, used once a week, especially before the blooming time, is sure death to thrips: Take five pounds of brown sugar and one pound of Paris green; mix dry; run through a fine screen to take out lumps. To apply, use two ounces of the mixture to two gallons of water. Apply this late in the afternoon. If the next day is clear, syringe the plants to prevent the leaves from burning. Do not half to two inches apart in the flats. As to the depth, plant so that the bulblets will be just covered with soil after the first good watering. This rule applies also to the next transplanting.

Set the plants near the glass, on a shelf or bench, preferably the former, as it insures finer root action. A night temperature of 50 to 55 degrees, with an increase of 8 to 10 degrees in the daytime, is about right. Here they will soon become sturdy little plants, syringings, depending on the brightness and heat of the day, produces healthy and sturdy plants.

Cyclamens are somewhat particular about the watering. The man with the hose can help a great deal in producing nice stock. Do not make the mistake of keeping the plants wet and soggy; they should dry out fairly well between waterings. Thus the soil will be kept sweet, which is an important point in growing choice cyclamens.

mix lime or alkali with the solution, as these would keep the thrips from eating the sugar and would kill the effects of the poison.

Cutworms and Other Pests.

Cutworms are another pest that must be well looked after. As soon as you find that cutworms are doing any harm, use four ounces of Paris green with one pound of molasses and one-fourth pound of middlings; mix well and drop the mixture in small lumps where you expect the worms to feed.

Mice are fond of the flower buds and may spoil a fine batch of plants before you know it. Look out for them. The price of a cyclamen plant invested in those small but effective spring traps is well spent in getting rid of these little fellows.

In the course of this article I have advised growing cyclamens in hotbeds or coldframes during the summer. Here I wish to say that it is more convenient to grow them inside if you have a well ventilated house, and by giving the plants plenty of room and the same care as they would have outdoors, you can produce just as fine a lot of cyclamens in an airy greenhouse as you would outside in the frames, but you must give them an abundance of room.

There is no winter-blooming plant that the florist can sell with more assurance of its being satisfactory than the cyclamen, and the growing of it is not difficult. A good strain of seed and the proper care should insure success and make the cyclamen one of the finest and most profitable plants on the market. Christ. Winterich.

SCOVELL'S SAMPLE CYCLAMEN.

As a convincing sample of what may be accomplished, and is regularly being accomplished, in the production of cyclamens, a plant grown by W. C. Scovell, of Malta, O., is shown to the reader by means of the illustration on page 14. The picture, of course, cannot furnish any proof as to one of the most satisfactory qualities of cyclamen plants—the great length of time they remain in bloom. That quality, however, is so well known and so thoroughly appreciated that it would be easy to collect evidence about it. Mr. Scovell himself bears testimony on that point.

The photograph was sent to The Review last spring. In the letter that accompanied it Mr. Scovell said: "The photo was taken March 11. At that time the plant carried forty-eight blooms, fourteen buds and a number of seed pods. It has been in bloom ever since the first week in December. It has now—March 26—twenty-nine flowers and two buds. Measured across the foliage, the plant is twenty inches wide. It has been a beauty all winter. My orchid-flowering cyclamen which was mentioned by The Review some time ago, as having one 5½-inch flower, had at one time this winter twenty-seven flowers that measured from four to five inches and had three 5-inch flowers."

CELOSIA PLUMOSA FROM SEED.

I wish to get some information regarding the sowing of the seed and the care of the growing plants of Celosia plumosa Pride of Castle Gould. I have tried for several seasons to grow this plant into a good-sized specimen, but it always blooms when several inches high. I used a loose soil, with the addition of rotted manure and a little bone. Any information will be gladly received. R. E. E.—Cal.

Celosia plumosa for fall flowering should be sown in May in pans. Pot off before the seedlings become crowded. Use a light but moderately rich soil. Keep the plants potted on before they have any chance to become pot-bound, or they will be of little value. Never mind if the plants show some flowers early, if you keep potting them along and use a suitable soil, which at the last shift should consist of one-half loam, one-third decayed cow manure and the balance leaf-mold and sand. Apply liquid manure freely when the flowering pots are full of roots. Any ordinary greenhouse will answer through the summer, but as the nights get cooler give them a minimum temperature of 55 degrees. Our plants, sown about May 15, are always in fine shape from the early part of October until the end of November and prove useful, coming in, as they do, when flowering plants are scarce. C. W.

Lexington, Mo.—Fall openings are the usual thing with department stores, but J. H. Eggleston is the first local florist who has instituted an autumn celebration as an annual event. For the occasion, F. R. Hoffman, manager, had an elaborate display of roses, mums and carnations, all of which were home-grown. A miniature wedding decoration was the hit of the display. Business has been unusually good. The warm weather, however, has been rather severe on the early violets.

LILIES FOR BRIDE'S BOUQUET.

A wedding bouquet, or any bouquet, for that matter, never is commonplace if taste is observed in the making of it. Not even the plainest or poorest bouquet could properly be called commonplace, for to say this would be to declare the flowers themselves uninteresting and ordinary. The difference in bouquets, therefore, is largely a question of the care and good taste exercised. The illustration printed herewith, of a bouquet that was arranged by N. O. Selby, of Middletown, O., for a wedding at Muncie, Ind., tells its own story. The bouquet was in close harmony with the decorations of the bride's home, where the ceremony took place. Hundreds of lilies were used about the house. The bouquet consists simply of valley and lilies, with a streamer of chiffon and showers of ribbon. The photograph was taken by Mr. Sherman, a photographer, in the store of Mr. Selby.

PENN'S NEW STORE.

The following is from a Boston daily: "December 15 the most modern and artistic home of flowers in New England, if not the whole United States, will be opened to the public by Penn, the florist, at 124 Tremont street.

"Not long ago Penn secured the store at the corner of Tremont street and Bosworth place, opposite Park Street church, and at once determined to have this new store ready for his friends' Christmas visit. The whole store was torn to pieces, and by the magic of human endeavor the most original flower shop possible begun and will not be completely finished until it is time for the doors to open this morning.

"Then the crowds that pour out of the subways at Park street will see before them the new store front of Penn, the florist, glowing in its gold trimmings and the new old gold marquee. The all-glass windows will afford a clear view into the shop, which is entirely surrounded by crystal windows or mirrors, except at the back, where marble pillars lead to the fountain court, a truly beautiful innovation in flower stores.

"Those who go down Bosworth place will pass by the broad window which fills all one side of the fountain court and offers a charming view of the interior.

"The selling section of the shop is tiled like all the rest in soft buff-colored stone, and the walls are of Caen stone blocks. The show windows are so fashioned as to make the interior of the store elliptical at the front with the door in the center, over which there is a white marble clock. The windows themselves are inclosed at the top with a green latticework, which affords all sorts of possibilities for artistic window decoration. Both the front and back of the show windows are of all glass construction, which practically makes the whole shop open to the light and to the view of passers-by, a veritable crystal palace of flowers.

"Probably the most unique thing and the most important improvement from the strictly practical viewpoint is the system of refrigeration. On either side of the store will be a refrigerating system of the newest type established, which is strictly hygienic in that it neither uses ice nor ammonia. This sort of refrigerator has never been used in a florist shop before, although generally adopted by the newer hospitals.

"At the back the visitor will see the crowning feature of it all, the fountain court. There, in the center of the tiled floor, spurts a wonderful Italian fountain by a Boston sculptor. The court is surrounded by eight marble pillars topped with an ornamental frieze. Above it is an iron and leaded glass ceiling which will light the court day and night, for at night there will be electric lights above the ground glass to take the place of the sun.

"This new flower shop, with its many beautiful features, will doubtless be a center of attraction during the holiday shopping season."

WEDDING DECORATING.

One of the discouraging features with which tradesmen in some of the smaller cities and the towns have to contend is a lack of the spirit of community enterprise or coöperation. Hundreds of communities in these United States, according to the statisticians, are slowly being wiped off the map because of lack of civic pride.

The experts who have made a study of community ills and their cure say the large cities—the metropolises—are growing more populous and wealthier at the expense of the smaller places. Looking at the matter in this light, a large city might be likened to an octopus, which, as its name implies, has a sac-like body, to which are attached eight long, snaky arms that feel out in all directions for sustenance. In the case of the large city its arms are the transportation lines, the telephone and telegraph lines, which reach out and draw trade from all the surrounding territory within a radius of fifty, 100 or more miles.

The best way to put a stop to the species of dry rot from which so many communities are suffering is for their people to buy at home. If he can't boost it, the man who is loyal to his home town won't knock it. He will try to think that the merchants of his town are just as good as or a little better than the merchants of the next town. And he will buy from them, for he will believe in keeping the money in circulation, as much as possible, where he made it. This is the pith of the community development idea. It is an idea that is fast spreading into a nation-wide movement that is bound to put every last one of the decadent towns of this country on its feet.

Hitherto it has been taken too much for granted that every man is a prophet save in his own home town, as applied especially to the butcher, the baker and the candlestick maker; the doctor and the dentist, the lawyer; and, yes, the florist. As community dwellers we, all of us, are coming to realize more and more that the shoes of Brown, of our town, are of good average quality and assortment; that Goldsmith is really an expert dentist, even though he is a next-door neighbor; that Jones, our grocer, can keep our larder supplied as well as can the average metropolitan store of the kind; and, to get right down to brass tacks—to the point about which this article should revolve, even if it does not—the public ought to realize, or, rather, the people of Bloomsburg, Pa., ought to appreciate that there are first-class florists at the J. L. Dillon establishment, equal to any emergency in their line; the people of Sedalia, Mo., ought to do the same by the Archias Floral Co.

Evidently they do, for the two illustrations herewith point the moral that should adorn this tale. The one illustration shows the photographed interior of the South M. E. church, of Sedalia, on the occasion of its being decorated by the Archias Floral Co. for the Knell-Meuschke wedding; the other, the interior of the First Presbyterian church, of Bloomsburg, decorated by the Dillon forces for the Thanksgiving day Bierman-Somerville wedding. In the latter instance the decorations consisted of palms, bronze and red oak leaves, bitter-sweet berries, and chrysanthemums. All over this broad land are scattered thousands of florists, outside of the larger centers of commerce, who have reached the standard of excellence attained by the Dillon and Archias concerns and the practice of going away from home for talent when a church is to be decorated is becoming less and less prevalent.

LOZIER'S NEW STORE.

In the words of its proprietor, the new store of H. E. Lozier, at 521 East Locust street, Des Moines, Ia., "is the result of a good many years of study and hard work in planning an ideal flower shop; one that is artistic as well as practical—one in which we can conduct our business on the highest plan and give complete and prompt service, and also keep an attractive and up-to-date display." The front and rear interior views of the Lozier store, reproduced on page 18, are visual proof of the proprietor's claim that "it is perhaps one of the best stores in the country."

The old store was at 410 East Sixth street. The new property was bought about a year ago and the building, of three stories and a basement, completely remodeled. This new store, 20x110 feet, has the best of equipment throughout, with ample room to handle a large amount of business. The fixtures are of quarter-sawed white oak and finished in natural forest-green stain. All the bases are of green Italian marble, and the tables and counter tops of glass in white.

The windows are of copper, glass and tile, no wood being used, for the reason that it might cause trouble by rotting out. Back of the windows are large plate glasses, which slide back and forth on fiber rollers, there being no frames; consequently there is no obstruction to the sight of passers-by and those entering and leaving the store.

Three refrigerators are used when running to capacity. The large display refrigerator is similar in finish and style to the other fixtures. It is equipped to use either ice or artificial refrigeration and has a cold-air ventilating system that can be used during cool weather. This, Mr. Lozier finds, is one of the store's best features, as it keeps the stock better with practically no expense. The size of this box is 10x10. In the back room is another box of equal size, which is used for regular stock. There is a cold-storage room 5x22 feet in the basement. It is used on special occasions, such as holidays, for reserve stock, being convenient on all occasions for greens.

A paragraph is made here for the especial purpose of calling the reader's attention to the hand-painted panels high up on both sides of the store.

THE MINNEAPOLIS FLOWER SHOW.

An Excellent Success.

The Minnesota State Horticultural Society held its forty-ninth annual meeting at the West hotel, Minneapolis, December 7 to 10, attracting a large number of people, and the Minnesota State Florists' Society, which is an auxiliary, took advantage of the favorable opportunity to stage an excellent flower show. W. H. Bofferding was superintendent.

The Outside Exhibits.

The exhibits of outside florists were the special feature of interest and the Chicago concerns were more numerous represented than ever before, showing some extra choice stock.

Bassett & Washburn, of Chicago presented their new red carnation, Belle Washburn, which was the subject of much comment.

H. N. Bruns, of Chicago, had the best exhibit of lily of the valley ever shown here.

The J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., of Joliet, Ill., exhibited two new carnations, Superb, light pink, and the new scarlet, Aviator.

The E. C. Amling Co., of Chicago, staged several varieties of the newer roses, also lilies, Paper Whites, anemone-flowered chrysanthemums, stevia, violets, sweet peas, marguerites, pansies and greens. A. C. Kohlbrand was in charge.

Gust Rusch & Co., of Milwaukee, exhibited a vase of choice roses.

Holton & Hunkel Co., of Milwaukee, sent a vase of choice Ophelia roses.

Weiland & Risch, of Chicago, originators of the new cherry pink rose, Champ Weiland, sent an exhibit of great interest to the growers.

The Windmiller Floral Co., of Mankato, Minn., displayed some choice poinsettias, which were considered to be the largest ever shown here. In measuring one of the flowers, it was found to be twenty inches in diameter.

John E. Sten, of Red Wing, Minn., took two first prizes on chrysanthemums.

Neil Neilsen, of Mankato, Minn., was high man in roses, taking three first prizes.

The Merriam Park Floral Co. won first prize on cyclamen. The plants were large and fine in both foliage and flower. Max Kaiser states that the plants with which he won first prize at the Chicago flower show were much smaller than the plants exhibited here. He stated that he was practically sold out of all blooming plants and reported the demand to be far in excess of last year.

The Minneapolis Floral Co. won seven first prizes, taking the sweepstakes. C. G. Anderson, manager, reports Christmas orders extremely heavy and a clean-up assured.

PROPAGATING FICUS ELASTICA.

Please give me some instructions on how to treat cuttings of the rubber plant, or Ficus elastica, in order to get good results. I have tried more than once to propagate this plant, but have never had good success. Will you tell me, also, what is the best time to begin two leaves. Other growers advise the use of cuttings seven or eight inches long, always the latest growth and cut just below a joint, retaining several leaves. These cuttings are inserted in 2-inch pots of sand and loam. The pots are plunged in some suitable material, and a steady bottom heat of 75 to 80 degrees is maintained. The leaves are drawn up and tied to a small stake, so as to save space and facilitate watering. After the first watering, the cuttings are kept only moderately moist. They should be well rooted before being shifted.

However, a much more common and more successful method of propagating rubber plants is the so-called mossing or ringing operation, which is performed on the tops of the stock plants, so that the roots are formed on the "cuttings" before the latter are severed from the parent plant. This system can be employed at almost any season of the year, but spring and early summer are the most favorable periods. The process consists simply of cutting the stem partly through, at any desired length, preferably below a leaf. Stick a couple of toothpicks or any small pieces of wood into the incision to keep it open. Then bind sphagnum moss tightly over, above and below the cut made. Keep it constantly moist, and to ensure this keep the stock plants in a warm, moist and shaded house, where they can be freely syringed. Just as soon as roots are seen peeping through the moss, cut the tops off and pot them.

The forcing of Easter lilies has been discussed in recent numbers of The Review. For instance, in the issue of December 9, page 39, you will find an article on the subject, and there are further hints on page 42 of the same issue.

GARDENERS' ANNUAL MEETING.Officers Elected.

President—William N. Craig, Brookline, Mass.

Vice-president—Theodore Wirth, Minneapolis, Minn.

Secretary—M. C. Ebel, Madison, N. J., reelected.

Treasurer—James Stuart, Mamaroneck, N. Y.

Trustees—Peter Duff, William Turner and William Duckham, of New Jersey; J. F. Huss, Connecticut, and William Kleinheinz, Pennsylvania.

Nearly a Thousand Members.

With the large accession to the membership made at the convention at Boston, the annual report of Secretary Ebel showed that the National Association of Gardeners has nearly 1,000 members. The attendance at this meeting was largely local, but the affair was a pronounced success. The first day, December 9, was devoted to indoor affairs, the second to sight-seeing.

The business session, in Horticultural hall, was opened by President Farquhar, of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, who, at the conclusion of his own remarks, introduced Mayor Curley and then John H. Dillon, chairman of the park board, each of whom had something pleasant to say of gardeners and gardening. J. W. Everitt, president of the association, then took the chair and conducted the afternoon's proceedings, the essays and discussions on topics pertaining to the occupation of private gardener being full of interest.

The following papers were read:

"Is Gardening a Profession?" by W. W. Ohlweiler, of the Missouri Botanical Garden, St. Louis.

"The Management of Country Estates, from the Viewpoint of the College Graduate," by Morell Smith, superintendent of Kiluna Farm.

"The Young Gardener's Opportunity in this Country," by Henry Gibson, New York.

"Is Cooperation Between Garden Clubs and Gardeners' Societies Desirable?" by William Gray, secretary Newport Horticultural Society.

The Dinner.

Dinner was served to 125 at Horticultural hall after the business session December 9, everyone being the guest of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club and the horticultural interests of Boston. Entertainers furnished music during the banquet, the selections by Miss Annette Luvick being much enjoyed.

W. N. Craig acted as toastmaster and the following, among others, responded: President Farquhar, for the Massachusetts Horticultural Society; John H. Dillon, for the city of Boston; Patrick Welch, for the S. A. F.; John W. Everitt, John Canning, Michael H. Norton, as one of Boston's oldest florists; S. J. Goddard, for the American Carnation Society; William Nicholson, who enthused over the Cleveland show; William P. Rich, Robert Cameron, P. W. Popp, who was humorous, as usual; James Stuart, M. C. Ebel, Joseph Manda, James Methven, Duncan Finlayson, John F. Huss, Prof. A. H. Nehrling, Wm. McMachan, William Downs, W. J. Kennedy, W. J. Stewart, William Kleinheinz and last, but by no means least, A. P. Calder, who was as eloquent as ever.

The Exhibits.

There were quite a number of interesting exhibits in the lecture hall of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. Among these were the following: Begonias Optima, Aureana, Winter Cheer, Cincinnati and Lorraine, from William Downs; Begonia Lorraine and a collection of calanthes, from Duncan Finlayson; Plumbago coccinea and a new pink antirrhinum, from W. C. Rust; Rose Mrs. Bayard Thayer, from Waban Conservatories; Carnation Alice, from Peter Fisher; Miss Theo, from Littlefield & Wyman; Morning Glow, from Edward Winkler; Grace, No. 360 and several other fine seedlings, from Albert Roper; Spiraea Queen Alexandra grown from cold storage roots and a fine collection of lily bulbs dug with their roots, from John Scheepers & Co.; pottery, from A. H. Hews & Co.

William N. Craig.

(President-elect, National Association of Gardeners.)

The W. W. Edgar Co., Thomas Roland, S. J. Goddard, Alex. Montgomery and others furnished plants or cut flowers for the decoration of the lecture hall and dining tables.

Judges' Report.

William Kleinheinz, J. F. Huss and P. W. Popp were appointed a committee to pass on the exhibits. Their report was as follows:

Vote of thanks to A. H. Hews & Co., Cambridge, Mass., for a display of pottery.

Via Automobile.

An automobile trip was tendered the visitors December 10. The estates of Prof. C. S. Sargent, Larz Anderson and E. D. Brandegee were visited, also the Arnold Arboretum, including the Administration building, Franklin park, the Blue Hills Metropolitan Reservation and, finally, the Dedham nurseries of Farquhar & Co., where lunch was served, following which an inspection of the greenhouses was made. The journey back to Boston via the park boulevards ended a pleasant day's enjoyment, although the maximum temperature of the day did not exceed 20 degrees and a strong wind was blowing.

Side trips were made by members of the association to Thomas Roland's, Nahant, and to Waban Conservatories, and to some of the private estates, while quite a number stopped off with John F. Huss, at Hartford, Conn., on the home journey, later visiting A. N. Pierson, Inc., at Cromwell, Conn.

Among the Visitors.

Among visitors from a distance at the convention were William Kleinheinz, Ogontz, Pa.; John S. Hay, Philadelphia; W. C. Sperling, New York; Arthur Smith, Reading, Pa.; J. F. Huss, Hartford, Conn.; John Canning, Ardsley, N.

Y.; James Stuart and P. W. Popp, Mamaroneck, N. Y.; M. C. Ebel, Madison, N. J.; A. H. Nehrling, Amherst, Mass.; V. T. Sherwood, Charlestown, N. H.; Joseph Manda, East Orange, N. J.; J. W. THREE LIVELY CLUB MEETINGS

CHICAGO.

The Annual Meeting.

For the number present, which was not large, and for an unqualifiedly business session, the meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club at the Hotel Morrison, December 9, was marked by a most unusual display of good-natured badinage. In fact, it afforded more real enjoyment to the members than many of those in which elaborately planned entertainment programs featured large. This, perhaps, was due to the spontaneity of the wit and chaff that so effectually kept everyone in a continual state of jollity.

As all applications for membership submitted at the last meeting were acted on at the time, there remained nothing to be done in that direction. Three applications were presented during the evening. They were those of J. E. Pollworth, 6943 South Park avenue; W. W. Randall, 174 North Wabash avenue, both of Chicago, and Michael Stachnik, Niles Center, Ill. Two reinstatements also were reported by the secretary. They were A. T. Hey, Maywood, and Samuel Pearce, Chicago.

Secretary French reported for the benefit of those who wished to attend the annual exhibition and convention of the American Carnation Society, to be held at St. Louis, January 26 and 27, that they can secure the advantage of a one-way fare amounting to $5.80. The matter was referred to the transportation committee.

Secretary N. P. Miller, of the flower show executive committee, made a report on the recent Grand Floral Festival, which was not acted on, as it is not yet complete.

A communication from Richard Vincent, Jr., was read inviting the members of the club to become members of the American Dahlia Society. The secretary was instructed to acknowledge its receipt and place it on file. Next, a communication from William Amling, of Maywood, one of the nominees for the office of club president, was read. This letter should rank as a masterpiece among encomiastic documents. It abounded in terms laudatory of A. Henderson, the other nominee for the office, and urged the acceptance of the writer's withdrawal and the unanimous election of Mr. Henderson. Not to be outdone in generosity, Allie Zech, who was perforce absent, as he is captain of the club bowling team, which was in action, was the author of a letter in which he apprised the club of his withdrawal as a nominee for the office of secretary and said many things highly complimentary to Guy W. French, the other nominee.

The next order of business was the election of officers. A. Henderson was elected amid much clapping of hands, the secretary casting one ballot for the club. In like manner William E. Tricker was elected vice-president, Guy W. French, secretary, and Paul R. Klingsporn, treasurer. After the casting of each ballot by the secretary there were loud calls of "Speech! Speech!" Mr. Henderson thanked the club for the willing to stand watch over all the money the members would undertake to bring in.

H. N. Bruns repeatedly urged upon the officers his withdrawal as a candidate to succeed himself as trustee, but they either turned a deaf ear or found him out of order at every attempt, with the result that he was reelected trustee in spite of himself. After the various successful candidates were duly congratulated there was a liberal exchange of pleasantries from which few escaped.

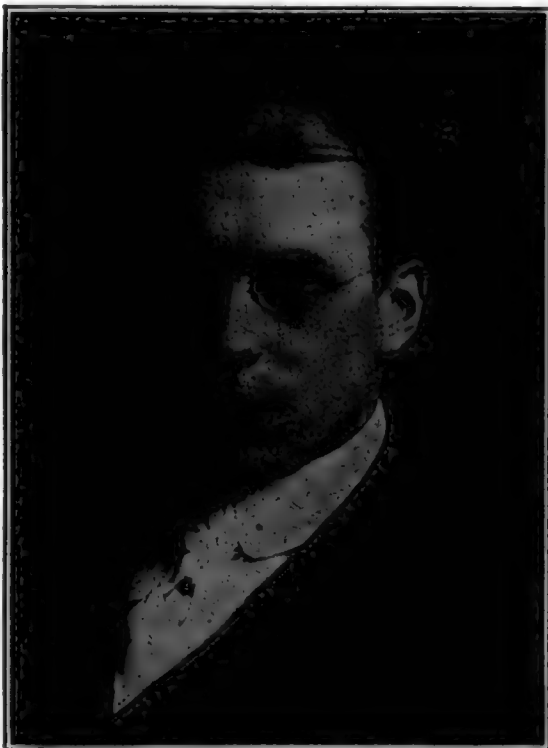

PHILADELPHIA.

The December Debate.

The new essay committee of the Florists' Club, under the leadership of G. C. Watson, is infusing real ginger into the club meetings. Its idea seems to be that an essay committee need not confine itself to essays; something more stirring, by way of variety, would be of advantage. So the committee thought, or so it is supposed to have thought when it opened the season by announcing a series of debates on live topics. The second of these debates was held at the December meeting, a brief account of which was given in last week's Review.

A curtain raiser, so to speak, in the shape of a resolution to cut down the initiation fee, brought on a lively skirmish. The election committee wanted to bring every good florist in the city under the club's banner by next spring and so favored the change. Fred Cowperthwaite opened the fight in a vehement talk supporting the measure. Adolph Farenwald replied, ridiculing the committee's move toward cheapness. Fred Hahman followed in support of the measure with one of those carefully thought out speeches that always have won the approval of his fellow members. W. F. Therkindson opposed the resolution, believing the price moderate and that once lowered it would be difficult to raise it again. Leo Niessen closed the committee's side of the argument in good style. The motion was lost, however, two to one, but its supporters received recognition in the adoption of Mr. Therkindson's motion that the initiation fee be suspended during January, February and March.

President Burton promptly called for the subject of the evening—"Is it Wise for the Producer to Depend Entirely on confidence reposed in his good judgment, and said he would endeavor to live up to the specifications. The vice-president-elect also thanked his fellow members for the honor conferred upon him. Guy French said he could not promise to bring in as many members during the following year as he has brought in during the last year, but that he would promise to do his best. Paul Klingsporn expressed himself as the Enterprise of the Retailer for Marketing His Products?" Charles H. Grakelow appeared to take the affirmative side of the question with that air of aplomb that his friends know and admire. Aplomb, of course, is a French word that is said to describe something that English fails to do; easy confidence is the nearest we can come to it. To resume, Mr. Grakelow said that he felt absolute certainty as to his being on the right side of the argument. He skillfully outlined the result of a producer's action in selling some of his flowers to chance buyers and by so doing disappointing his regular customer, the retailer. With clever anecdote Mr. Grakelow showed that there should be sympathy between the grower or his agent, the wholesaler, and the retailer, so that they might work together for the common good.

When Mr. Grakelow sat down, the retailers looked jubilant, the growers uneasy—some a trifle guilty. W. F. Therkildson took the floor for the negative—his maiden effort at the club—with confidence that matched Mr. Grakelow's. He avoided the treacherous sands of the retailer expecting the flowers that his faithless grower never sent, and took a different line. He ridiculed Mr. Grakelow's idea of sympathy, saying that the retailer's sympathy depended largely on the public favor shown the stock offered. The retailers liked, Mr. Therkildson insisted, to pick out what they wanted and let the rest go to the ash barrel; it mattered little. The thing for the grower to do, Mr. Therkildson said, is to create a demand for his product. Turning to the president, he dramatically exclaimed, "Make them want Burton's roses! Let people know these roses are the best and every first-class retailer will have them for his customers." Continuing, Mr. Therkildson pointed out the value of advertising, with examples from the dailies, of Victorias and razors that every big retailer offered because people wanted them, not because they were better than other machines or blades of the same kind.

Mr. Grakelow regained the floor in rebuttal. His aplomb increased as he saw victory within reach. "The comparison," he said, "between machines and perishable goods is absurd. Imagine a grower spending time and money to advertise a rose, for instance, that he might not be able to grow the next season! Take Meteor, the leading rose in its color fifteen years ago; it is unknown today; so with Bride and Bridesmaid, and many more. Anyone would be foolish to spend money in this way. What he should do is to keep in touch with his retailer; work with him and depend on him to find a market for his product."

Mr. Therkildson rallied for his closing argument in surrebuttal, and did not allow himself to become dismayed from start to finish. The claim of his opponent that perishable goods could not be compared with those that were not perishable was without foundation, he announced. "Was not milk perishable? What about various kinds of food? Was not money spent in making people familiar with the merits thereof, and so encouraging demand for them in the retail shop?" Mr. Therkildson described the methods used in stimulating the demand for various products and urged that many of these methods might be advantageously adopted by growers of cut flowers and plants.

Mr. Farenwald said that he believed both speakers were right. He instanced Robert Simpson, of Clifton, N. J., who advertised his product every day of the year by aiming to get it to his wholesaler in the best possible condition for the retailers' use. After considerable discussion by other speakers, the club voted in the negative, believing that some effort should be made by the growers to increase the demand for their product, not in the tricky way of taking flowers from the retailers when they wanted them, but in the broader way of doing something to increase public interest in their product.

NEW YORK.

The Annual Meeting.

Notwithstanding the blizzard December 13, the attendance at the annual meeting of the New York Florists' Club was up to the average, about 100 of its 450 members braving the rigors of winter and taking part in the election of officers for 1916. The balloting resulted as follows:

President—Henry Weston.
Vice-president—G. E. M. Stumpp.
Secretary—John Young.
Treasurer—W. C. Rickards.
Trustees—Charles Schenck, Robert Wilson, Max Schling.
Interesting addresses were made by each of the new officials present, pledging loyalty and enthusiastic service.

H. F. Winter and C. H. Allendale were elected to membership.

A. L. Miller suggested that the National Flower Show at Philadelphia appoint one day as New York day and Messrs. Miller, Duckham, Traendly, Totty and Manda were appointed a committee to complete arrangements to this end, including a special train for the New York delegation.

Messrs. Traendly and Miller reported progress in the way of cups and cash prizes for the New York spring show, and President Bunyard suggested contributions and prizes from all the club's members. The prospects for a great success seem already assured.

Resolutions on the deaths of E. Molz and Mrs. Dorval were read and ordered spread on the minutes. Messrs. Vick, Sperling, Deamud, Rickards and Bunyard were appointed a committee to draw up resolutions on the death of W. Atlee Burpee, of Philadelphia.

R. Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, Md., addressed the club on behalf of the American Dahlia Society, already having a membership of nearly 300. He reported a widespread interest in this society, of which he is president, and which he said will win a record of over a thousand members before the close of its first year's existence. The prospect for representation on the executive board of the S. A. F. is encouraging, he said. Mr. Vincent will give a stereopticon lecture December 16, before the International Garden Club, Pelham Park, N. Y., on "The Dahlia and the Geranium."

The exhibits were most interesting. R. J. Irwin staged pompon chrysanthemums and Charles Smith's Sons, of Woodside, showed their new mum, Mistletoe, a large late white with pink shading; also a fine vase of their new single mum, unnamed, pink and greatly admired. These were staged by Philip Kessler.

A. J. Guttman staged a seedling carnation, Emma, from Frank Dinda, of Farmingdale, and a vase of Gorgeous from B. Willig, of Poughkeepsie. The club's thanks were accorded these.

Mr. Guttman also placed on exhibition the rose from the Florex Gardens which has been exhibited before as Prima Donna. It was asserted that this rose has been known to rose growers for years as Mme. Paul Euler. At the last meeting of the club an award of merit was accorded the rose under the name Prima Donna and after some discussion by Messrs. Totty, O'Mara and Wallace R. Pierson it was voted to rescind this award and place the exhibit of the rose under its original name, to which Mr. Guttman readily assented. The committee then gave the rose a standing of eighty-six points and a preliminary certificate.

The New President.

Henry Weston was born at Enfield, London, England, in 1866. He served four years' apprenticeship with H. B. May, at Edmonton, and came to New York in 1888. In America his first engagement was with W. C. Wilson, of Astoria, L. I., where he was foreman for two years. He left Astoria to take the management of the L. L. Lorillard estate. After two years with Harry Chappell, of Williamsport, Pa., he accepted a position with the late Herman Dyer, of Woodside, L. I. Twenty-two years ago he commenced business on his own account in both the wholesale and retail line and has now 85,000 square feet of glass devoted to a great variety of stock, sweet peas and carnations being his specialties. For seven years he was president of the Growers' Cut Flower Co. He is president of the school board in his home district, was grand master of the Shield of Honor Society, and is a prominent Odd Fellow.

Pocahontas is conceded to be the best of all the crimsons. It is of high quality, has a good, stiff stem and never splits. It is as free as Enchantress and is a steady bloomer.

Yellow Prince is the only yellow to grow. A limited quantity should prove valuable to any grower.

Benora is the variegated sort that is grown to the exclusion of all others. It is free-flowering, has a good stem and calyx, and keeps exceptionally well.

J. D. should plan to buy a limited quantity of each of the new varieties as they are offered to the trade. He will not get a good one every time, but he will get what good ones are offered and his list of varieties will always be up-to-date. It is not best to wait until after a variety has been on the market long enough to make sure of its worth. By that time it has spent at least two years of its life and the life of a variety is short enough at best. You want the good ones just as soon as you can get hold of them and you can afford to put up with a few failures to get the good ones. And, after all, the failures are really not so many, if we would only have patience to give them a thorough trial and a fair chance.

A. F. J. B.

WANTS MORE VARIETIES.

Will A. F. J. B. give me some help in the selection of carnations to be added to my stock? I can judge their merits only by comparison with the Enchantress varieties, which are the only ones I grow. I wish especially to get particulars about the comparative productiveness of the proposed varieties, their quality, their ease of propagation and the size which they attain in the field. The Enchantress varieties do excellently for me, but I wish to try some others.

J. D.—Pa.

Perhaps there has never been a family of carnations more peculiarly adapted to the wants of the smaller grower than Enchantress and its sports. They make good plants in the field, propagate easily and thrive under ordinary culture, giving a fair grade of blooms where other varieties would be almost worthless. That does not mean, however, that this strain is perfect, because, after being tried thoroughly, it was found to be wanting in some essential points, and expert growers are turning to other varieties to a large extent. They have found that by giving each variety the little special treatment required, just as the rose grower and mum grower do, they are able to turn out an article far superior in some of the essential qualities. Here are some of the best varieties:

White Wonder will outbloom White Enchantress nearly two to one. The color is better and there are fewer splits. It makes a fine plant in the field and comes into bloom early, with long stems, and the production is steady through the season.

Matchless will give just about the same number of blooms as White Enchantress. The form of flower is better, and it will keep twice as long and ship twice as far without bruising or going to sleep. There are no splits and the stem is wiry. It sometimes shows a pink flake in the petal.

Enchantress Supreme is a sport from old Enchantress. It seems to excel the parent variety in all particulars except the keeping qualities, which are about the same in both. Enchantress Supreme has a better color and does not split the calyx.

Pink Delight is a much better shipper and a freer bloomer. The bloom when it opens is smaller, but it grows until almost as large as Enchantress. Growers who ship their stock are planting this variety in increased quantity from year to year.

Alice is making friends by its persistence in blooming. The blooms are hardly as large as those of Enchantress, but almost twice as plentiful. It seems to keep well and should be a good one for almost any grower.

Mrs. C. W. Ward is conceded to be near perfection as a medium pink, as far as quality is concerned, but anyone who has ever grown it will agree that it is not as free as Enchantress.

Good Cheer seems to be one of the best, if not absolutely the best, of last spring's offerings. It is a lively medium pink, with a fine stem. It has no splits and is a free bloomer. It should make a fine shipper, as the blooms have exceptional keeping qualities.

Champion is making good here as a commercial scarlet. It will come into bloom just as early as you will let it and will bloom freely. The flowers have good color and size, and last well.

DO NOT USE TOBACCO STEMS.

I wish to get a little information about the fumigation of carnations with tobacco stems. I have carnations and sweet peas in the same house. The sweet peas are in bud and the carnations need fumigating. Could I fumigate the carnations without affecting the sweet peas in any way, or would they be caused to drop their buds? There is another question, also, which I should like to have you answer. When I filled my propagating bench, I put some ashes at the bottom, but I watered the ashes well before putting on the sand. Will the ashes injure the cuttings in any way? I understand that there is an acid in the fresh ashes, but I believed that if I watered them well I could get the acid out.

W. G. F. G.—Mo.

It is better not to fumigate with tobacco stems at all. There is danger of getting the smoke too strong and causing the sweet pea buds to drop. Up-to-date growers do not employ this method of fumigation any more. Those who do fumigate that way seem to labor under the false impression that they are saving money because they can buy tobacco stems for next to nothing. They do not take into account the inconvenience and loss occasioned by their use. The modern method is to use a nicotine extract, either spraying it on the plants with a compressed air sprayer or vaporizing it by putting it on the steam pipes.

Those ashes will not injure your cuttings, but I do not understand why they should be required.

POISONOUS GAS IN HOUSES?

Every grower has trouble of his own, but we seem to have more than our share of it. Our trouble is rust, or what appears to be rust. The disease first attacked the mums, the leaves showing the ravages quite plainly. Then a bed of 1,000 lettuce plants wilted, turned black and succumbed. Following this, a batch of potted tomato plants, which were scheduled to follow the mums, went down to defeat. It appeared as if more moisture was needed in this case. Then a new lot of roses wilted and turned black. Four varieties of primulas went by the same route. Our begonias, geraniums, ferns and miscellaneous plants do not give any evidence of being touched by the disease.

As remedies we have used lime, sulphur and tobacco dust in the soil, and have fumigated the houses with sulphur. All affected stock has been discarded. The beds not planted to anything have been treated with lime, sulphur, tobacco dust and salt. We use hot water heat and the houses are well ventilated. Is there anything else we can do to check the disease? Any information will be appreciated.

C. F. C.—Kan.

I can readily understand the rust being on the mums, but I do not understand why the lettuce and tomato plants wilted and turned black. This would indicate that the water is strongly impregnated with alkali, or that there is poisonous gas in the house.

According to your description, the rose trouble probably is due to gas, but you are in a position to know whether there are gas pipes through the houses or in the immediate vicinity. Plants do not wilt and turn black without some well defined cause. I would not recommend the use of lime, sulphur and tobacco dust in the soil, as the roots will never work freely through a soil that has either sulphur or salt in it.

I think C. F. C. has tried too hard to rectify the trouble on his plants and that the cure has been as bad as the disease. I would suggest that he throw out the soil that has received the applications of sulphur, etc., and fill in with new loam. With new soil and, as before stated, seeing that no poisonous gas is escaping from pipes, there is no reason why C. F. C. should not have success.

The widely advertised prize of $1,000 for novelty roses offered by the Panama-Pacific Exposition Co., San Francisco, has been awarded to Alexander Dickson & Son, Belfast, Ireland. The successful variety is rich yellow, with long, full bud.

MORE IMMORTELLS.

In common with other horticultural supplies from Europe, shipments of immortelles from France continue as in other years. Instead of being scarce and high-priced, as one would at first thought believe, immortelles are in sufficient supply to meet the demand, and prices are on the easy side, because the foreign markets have not been able to dispose of their usual quantity this year.

the bankrupt at a meeting to be held before Referee Atwood L. De Coster, in the Bankruptcy court, at Newark, December 20. A private bid of $14,250 recently was made for three acres of the Lum property, the homestead, greenhouses, barn, plants, flowers and other property, but the attorney representing creditors with claims of $23,000 protested in behalf of his clients, against the acceptance of the offer. The creditors' counsel stated that the greenhouses alone cost $52,000 to build and the residence is worth at least $25,000. Moreover, he said, the creditors themselves offer $22,500 for the property. The arguments for and against the acceptance of the bid of $14,250 were heated and a lively session is expected December 20.

ANOTHER WHITE SPORT.

How does it happen that so many of the new things this year are sports? Can anybody tell?

At any rate here's another. It is Chrysanthemum Elvia Scoville, a white sport of Wells' Late Pink, which originated with Walter Angus, a private gardener at Chapinville, Conn. The entire stock recently was acquired by A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., and will be disseminated as an exhibition variety.

Just as an item of interest, the flower used for the photograph reproduced on this page was received on the Pierson place the day W. R. Pierson, the official photographer, left for the Cleveland show, so it was photographed nearly two weeks later, showing the excellent keeping qualities of the variety.

OBITUARY.

William H. Johnson.

William H. Johnson, for many years a florist at Worcester, Mass., died at his home in Worcester December 6. Mr. Johnson was born in England seventy-six years ago and came to this country when a young man. He is survived by his wife, two daughters, Miss Grace Johnson and Mrs. Oscar Hoyle, and two brothers, Charles and Henry.

Samuel Bide.

To many Americans the name of Samuel Bide is familiar through the purchase of his rose novelties and nursery stock. He was head of the firm of S. Bide & Sons, Alma Nurseries, Farnham, England, and died November 25 at the age of 73. He died in harness, as he was busy on the previous evening with various matters connected with the business. His sons, A. R. and H. E. Bide, have taken a prominent share in the management, so that the control of the business for the future will be in able hands.

Thirty-second annual convention, Houston, Texas, August 15 to 18, 1916.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

WAS it a florist who first wrote Christmas as Xmas, with the X large, as on ten-dollar bills?

THE question who is and who is not entitled to trade prices never can be settled by rule, but always will be determined by the exigencies of the seller.

THE prediction is made that the call for cuttings of Matchless carnation this season will be even stronger than a year ago. It is gaining new friends every day.

THERE have been times and places, of course, where chrysanthemums did not do well, but on the whole the trade has enjoyed one of the best mum seasons of recent years.

NEW FLOWER-HOLDER PATENTED.

A patent has been granted to Antonio Salari, of Bisbee, Ariz., assignor of one-half interest to William Ledgerwood, also of Bisbee, for a novel flower-holder that is designed to contain flowers worn on the person. The holder is attached to the garment of the wearer by means of a pin and has a novel device whereby moisture can be supplied to the flowers. The receptacle containing the moisture is so constructed that the contents cannot escape, thus avoiding the possibility of soiling the garment to which the holder is attached. Mr. Ledgerwood states that the invention will be manufactured and marketed later on.

HONORABLE MENTION.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper. Among those who have this week enrolled themselves for more than one year in advance are:

The Review stops coming when the subscription runs out. The green notice with the last copy tells the story; no bills are run up; no duns are sent.

A. C. S. PREMIUM SCHEDULE.

Secretary A. F. J. Baur, of the American Carnation Society, announced under date of December 9 that the premium schedules covering the exhibits at the annual meeting of the society, to be held at St. Louis, January 26 and 27, 1916, would be mailed in a few days. In Mr. Baur's own words, "the delay was caused by mouth disease"—there is no trouble with the secretary's foot—an ulcerated tooth, which had confined Mr. Baur to his home for a week.

PLANTS SELLING WELL.

From all reports, the growers who specialize in blooming plants for the holidays have been having wonderful business during the last few days. Dozens of advertisers have written The Review to omit items from advertisements ordered for publication this issue and in so doing have commented on the flood of orders that have come in during the week following the appearance of the Christmas Number, the arrival of which seems to be the signal for the buyers to get busy.

The cyclamen appears to be the popular plant. While other things sell well, the cyclamen sells best of all and many a grower is cleaned out. The azalea does not seem to be in such large demand as one would have expected from the anxiety over the arrival of the stock from Belgium this season.

TELEGRAPH DELIVERY.

Albert Pochelon, secretary of the F. T. D., under date of December 10, has issued the following notice to members:

"At the meeting of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery held at Cleveland, O., it was decided by officers and members present that on bills not paid within thirty days from member to member the discount of twenty per cent shall be forfeited. This would help to do away with a lot of unpleasant feeling and also would help us find out people who are negligent in paying their bills. If we wish to have any further success in the F. T. D. we must have prompt paying members on our list.

"The responsibility of the F. T. D. through this act becomes a much greater value than it has been heretofore, so please do not let bills to F. T. D. members hang fire, but settle them as quickly as possible.

"When you make out your statement on January 1, send the secretary a list of all bills overdue and owed to you by members of F. T. D.; these bills will have to be settled immediately and members refusing to do so will lose the twenty per cent and their names are liable to be taken off our list.

"The tone of this letter may seem harsh, but it is the only way to uphold the prestige of the F. T. D."

HERE, TOO.

While the United States does not share the British view of things German, the war has resulted in stopping imports of many florists' supplies formerly obtained exclusively from Germany and, on the question of developing home manufacture, the United States is in position to endorse in its own behalf the British view as expressed in the following clipping from the Horticultural Trade Journal:

"Florists are feeling the suspension of importations of preserved flowers, foliage and grasses which came from Germany. There's no disputing the fact that the Germans are past masters in the drying, preserving and dyeing of these things, but must it be said that the British are incapable of catering for their own requirements in this direction? There's a grand opening for anybody who will turn out really creditable stuff, and I cannot see why we should have to depend upon Germany for such things as statice, echinops, butcher's-broom and physalis, nor indeed for preserved maidenhair and asparagus or beech and prunus, or even gnaphalium. We certainly can grow all these things, and it is only for the want of trying that we haven't equaled the Germans in preserving them."

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Even the most exacting man in the trade could ask for no better market conditions, taking it by and large, than those now existing. Stock in practically every line is scarce enough to be selling clean at market quotations. Quality, with but a few exceptions, is up to the standard. As for the demand, if the weather has anything to do with it, and we all believe it has, it should be most excellent, for Chicago has been enjoying a week of real old-fashioned winter.

A year ago business was decidedly unsatisfactory in the east and, as a result, the eastern growers, finding their home market unable to handle their output, dumped thousands of American Beauties, a large number of orchids and quantities of general stock onto the Chicago market. This year the eastern demand is sufficient to take care of eastern grown stock, and, though eastern Beauties have arrived in some quantity during the last fortnight, several Chicago wholesale houses have received eastern wires ordering large quantities of roses, thus practically reversing the present situation from that of last year. In addition to this change, the demand in this market is at least normal for the time of the season.

Though there is no longer any fear of a decided shortage of roses for the Christmas demand, they are yet scarce enough to clear daily at quoted prices. Naturally enough, the colored varieties have a long lead over white, but these are generally cleared before the day ends, though not at a high figure.

Many Russells show the effect of the dark days and Killarney has suffered in color.

The supply of carnations is far short of the present demand and the competition to secure sufficient to fill shipping orders is accordingly keen. The red varieties are usually snapped up as soon as they are unpacked, but nothing in the shape of a carnation stays on the tables long. Paper Whites in fair quantity and excellent quality are clearing regularly. Of single violets there are not enough to meet the demand, and doubles are none too plentiful. Pansies are available, but the demand for them is erratic. There is still a scattering of chrysanthemums on the market, but they hold no appeal for the buyer. Easter lilies are in good supply and move with a little more ease since mums have withdrawn from the spotlight. Callas remain more nearly stationary. Mignonette and stevia are selling well. The supply of valley, by way of a change, is easily sufficient to meet all demands. Choice sweet peas remain good sellers. Cattleyas are scarce and where obtainable bring a fancy price without a quibble. Percivaliana is not wanted if Trianae can be had, but sells for lack of a larger flower. The excellent poinsettias on the market attract much attention and many buyers.

Green goods of all kinds are in evidence everywhere. Winter berries, holly and mistletoe give a holiday dress to the market, while the number of boxwood wreaths continues to grow. Sprenger is clearing right along and plumosus is selling well, though there is enough for the demand. Smilax, however, seems to be moving a trifle slowly, but perhaps this is the effect of comparison. Boxwood enjoys a splendid demand.

Christmas Prospects.

Several days of dark weather gave the growers and wholesalers a chill last week and warmed up the buyers quite perceptibly, but bright, cold weather at the opening of this week has served to restore confidence in the Christmas supply, both as to size and quality.

It is quite generally the opinion that roses will be equal to all requirements. Orders are coming in nicely since the appearance of the Christmas Number of The Review with the advance quotations and there are those who note that an unusual proportion of the orders call for the better grades of roses. The orders are being booked at lower prices than last year, with the idea that cleaner sales and better average returns to the growers will result.

Many wholesalers have begun to fear that carnations will be short, some of them having decided they will be less plentiful even than two years ago, and in a number of cases advance quotations have been withdrawn and higher lists substituted.

It is thought single violets also will be scarce, and cattleyas will not be in large supply. Other seasonable stock is expected to equal the demand.

FROST PROOF Plant Protector

Guard Your Palms Against Frost, Wind, Sleet, Etc.

Avoid Damage in Handling and Transporting.

Go On and Off Like a Glove—No Time Lost in Using.

The Cost is Reasonable, the Investment Excellent.

HOW MADE and HOW USED

Rando Protectors are designed to guard the palm against both low temperatures and rough handling.

The body is of light but strong fabric, quilted to make it temperature resisting in an extreme degree.

The top closes tight and forms a perfect joint. Ample overlap is allowed at the seams to prevent entrance of cold air.

The bottom portion is plaited like a skirt, and makes a neat, tight joint when tied around top of pot or plant tub.

The seam is closed with glove fasteners, making a quick snug joint.

The cut shows how the Rando Protector is applied. Starting at the bottom, it is drawn easily upwards. The palm readily folds into the space allowed and will not be damaged in the slightest when protector is removed.

the club presidency. The alterations at 211 North State street are nearing completion, and Mr. Henderson believes the new store will be ready for occupancy before Christmas.

December 14 was celebrated at 4248 Hazel avenue as the birthday anniversary of Emil Buettner, but the number of his years is not of record. Though only in the prime of life, Mr. Buettner is one of the oldest men in the trade in point of years spent in the occupation.

It was December 15, '1867, that George Stollery, now one of the heavyweights of the trade, first looked upon the world. Today he is so successful a flower merchant that he is president of the Chicago Retail Florists' Association.

Various Notes.

In making planting plans for 1916 at Peter Reinberg's it is contemplated that ten of the twenty-two houses now given to Beauties will be used for larger quantities of Russell, Milady and Ophelia. There are many thousands of rose and carnation cuttings already in the sand.

Maywood stage last week in favor of a baby boy weighing ten pounds, the third son of Ernst C. Amling, the son of Albert F. Amling. The latter has five sons and no daughters. Ernst C. Amling has three sons and no daughters. As some one from Maywood expressed it, American beauties are scarce in this branch of the Amling family, the little year-old daughter of Otto Amling being the only one.

A gentleman of Teutonic extraction is reported to have knicked the family of Albert Fuchs to the extent of $1,200 and the Tribune, in reporting the event, comments on the former florist that "his wealth passed the million mark some time ago." Now, what do you know about that?

After canvassing the Christmas situation, O. W. Frese, of Poehlmann Bros. Co., says the demand will be the largest ever known, with enough stock in all lines except carnations, which he believes will be decidedly scarce.

After visiting a number of growers in the Rogers Park section, N. J. Wiator has decided that carnations will be in decidedly short supply for Christmas. He says it will not surprise him if they turn out, compared to demand, as shorter than at any Christmas in ten years.

Not only is fragrance one of the popular points of Carnation Matchless, but C. L. Washburn says the pink tinge in some of the flowers is liked by many of the customers of Bassett & Washburn.

A scheme for keeping his display windows clear of frost and at the same time well illuminated has been worked out by H. C. Mulder, doing business as the University Florist, 1121 East Fifty-fifth street. He has installed a row of gas jets at the lower front of the window. The heat from these keeps the glass clear, and he says the additional heat thrown back into the store more than makes up for the expense of running them by reducing the fuel bill.

A. C. Kohlbrand was at Minneapolis last week to stage the display made at the show there by the E. C. Amling Co. He speaks highly of the affair, which was a thorough success, and brought back a number of Christmas orders for his house.

Growers in and about Chicago received a visit from Paul Klingsporn, manager of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, last week. He reports stock in fine shape for Christmas, but is inclined to believe it will not be overplentiful.

If it were not for the Christmas activity in the plant department of the John Kruchten Co., Miss Agatha M. Greeley would be home with a severe cold. As it is, she is on the job willy-nilly.

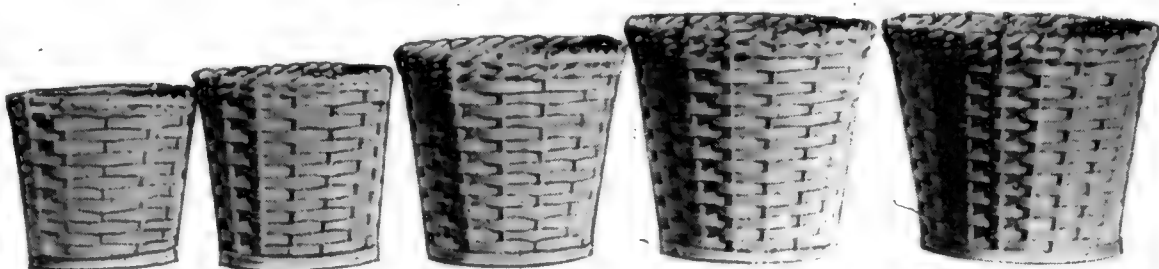

The sales force in J. A. Budlong's is obliged to work harder than ever, with its old standby, Fred Price, at home with a severe cold.

By some lucky chance, Arthur Pasternick, 1354 Catalpa avenue, one of the old guard in Bassett & Washburn's wholesale house, still has something to spend for Christmas. One afternoon last week, in the absence of his family, an attempt was made to enter his apartment. The thieves had almost succeeded in cutting away the wood about the front door lock when disturbed. Had their efforts been successful Mr. Pasternick would have been in a disagreeable position, as rent and Christmas money and other articles of value were on a table, ready for them.

Those who have occasion to visit the Chicago wholesale market regularly will learn with sincere regret of the untimely death of Frank H. Timmerhoff, for three years cashier with the A. L. Randall Co. Mr. Timmerhoff, who had been sick but eleven days, died at 10 a. m., December 12, of autotoxæmia. He was 25 years of age and had been married but three months. His wife, his mother and an unmarried sister survive him. The funeral was from his late residence, 2527 Ballou street, De-funeral piece in the shape of a broken wheel was contributed by his co-workers at the A. L. Randall Co. The firm was represented by A. L. Randall, Frank Johnson and Eric Johnson. Interment was in Waldheim cemetery.

As a result of flames from an open furnace door belching out and enveloping his clothes, George Callaghan, 5843 Ravenswood avenue, a fireman employed in the greenhouses of Henry Hansen, 1742 Cemetery drive, died in the Ravenswood hospital December 9.

A display of Indian berries in the window of George Weiland, Evanston, is attracting no little attention. The berries seem to grow on the branches in thick clusters of a most brilliant red and are in great demand for Christmas decorative work.

The florists' trade was represented in the Rotary Business Show, held in the Sherman hotel, December 9 and 10, by the Charles Schneider Floral Co., 32 West Washington street, which staged an attractive display of roses and miscellaneous stock. As only one man from each industry can be a member of the Rotary Club of a given city, it is quite a distinction to be the chosen one.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The weather is seasonable. Plant deliveries have begun. About everything in bloom has been selected, and the plantmen are correspondingly happy. As to cut flowers, the promise is for an abundant supply. Prices are reasonable. American Beauty roses are of splendid quality and the best are firm at 35 to 40 cents each, with a rising tendency. The usual advance for these to 75 cents and $1 is expected.

Last week there was a scarcity of almost every variety of rose. Larger shipments have been promised for this week, but the supply, it is believed, will not exceed the improved demand. Carnation values increased considerably during last week. At one time Wards sold at $5 per hundred. The top price last Saturday was $4. Lilies are higher—8 cents top Saturday for the selected. Valley fell to normal quotations last week after the abnormal rise of the week before. More gardenias are arriving daily and the price has receded to $6 per dozen for the selected flowers. Few chrysanthemums are left and the supply is gradually vanishing. They have had the longest and best season in twenty-five years. There will be a few left for Christmas, but they should be ordered now. Violets are seemingly more popular than for many years. There has been no surplus since the season opened.

The Spencer sweet peas are much appreciated, but the receipts have been light. Poinsettias, cut and in pots and panes, are abundant, but are moving slowly. There is an abundance of stevia. Pansies are perfect and more plentiful. Quality characterizes the shipments of callas, daisies, cornflowers and bouvardias. There is also an abundance of asparagus. The orchid supply is recovering and there will be a sufficiency for all holiday demands. During the lean period good cattleyas brought 75 cents to $1. There is a good supply of cypripediums, phalaenopsis and oncidiums.

Various Notes.

Secretary John Young, with his responsibilities growing daily in his three-fold office, has had a busy December to date. With the big flower shows demanding constantly greater attention he is certainly the busiest man on Twenty-eighth street. He says everything is moving upward and onward. There are no downtown windows in the seedsmen's stores that eclipse the artistic display in the Stump & Walter Co.'s big show section. The Japan and China display has vanished and the first snow storm is depicted.

The stores of the MacNiff Horticultural Co. are appropriately decorated for the holidays.

Harry A. Bunyard lectured December 10 at Barton before the International Garden Club. He was accompanied by Arthur Herrington, of Madison, N. J., who is its manager.

William J. Elliott is still confined to his home, his injuries being greater than at first reported.

The Associated Retail Florists enjoyed a harmony dinner last week at the Hotel McAlpin. The New York and New Jersey Association of Plant Growers will have a banquet there.

The Kervan Co. has had a wonderful shipping season. Its show windows display a score of southern evergreen specialties. The firm's force has been doubled and work goes on night and day.

Guttman & Raynor are disseminating their new pink mum, the Alex. Guttman. Woodrow & Marketos have filled their big store with a fine collection of flowering and foliage plants, palms and ferns, and have doubled their force for the holiday business.

L. B. Coddington, of Murray Hill, N. J., was in this city last week as a guest of H. E. Froment.

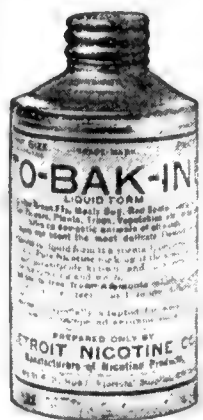

January 16 is the date selected by Joseph Trepel, of Brooklyn, for his annual ball and reception.

A special meeting of the American Dahlia Society will be held December 14 at the Grand hotel.

Edward Weston, brother of and formerly foreman for Harry Weston, a Long Island carnation grower, and recently elected president of the New York Florists' Club, has gone into busitary of the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, Detroit, Mich., was a visitor on the market this week.

E. R. Gullett, of Gullett & Sons, Lincoln, Ill., was in the city this week buying Christmas stock. He reports unusually good business for the firm.

The necessity of laying in a goodly supply of Christmas stock brought H. Kusik, of H. Kusik & Co., Kansas City, Mo., to the Chicago market early this week.

The Florists did not win the city championship, for they had some bad luck, but they had a fine time. The team score was:

The Market.

The weather is seasonable. Plant deliveries have begun. About everything in bloom has been selected, and the plantmen are correspondingly happy. As to cut flowers, the promise is for an abundant supply. Prices are reasonable. American Beauty roses are of splendid quality and the best are firm at 35 to 40 cents each, with a rising tendency. The usual advance for these to 75 cents and $1 is expected.

Last week there was a scarcity of almost every variety of rose. Larger shipments have been promised for this week, but the supply, it is believed, will not exceed the improved demand. Carnation values increased considerably during last week. At one time Wards sold at $5 per hundred. The top price last Saturday was $4. Lilies are higher—8 cents top Saturday for the selected. Valley fell to normal quotations last week after the abnormal rise of the week before. More gardenias are arriving daily and the price has receded to $6 per dozen for the selected flowers. Few chrysanthemums are left and the supply is gradually vanishing. They have had the longest and best season in twenty-five years. There will be a few left for Christmas, but they should be ordered now. Violets are seemingly more popular than for many years. There has been no surplus since the season opened.

The Spencer sweet peas are much appreciated, but the receipts have been light. Poinsettias, cut and in pots and pans, are abundant, but are moving slowly. There is an abundance of stevia. Pansies are perfect and more plentiful. Quality characterizes the shipments of callas, daisies, cornflowers and bouvardias. There is also an abundance of asparagus. The orchid supply is recovering and there will be a sufficiency for all holiday demands. During the lean period good cattleyas brought 75 cents to $1. There is a good supply of cypripediums, phalenopsis and oncidiums.

Various Notes.

Secretary John Young, with his responsibilities growing daily in his three-fold office, has had a busy December to date. With the big flower shows demanding constantly greater attention he is certainly the busiest man on Twenty-eighth street. He says everything is moving upward and onward. There are no downtown windows in the seedsmen's stores that eclipse the artistic display in the Stump & Walter Co.'s big show section. The Japan and China display has vanished and the first snow storm is depicted.

The stores of the MacNiff Horticultural Co. are appropriately decorated for the holidays.

Harry A. Bunyard lectured December 10 at Barton before the International Garden Club. He was accompanied by Arthur Herrington, of Madison, N. J., who is its manager.

William J. Elliott is still confined to his home, his injuries being greater than at first reported.

The Associated Retail Florists enjoyed a harmony dinner last week at the Hotel McAlpin. The New York and New Jersey Association of Plant Growers will have a banquet there.

The Kervan Co. has had a wonderful shipping season. Its show windows display a score of southern evergreen specialties. The firm's force has been doubled and work goes on night and day.

Guttman & Raynor are disseminating their new pink mum, the Alex. Guttman.

Woodrow & Marketos have filled their big store with a fine collection of flowering and foliage plants, palms and ferns, and have doubled their force for the holiday business.

L. B. Coddington, of Murray Hill, N. J., was in this city last week as a guest of H. E. Froment.

January 16 is the date selected by Joseph Trepel, of Brooklyn, for his annual ball and reception.

A special meeting of the American Dahlia Society will be held December 14 at the Grand hotel.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

There was a noticeable change in the condition of the market last week. Chrysanthemums are nearly over with. A few late Nonins and Chadwicks seem to constitute the stock now to be had. These are selling well. American Beauty roses are more plentiful and are bringing better prices, selling up to $5 per dozen. Some fine locally grown cyclamens, azaleas, begonias and pans of poinsettias now are to be had. All of these are meeting a good demand. The supply of gardenias has increased considerably. These flowers are bringing from $3 to $6 per dozen. The supply of carnations seems to have shortened materially. Carnations are quite backward this year and there are not enough of them to go around. They are bringing from $3 to $6 per hundred as against $2 and $3 per hundred late last month.

The prices on roses have stiffened considerably and some of the better grades are bringing up to $15 per hundred. All varieties now to be had clean up well daily. The weather has been cloudy of late, but despite this fact Mock and Radiance are among the leaders in long stems, large flowers, good foliage and, incidentally, high prices. Some extra fine Richmond roses are offered at $15 per hundred. Single violets have increased in quantity and are overshadowing the doubles, for they are by far the favorites in this section. Snapdragon is increasing in popularity for table decorations. Valley is holding its own. There are plenty of Easter lilies on the market.

THE KENNEDY FLORIST BAG

THE illustrations show our method of packing potted plants to insure their keeping in good condition between your plant and the home or store of your customer. These bags consist of a heavy paper tube of the proper diameter for pots of the various sizes. These tubes come in 72-inch lengths, which can be cut into such shorter lengths by the florist as to take care of the plants of different heights. A 72-inch bag can be cut into 4-18 in. lengths, 3-24 in. lengths, 2-36 in. lengths, or any combination of lengths which will cut without waste.

The plant is placed on a stand, such as illustration shows, which we can furnish, or the florist can drive a three-quarter inch pipe into the ground and place on it the pot rest, which we also furnish if desired. The bags are threaded over the pipe or stand, drawn up around plant and folded and fastened at the top by florist clips, drawn around the pot, and folded underneath or fastened with twine or rubber band.

The bags are easily and quickly applied, thus saving time in packing and furnishing a frost proof covering which insures your product reaching your customer in best possible condition.

Kennedy Florist Bags are being used by progressive florists who want to serve their customers in the best possible manner, and considering time and material saved in packing, the cost of wrapping with them is cheaper than by any other method.

William F. Gude is the proud possessor of a handsome set of silver, which was presented to him last week by his associates on the citizens' committee, of which he was the chairman, which staged the recent Grand Army celebration. There are thirteen dozen pieces in the set, each engraved with the initial "G" in Old English. The set rests in a handsome mahogany chest. The presentation took place in the Red Room of the Willard hotel in the presence of nearly all of the members who served on the committee. At the conclusion of the meeting, Mr. Gude held an impromptu reception.

One of the leading events of the season, the Gridiron Club dinner, was held November 11 in the Willard hotel, where the two large ballrooms were handsomely decorated by J. H. Small & Sons. The smaller of the two rooms was utilized for reception purposes. This was decorated with palms, American Beauties, other roses and hundreds of large chrysanthemums. The entrance to the larger ballroom, the banquet hall, was as through the center of a dense the room contained palms. A large number of wall-pockets contained chrysanthemums, roses and other flowers, while here and there were huge standards of American Beauty roses. The enormous gridiron, the insignia of the club, was outlined with American Beauty roses. All of the tables were ornamented with vases of various flowers.

Among the visitors last week were Thomas Cahill, of Des Moines, Ia.; Julius Dilloff, of New York; William P. Craig, of Philadelphia.

Importers of florists' supplies are chafing at the delay experienced in getting through shipments of German and Austrian goods held up by the British blockade. A representative of several of the Philadelphia houses, when seen by The Review's correspondent, declared that considerable fault could be found with the officials of the British embassy and of the British foreign office, because applications for permits for the movement of such goods, submitted three or four months ago, have not yet been acted upon. "It is strange," he declared, "that no steps have been taken to either grant my clients the necessary permits guaranteeing the safe passage of the goods, which were bought and paid for prior to March 1, or to reject the applications. Some of the goods involved will be of little use unless received soon. It is far too late now to expect them in time for the Christmas business and there is no telling just when they will be allowed shipment from Rotterdam."

The Market.

The holiday trade has become vigorous. All the stores have been compelled to engage extra help. The growers are well contented. There is plenty of everything except carnations. Quantities of good blooming plants are to be had, as well as Christmas greens, which are exceptionally satisfactory this season. The holly is well berried and boxwood is good and fresh.

The cut flower stock is satisfactory as to supply and the quality is fine. Roses are in good condition and sell well. Pink and white varieties are more plentiful. Yellows are fairly so. Reds are scarce. Prices are somewhat better than of late. American Beauties are good. Fancy grades bring fair prices. Carnations are of excellent quality and scarce. Violets are plentiful and sell well. Sweet peas are arriving. They are good and sell well. Although orchids and gardenias are not over-plentiful, the demand is fair. Cyprip-

Among recent visitors were: R. H. Bard, of Syracuse; F. W. Bannister, with the J. F. Friedel concern, of Syracuse; E. F. Kennon, of the Climax Manufacturing Co., Castorland; Henry C. Heilemann, of the William B. Lake Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

Miss Rose E. Brown has been ill of neuritis more than a week.

George T. Boucher has an attractive holiday window in which he is making a specialty of automobile wreaths. He has a good display of red azaleas that are selling rapidly.

Ed. Ogston, of the Kimball conservatories, has a large crop of cyripediums. He has cut over 1,000 of them within the last few weeks. His collection of carnations includes many of the latest varieties.

J. C. Brown, of the Eggleston, says trade is picking up wonderfully.

Arthur Zirkman, of M. Rice Co., Philadelphia, was here December 11. He said business is rushing with his house.

The uptown florists had a busy day December 7, owing to the funeral of Lieutenant Force, whose death resulted from an accident on a United States battleship.

Salter Bros. are making a good display of vases, etc., of a new kind of art ware. They are also showing in their window the large silver cup and the five individual cups won in the bowling competition of the Cleveland, Buffalo and Rochester clubs. The cups are the property of the Rochester Florists' Bowling Club.

J. B. Keller Sons have a large quantity of beautiful baskets on display. They are made of needle pine and balsam, with cones of red and bronze. Their business is exceptionally good.

An effective window display in Wilson's for the last week end had a large, gayly decorated Christmas tree as the center of attraction. At the base of the tree were flower boxes tied with Christmas ribbons, and with address tags attached. Other seasonable baskets and wreaths were nicely arranged.

Hugo Teute is growing a large quantity of Melior begonias. They will be in their prime for Christmas. About 800 cyclamens in full bloom also are ready. His poinsettias are in big demand. Business with him has increased fast the last year. H. J. H.

PHILADELPHIA.The Market.

The market is tight. That rather rapid language is purely technical. It implies that, the vast wave of chrysanthemums having passed, there are not enough flowers to fill the void. The extremely cold weather and the snow storm have cut down the supply, as such weather always does, until the supply is insufficient for the demand. Good judges say that we will have a good supply of flowers next week; we have them not now, and the prices have advanced. The most pronounced features of the market of today are the absence of carnations and the shortage of short roses. Nobody thinks carnations are being saved for Christmas; prices preclude that, for they are bringing nearly as much now as they often have brought at Christmas, except on red. They are simply scarce—the flowers do not develop in dark, cold weather. Good bright colors are bringing unusual prices—see list—and even white sells well. The funny thing about it is that the poor grades of carnations often sell better than the top grade, price considered. This condition will not last, because the best will sell best at Christmas. The same fact applies to roses. The short-stemmed stock, though not necessarily poor, sells better than the long-stemmed stock and has done so for a fortnight. Valley is about the only flower in excess of the demand. Everything else goes quickly save violets; their pace is moderate. Sweet peas are a trifle more plentiful. French trumpets have reinforced Paper Whites, which are active. Stevia is good and poinsettias can be had on orders. The Christmas green situation is satisfactory to the dealers; lycopodium, boxwood and holly wreaths are especially so. Ferns are coming into favor.

Christmas Plants.

The market of this city, which supplies a vast territory with blooming and foliage plants for the holidays, is unusually well supplied with fine stock. "Craig has cyclamens" is what the florists here say. That is the vernacular; translated into plain, everyday English, it means that the Robert Craig Co. has finished its cyclamens extremely well. The finish and timing are a little better than ever before, and the fact that large as well as medium sizes are well represented makes the stock most attractive. It is often said that the begonias at the Craig place at Norwood are bouquets—each plant a bouquet in itself. This is true today of the cyclamens as well as of the begonias. The poinsettias are nicely flowered and showy. The Christmas color on Dracæna terminalis is rich. The other dracænas, the crotons and the ferns are fine.

The claim of the Godfrey Aschmann place that its stock is larger and finer than that of other years is substantiated by the appearance of the place. The carried-over azaleas, in six of the best varieties, are fine, while the begonias, including those ever-popular, free-blooming sorts of the Erfurt type, and the ferns, are prominent in a comprehensive collection of the best varieties of flowering and foliage plants. Araucarias are favorites.

Aschmann Bros. have built up and are increasing their plant business by producing quantities of good stock of the kinds that are wanted. Their Christmas stock is well grown and varied, including cyclamens, grown more largely than in the past, poinsettias, azaleas, primulas, ferns, etc.

Current Events.

Bernard Eschner spoke a few days ago of the interesting effect of the war on supplies. A number of cases of immortelles just received from France furnished the subject. Formerly, immortelles came in boxes of uniform size, 125 bunches to a case, twenty-five bunches to a layer, five layers in each case, with waterproof paper between. This time the cases were of uneven size, lined with newspaper and the immortelles thrown in any way. Nothing could more clearly show the absence of the regular packers, who are at the front. By the way, Mr. Eschner says it was his father-in-law, not his grandfather, who was married in the new 1220, where the big Rice Co. building is going up on Spring Garden street. While the wedding occurred in this house fifty-six years ago, Mr. Eschner's father-in-law is hale and hearty and proud of the interest taken in the place.

An interesting discussion took place in the big concrete building at the northwest corner of Twelfth and Race streets the other day. Robert Craig said that the future of our cut flower business depended on the wholesalers, for unless they could get better prices this season than those obtained last season, many growers would be obliged to give up their calling. He suggested that if the large growers could agree to devote one-half their places to flowers and the other half to vegetables, such as cucumbers and lettuce, the desired result might be achieved. Leo Niessen doubted whether this plan would work, believing that restricting the output would be harmful. He thought that system would go a long way toward overcoming the disadvantages of war prices.

There are two lively, hard-working youngsters at the Joseph Heacock Co. salesroom. Their names are Joe Cozens and Jimmy Lodge. They are full of business and full of life. Business was discussed first of course, graphically and rapidly. Then came Jimmy Lodge's supposed approaching wedding, a standard joke that has lasted six months or more without definite development. Then a large, valise-like box of comfortable proportions, sufficient to hold about 200 sandwiches or so, was planked upon the counter. "Do you know what that is for? That is to hold the florists' Christmas tips."

Various Notes.

Edward Reid reinforced his Cadillac with a fine Vim car, which went into commission December 11. Mr. Reid believes that this car will get his stock in and out early. He prophesies a good Christmas trade.

J. Max Nitzschke opened the Forrest Flower Shop, adjoining the Forrest theater on South Broad street, December 13. Mr. Nitzschke is a floral artist of renown, who has the best wishes of all his friends for success in his business enterprise.

The December meeting of the Germantown Horticultural Society was held in the library at Vernon Park, December 13. Randal L. Glymp spoke on cut flowers under glass. The treasurer's report showed over 100 members in good standing, and a satisfactory balance on hand, after increasing the permanent fund.

Harrison's Nurseries, of Berlin, Md., have opened a city salesroom at 13 South Ninth street.

William Graham, star decorator of this city, has accepted a position with Fleischman's, of Chicago. Mr. Graham, who will be greatly missed here, expects to assume his new duties soon after New Year's.

M. E. Slattery, with W. J. Palmer & Son, of Buffalo, was here recently.

B. Frank and J. Kopit, trading as Frank & Kopit, at 1207 Market street, the 5 and 10-cent store, are making a success of their flower and fruit business by energy and attention to business.

George S. Hampton unfortunately injured his wrist while cranking his car. Mr. Hampton is cheerful about it, remarking that his customer now has to write the order while he states the price.

CREDIT AGENCIES.

Reasons for Their Existence.

The other day, as I was walking down the street, I met Tom Jones, of Capsicum's, and he opened up on me with: "Say, we had some exciting times over at our place this week, I can tell you. It wasn't our own doing, either, as we tried our best to keep out of it. The fact is, we were visited by a reporter from one of the credit agencies. I'll tell you all about it and you can see where the excitement came in.

"We were having a race in the potting shed, trying to see who could stow away the most plants in a given time, when a voice at my elbow inquired: 'Excuse me, but can you tell me where I can find the proprietor?' Well, it just happened that the Old Man was watching us—sort of umpiring the race —and the fellow didn't have far to go to find him. The Old Man piped up and said, 'I am he.' Then the fun began. The reporter said, 'I am from the Dunstreet Mercantile Agency, and would like to talk with you for a few moments.' The Old Man didn't seem to like it particularly well when the fellow mentioned Dunstreet, because he sort of flushed up and replied, 'I haven't anything to say, sir.' They had it back and forth for a while and then the reporter handed the Old Man a piece of paper, with the request that he fill it out and mail it to the office. Guess it made the Boss sore, because he tried not to take it. The reporter wouldn't be bluffed, however, and laid it on the bench as he went out. What on earth was it all about, anyway? There must have been a lot of personal matters connected with it, because the Old Man said afterward he wished he had 'thrown the cuss out.'"

I tried to explain to the young man the reasons for the existence of the mercantile agency, and he went on to his work with an "Oh, there is a lot to it, after all."

I wonder whether any of those reading this have had an experience similar to mine. I venture to say that some have.

How Shall we Treat the Reporter?

A few people, apparently, in our trade as in others, do not know why the credit agencies are in existence. They do not know why the information is sought. They are not aware that it is to their interest to give all the information possible, so that a clear report can be made concerning their affairs. Do they imagine the reporter cares, personally, whether they make a statement or not? Wouldn't they prefer to have the report written according to their own facts and figures, rather than to have someone outside supplying the information? It means a great deal to the man just commencing business to know that he has established friendly relations with the man or firm from whom he asks credit. Personally, I believe there are many men who do not know the whys and wherefores of the commercial or mercantile agencies. With these I am in full sympathy and will tell them a few things which have come within my knowledge.

The mercantile agencies are for the purpose of protecting the credit of legitimate business houses. It is a protection also for the man who pays his debts promptly. He is the man who is most benefited. The man who is prompt is, of course, given the preference by the credit man. His trade is looked after carefully, as no house wants to lose his business. How about the man who is slow, fairly prompt, occasionally behind, or always behind time in meeting his obligations? His account is also carefully looked after, to see that he does not overreach his limit. Before opening an account with new customers, the credit man wants to know something about them. He doesn't dare extend to them a line of credit unless he feels fairly certain they will keep the account in hand. How is he to gain this necessary information? He can send out an employee to interview them, but the employee may not understand just what is wanted; so the credit man turns to the mercantile agency to investigate their affairs for him.

The Reporter Makes His Rounds.

Just for an illustration, suppose that I am a reporter and go to my desk in the agency's office at eight o'clock in the morning. The chief reporter hands me several tickets, on which are written the names of the parties I am to interview during the day. Once in a long while, perhaps, I will find the name of an acquaintance, but usually not. After having arranged my route, I start out. The first man interviewed is a saloon-keeper, the next a baker, or a grocer, a dry goods merchant, a lumber dealer, a wholesale woodenware company, a machine shop, and in the number a florist. I shall use the latter as an illustration, because we are more familiar with his line.

What do I try to find out? After the usual formalities of introduction, I try to assist him in giving me a detailed statement of his financial affairs. The important fact is that he is not telling me, personally, his affairs, but is talking to the mercantile company through me. If he is a new man in the business, I ask him regarding his former employment, so I may know where to apply for antecedent history. If he tells me all, well and good; if not, it is up to me to find out, if I have to consult the whole fraternity of florists. Then we get down to his financial condition. I ask: "What valuation do you place on your stock in its present condition? Do you have any outstanding accounts? How much are they? How much do you owe at present, either in open accounts or notes or bills payable? Do you owe anyone outside these? Has anyone else an interest in the business? How much cash have you on hand? How much in the bank, and where do you keep your account?" These questions are among those asked by the reporter when he calls. How vital it is to one's credit, then, to give a correct answer!

Keeping the Reporter Straight.

The person whom I am supposed to interview may think he is doing the right thing if he refuses to give any information, but he is not. I, as a reporter, feel under obligations to my company to hand in as correct a report of his affairs as possible. If he declines, I am not obliged to argue a moment with him. It is to his interest, as well as the company's, that he shall give a correct reply. I ask him to sign the statement I have made out. If he refuses to do so, I ask, "Of what value is your statement without your signature? Your signature gives it weight." In addition to the other questions, I ask where he buys. I do this to find out how he is paying his bills. If he gives fictitious names he only causes the reporter a lot of unnecessary labor, because all the reporter has to do is to look up the firms he has mentioned, to ascertain the truth.

Let us suppose, then, that he has given me, the reporter, all the information requested. What do I do with it? First, I corroborate, as nearly as it is possible to do so, his own valuation of his establishment. I learn something of his reputation as a man; whether his statements are conservative. I consult the wholesale houses that are likely to sell to him; find how he is paying his bills; whether the amount of money is approximately correct; whether the prospect of his success is good or doubtful. In fact, I try to ascertain everything that will assist me in preparing a fair and impartial report.

After I have secured all the information possible, I return to the office and turn in the report. It is afterward filed, and a copy forwarded to the subscriber making the inquiry.

Does it Pay to Antagonize Him?

There are many things which work against the reporter when he is on his rounds seeking information, and he ignorance and says nothing about it. If he should report anyone as being abusive, what would the credit man think? I fear the brusque and disobliging man's account would not be held in as high esteem as that of his obliging neighbor. Suppose a signed statement is made and every possible assistance is given toward the issue of a true report? Will not those who ask for the report be better able to judge as to the credit of the man in question? Would they not feel more disposed to extend credit than if the necessary information had been refused?

To sum it all up, it is simply a matter of business. It is no more than right that something should be known about the customer who asks for credit. How many times does the business man grant an extension of credit and regret it afterward! However, every business has its sheet of bad accounts, though the florist seems to have more than his share.

No one should imagine that his competitors are the only persons likely to ask about his affairs, for in this he would be badly mistaken. For instance, his own bank may send the inquiry. Maybe the company to which he applied for insurance may ask about him. Even if he has reason to believe that his competitors are inquiring through curiosity, why should he care? They cannot do him much harm in a business way. Neither should he imagine that the inquirers want to know only of his worth in a financial way. They may be interested in knowing what sort of man he is personally; how he is regarded in his community; whether he carouses around at night, and a hundred and one other things which go to make a reputation.

The Market.

The Newark flower shops are as busy as beehives in preparation for the Christmas trade. Most of the retailers are optimistic and are preparing for large holiday sales. They are stocking heavily with ferns, palms and potted plants and are making wreaths, crosses, etc. Some of the Christmas decorations are beginning to appear as part of the window displays of the various stores. There has been considerable funeral work the last two or three weeks and a few wedding decorations. The sale of evergreens has been good. Outside of that, however, business is slower than it was for several weeks before Thanksgiving. This condition is not uncommon, for there usually is a lull between Thanksgiving and Christmas. One thing that makes the local florists anticipate a good Christmas trade is the fact that people are already placing orders for Christmas flowers and plants in larger number than is usual so early.

Poinsettias have made their appearance within the last week, but the demand for them is not large. Potted azaleas also have appeared within the last ten days and are fine plants, clean, full-flowering and moderate in price, the best selling at $1.50 and up. A few potted hydrangeas were seen in the market. Some sweet peas are arriving, but they are not at all plentiful. Carnations are more abundant, but still are not arriving in the quantities that might be expected. Growers complain that the cloudy weather of the last few months has held the stock back. Chrysanthemums are beginning to give way to other flowers. Violets are more plentiful, though not yet abundant.

Philips Bros. expect a big Christmas trade. More orders for Christmas plants have been booked than usual at this time. They have a good supply of Boston ferns, palms, azaleas and other plants.

Fred P. Wolfinger reports a large sale of evergreens. He has a large supply of azaleas, poinsettias and other Christmas plants. Several pots of dwarf orange trees helped to make his window display more attractive.

George Penek had several pots of splendid hydrangeas in his window last week, the first that have been seen in the market here this season.

Charles Luthy says that business with him has greatly improved during the last few months. He has had much funeral work and many wedding decorations.

M. Gahr states that fall business has been exceptionally good and that indications point to a good Christmas business.

Joseph D. Kroehl, Jr., has enlarged his window to permit larger displays. The improvement makes the store look more attractive both from the outside and inside.

Henry Breninger remarked that while fall business has been good, it has not been good enough to boast of. He is expecting a fine Christmas trade.

Wilbur N. Baumann, of Rahway, has lost the case which he brought against George R. Sloane, of Elizabeth, charging him with illegally collecting $500 on the representation that he was executing an order of the District court. Mr. Sloane was awarded judgment of $362.73 on a counter claim. April 1, last, Mr. Sloane was deputized to execute a judgment of about $150 granted against Mr. Baumann in favor of Hitchings & Co., of Elizabeth, greenhouse manufacturers. Mr. Baumann stated that Mr. Sloane remained at the store daily until November 1, under pretense of acting for the court, and collected $500. The latter claimed that Mr. Baumann had employed him at $2.50 per day to remain at the store and had given him a bill of sale for the business as security for his wages. R. B. M.

The Market.

There seems to be something of a lull in business previous to the Christmas rush. The quantity of the flowers arriving is not large, but the demand has been moderate. Flowers, due to colder weather, are opening much more slowly and, with a brisk demand, prices undoubtedly would rise sharply. Everyone is hopeful over the Christmas outlook. It is expected that the Christmas trade will establish a new record. Roses have cleaned up with difficulty the last few days, but prices have shown a slight hardening tendency, except in the case of Beauties, which are somewhat weak. Ophelia, Russell, Hadley, Sunburst and Taft are all popular. Red roses are somewhat scarce, but the holiday crop will be abundant. Carnations are appearing in fewer numbers and as a consequence prices have hardened. Many growers are holding back flowers for their home retail trade. Violets sell up to $1.25 per hundred, but the general average has been $1 for Christmas; $2 is the probable figure for good flowers.

Many chrysanthemums still appear. Some are of good quality, but many have an effete appearance. Lily of the valley sells well. Yellow marguerites move better than almost any other flowers. Sweet peas might sell better. The majority, so far, are of the old grandiflora type, which do not realize over half the money of the Spencers. Pink snapdragons of good color realize excellent prices. sells at $5 per dozen, and small quantities of C. Trianae bring $9 to $10 per dozen. Cypripediums sell at $8 to $12 per hundred. Stevia is abundant; so are Paper Whites. A little Freesia Purity appeared this week. Asparagus is in somewhat better demand. A heavy call for evergreens keeps the wholesale houses exceptionally busy. Holly and mistletoe are arriving in good condition, well berried. Boxwood packed in bags arrives in an inferior condition as compared with the same article in crates. For laurel and other wreathing the call is big.

The plant trade is brisk and the available stock of some varieties already is exhausted. Probably half the azaleas that growers planned to flower for the holidays are too late. Cyclamens and begonias are well sold out. Poinsettias have been affected by the cold weather. Berried subjects, ericas and camellias are in good demand; so are fern pans, assorted pans of foliage and flowering plants and nephrolepis.

Boston Bowlers' Score.

The standing of the teams in the Boston Florists' Bowling League is as follows:

Team.	Won.	Lost.
Galvin's	30	6

Carbone's	22	14
Zinn's	18	18
Pansies	17	19
Flower Exchange	13	23
Robinson's	10	26
McAlpine & McDonald	8	28

The winners December 9 were Zinn's, Carbone's, Flower Exchange and Galvin's. The high single strong was 118 and high triple strong was 312, each by Hartford.

Auburndale, Mass. F. W. Fletcher leaves December 16 for a business trip to Florida.

Neil E. Boyle, of Malden, is getting a fine lot of Sunburst, Ophelia, Killarney, White Killarney, Richmond and Hadley roses. The last named variety is doing much better. Mr. Boyle has potted 10,500 bulbs of giganteum lilies for Easter.

A. M. Davenport, of Watertown, is strong on poinsettias for the holidays.
His plants are compact and well leaved.
His cyclamens and begonias are also extra good. There are also large batches of azaleas, camellias, ferns and other plants. Asplenium Nidus-avis is still largely grown here.

The convention of the National Association of Gardeners December 9 and 10 attracted a large attendance and proved a great success. A large number of new local members were enrolled.
The membership is now close to 1,000.
The papers presented and discussed were far above the average presented at gardeners' conventions. The one on "Is Gardening a Profession?" was a gem. The committee of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club and that of the horticultural interests of Boston had marked success in making the visitors welcome.

Kidder Bros., of Wakefield, perhaps grow as high a grade of single violets as are to be found in America. At present the flowers open slowly and their pick does not exceed 10,000 weekly. Of stevias they have a heavy cut of fine quality.

J. W. Foote has finished cutting
Bouvardia Humboldtii for the season.
The flowers have sold extremely well.
Carnations here are in fine condition.
The leaders are Pink Delight, Beacon and White Wonder. Mr. Foote has a splendid batch of geraniums in bloom for the holidays.

The W. W. Edgar Co. is almost sold out of cyclamens and begonias and its azaleas, poinsettias, etc., are cleaning up fast. It has a nice batch of Freesia Purity coming into bloom. Of giganteum lilies 20,000 have been potted recently.

At the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club December 21, in addition to the regular lecture, will be held the annual election of officers.
There will be other business of importance for the closing meeting of the year.

John McFarland, of North Easton, has sold practically all his poinsettias. Galvin's Back Bay and Park street stores took a large part of them. He will have 25,000 valley for Christmas.

The principal recent happening in retail circles was the opening of Penn's handsome new store at 124 Tremont street. The store is the last word in up-to-dateness and will set a new high-water mark for this city.

Edward Winkler, of Wakefield, is still busy on building operations. He has 20,000 Morning Glow carnations. The plants suffered outdoors during the wet weather of July and August and are hardly as large as usual, but this is a true bread-and-butter carnation, being wonderfully productive.

Charles Rapp, of Melrose Highlands, is cutting a fine crop of Cattleya Percivaliana. He will have a good cut of C. Trianae for the holidays, also.

The George R. White medal of honor for distinguished services in the field of horticulture was voted December 4 by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society to Ernest H. Wilson, of the Arnold Arboretum, who, as the result of several expeditions to western China, has introduced a wealth of hardy trees, shrubs, herbaceous and bulbous plants for the enrichment of our gardens. Previous recipients of this medal have been Prof. C. S. Sargent, Victor Lemoine, Jackson Dawson, the park department of Rochester, N. Y., and Sir Harry J. Veitch.

Carnation Miss Theo is flowering freely at Littlefield & Wyman's in North Abington, and is eagerly bought in the local wholesale market. Good advance orders for rooted cuttings are coming in.

Among the standing committees of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society appointed for 1916 are the following: Prizes and exhibitions—Chairman, James Wheeler; J. K. M. L. Farquhar, D. Finlayson, T. D. Hatfield, A. H. Wingett. Plants and flowers—

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

There has been a decided scarcity of stock in this market. The wholesalers are cleaning up nicely on everything except roses. Business is fair among the retailers, but nothing extraordinary is going on and the salespeople are not rushed with work. There is a fine lot of roses arriving daily, all varieties looking well. Some splendid Russell, Ophelia, Sunburst and Milady are to be had; also long, fancy Beauties. The carnation is the flower that troubles the wholesaler at present. A scarcity of these is looked for by Christmas, with prices high. At present extra fancy stock brings $5 and $6 per hundred, while the ordinary grades are sold at $3 and $4 per hundred. The supply of valley, Paper Whites, sweet peas, violets and lilies should equal the local demand. Cut poinsettias will be plentiful. Roman hyacinths have not made their appearance yet. Greens will be plentiful. The wholesale establishments report Christmas supplies in big demand.

lows' hall. It was a highly interesting meeting to the sixty members who attended. All the officers were present, and after the opening preliminaries the various committees were called upon for reports. The trustees stated they had arranged for a ladies' night at the February meeting.

Chairman Ohlweiler made a lengthy report for the flower show committee, in which chairmen for the subcommittees were named. President Bourdet was named chairman of the executive committee and manager of the show. Suitable resolutions on the deaths of William C. Young and E. G. Eggeling were read and accepted. J. F. Ammann, chairman of the Carnation Society committee, reported everything progressing nicely, according to reports received by him from the various subcommittees. A large expense fund has been subscribed for.

Applications for membership were made by Fred C. Weber, Jr., and Stephen Beer. It was decided that the officers, at their next meeting, should draw up amendments to the by-laws and present them at the next club meeting. The question box became a feature of the meeting when nine important questions were put up for discussion. The first meeting in the new year will be held January 13.

Various Notes.

The Retail Florists' Association had to advance its meeting one week, the regular meeting being too near Christmas. The meeting was held December 13, at the Mission Inn Garden. The main discussion of the evening was the work to be done at the coming meeting of the American Carnation Society. President Young appointed his decoration committee from the members of the association.

The Missouri State Horticultural Society will hold an important 3-day session at the Planters' hotel. H. C. Irish, vice-president of the society, announced the dates to be January 12 to 14. January 13 will be florists' day, when several prominent florists will read papers. It is expected that many florists throughout the state will attend. The visitors will be invited to attend the Florists' Club meeting in the afternoon of January 13.

The Lady Florists' Home Circle was entertained at the home of Mrs. F. W. Bruenig December 8. All members were present and an enjoyable time

HENRY R. COMLEY, Florist, 6 Park St.
50 years' experience in the florist business guarantees efficiency to take care of all orders. 20 per cent allowed was spent. Mrs. Fred C. Weber, Sr., will entertain the circle January 12.

The trade extends its sympathy to George Walters, who has just returned from Minneapolis, where he attended the funeral of his mother. Mr. Walters reports things busy with him for the holiday.

John Hebenthal, 4753 Margaretta avenue, lost his houses by fire December 5. The loss is quite heavy, the stock being a total loss. The ground was leased from John Bentzen.

The announcement made by the spring flower show committee that Jules Bourdet was appointed manager of the show pleased the trade throughout the city. No better or more popular selection could have been made.

Christmas window displays along Grand avenue prove great attractions. The displays made by George Waldbart, the Ayres Floral Co., Windler's Flowers, the Schoenle Floral Co. and C. Bergstermann are most artistic. Red is the prevailing color. These shops report a number of advance orders booked.

J. F. Ammann, chairman of the executive committee of the A. C. S. meeting, has ordered a meeting of the committee to be held December 30 at the store of the W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co.

Henry Berning handled a splendid lot of fancy Beauties, Minnetonka, Ophelia, Russell and Sunburst roses last week. He expects a large supply of these for Christmas, but there will be a scarcity of carnations.

The C. Young & Sons Co. has rearranged its show windows with a background of white latticework. They report an excellent run of business last week.

Wm. Schray & Sons made a specialty of orange trees, fruited. Emil Schray says the trees made a great hit with the trade, as all of them are sold for Christmas delivery. A house of fine poinsettias was seen here.

Albert Scheidegger, a Kirkwood grower, is at a loss to know what became of two bags of potatoes he placed in Phil Goebel's big truck last week.

The bags were on the truck when they started for home. Mr. Scheidegger thinks a joke was played on him, but to date he has not heard of the potatoes' whereabouts.

In the notes of The Review's Boston correspondent, Mr. Craig hits the nail on the head when speaking of early closing. According to employees in establishments here, to keep open until 11 p. m., when there is little or nothing doing after 6:30 p. m., does not pay for the light used. The sooner the employers realize this the better it will be for all concerned.

able advance in prices of all other cut flowers. Business has been good, better than usual for several weeks before Christmas. The reason for this is the unusual amount of funeral work for this time of year. Roses are scarce and prices are high; $10 per hundred is the lowest price at present. Carnations are in better supply, although they, too, have advanced in price. Narcissi had their run last week. Everyone thought they had plenty, but found it necessary to cut some before they were fully opened. Sweet peas and violets are not in so good supply as usual. Easter lilies, valley and other flowers are coming in daily, but not enough of them to hold down the prices. Greens of all kinds are coming in better than a week ago.

Various Notes.

December 10 a baby boy weighing seven pounds arrived at the home of A. F. Barbe. The trade sends congratulations. Mr. Barbe has his houses in fine shape for Christmas, with plenty of pot plants of all kinds. He will have a large cut from his carnations.

We are glad to hear that Mrs. T. A. Moseley is able to be about again. For the last week she has been able to go to the store for a little while each day.

Samuel Murray has his begonias already tied up in fine shape. Most of them are in 6-inch, 7-inch and 8-inch pots. He has some fine specimens in tubs that are too large to go through ordinary doors.

Arthur Newell reports business as being good. He is selling many pot plants and is making larger plans for this Christmas than ever before. He says holiday trade will surpass that of any other year.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. will have a fine crop of both roses and carnations for Christmas. Both ranges of houses are looking well. The potted stock is fine and there is plenty of it.

T. J. Noll & Co. have been receiving large consignments of cut flowers of all kinds, but the demand is so heavy that they are sold out most of the time.

Henry Kusik & Co. report that stock is scarce and that the shipping business has been good; plenty of valley and violets, but short on other stock.

The Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. had a good run on funeral work this week and stock will be a trifle scarce with them for Christmas.

Adolph Mohr had a fine lot of Christmas plants in 6-inch and 7-inch pots.
He has sold out entirely. He had begonias, poinsettias and azaleas.

Business across the state line has been good. Funeral work was the leading feature.

A number of florists have received many orders for Christmas delivery and some say they have more orders than last year at this time. W. J. B.

150,000 NEPHROLEPIS (In Variety)

We are the largest growers of Nephrolepis Ferns in the country in the following varieties; in fact, we are the headquarters for them. The demand increases each year, and it is our aim to have every variety of Nephrolepis, in every size, every day in the year.

NEPHROLEPIS JOHN WANAMAKER

Introduced August, 1915

The Wanamaker Boston has more than made good. Everyone who has received early shipments from us has been greatly pleased with the variety and repeat orders have been coming in daily. We have a very large stock. A "sport" from Nephrolepis Scholzei, with longer, narrower, gracefully drooping fronds. It is not so compact in growth as Scholzei and therefore does not decay in the center, and is a durable house fern. It is a rapid grower, making an abundance of fronds, and is quite distinct from any other Nephrolepis. The following prices are for immediate and spring delivery:

2½-inch pots, strong plants $10.00 per 100; $90.00 per 1000.

4-inch pots, strong plants, $25.00 per 100; $225.00 per 1000.

6-inch pots, strong plants, $50.00 per 100.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

THE Chicago market was practically bare of bulk green December 11. Good holly is arriving in fair quantity.

SLUIS & GROOT, Enkhuizen, Holland, recently have turned their partnership into a limited liability company.

THE pea situation is becoming much easier as far as canners' varieties are concerned, but dwarf varieties are not yet any too free.

THE Texans should have much better results with their onion crop this season, which will help the sale of Teneriffe Bermuda seed in the closing part of 1916.

S. F. LEONARD, of the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, is suffering with a severe cold, but his condition is in no way serious and he expects to be at his desk in a few days.

MANY a man is burning midnight oil in the effort to get the catalogue ready for the printers, the work having been started later than usual because of the perplexities of the season.

THE representatives of the California seed growers, nearly all of whom are in the east, are having the time of their lives—everybody thankful for past favors and hoping for a continuance of the same.

EUGENE SCHAEFFEL, of Vilmorin-Andrieux & Co., Paris, France, who has been visiting the seed trade in this country for the first time in several years, sailed for home December 11 on the Lafayette. He was in Chicago for five hours December 9.

A. H. GOODWIN, of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, who has been quite seriously ill for several weeks, is again able to be at his desk. W. W. Barnard is still confined to the Presbyterian hospital, but is reported to be making an uninterrupted recovery.

ONE of the valley exporters near Hamburg has written that it is not easy to find a "light hearted" Dane or Dutchman while the steamers at Copenhagen and Rotterdam peremptorily refuse to load anything not accompanied by a British permit or an affidavit that it is of neutral origin.

THE Commissioner of Agriculture in North Carolina is determined that all dealers in seed in the state shall promptly renew their licenses to do business or suffer the penalties of the law. He is sending out notices to the trade informing them that they should take out their licenses at this time. The cost of the license is $25 for the year beginning January 1, next.

WILLIAM J. FOSGATE, of Santa Clara, Cal., arrived in Chicago December 9 on his annual eastern trip. It has been Mr. Fosgate's custom for several years to spend Christmas in Macon, Ga., but this year he will forego that pleasure to hasten his return to California. In his opinion the California onion seed prospect for next year is good. The acreage is fully as large as last year's, and the Santa Clara district has just been favored with a rainfall of two and one-half inches. He reports an increasingly strong European demand for California seeds.

THE Kilgore Seed Co. is in receipt of an order for seeds from South Africa, which is the champion long distance order for this concern.

THERE were a few cases of valley pips on the boat from Rotterdam that reached New York last week, supposedly Holland grown, as importers who have applied for British permits to import Hamburg pips have, so far as reported, not been able to get action.

THOSE who are specially interested in cantaloupe seed will find a chart showing acreage of melons for market in Bulletin No. 315, recently issued by the U. S. Department of Agriculture. The shipped crop in 1914 is estimated as 16,401 carloads.

A MOST unpleasant condition in field corn for feeding purposes has developed. Reports from various points in Iowa and Illinois are to the effect that it is souring and can hardly be cribbed, as it has not hardened. This is attributed to the fact that there has been practically no curing season this fall.

JOHN F. DICKINSON, of Bellefontaine, O., has purchased the interest of his brother, R. P. Dickinson, in the business of R. P. SPINACH EMBARGO RAISED.

As the result of the representations made by the State Department at Washington, the Dutch government has expressed a willingness to permit the exportation of a certain quantity of round spinach seed, on which, as is well known, an embargo had been placed. To obtain the actual permits of exportation, it will be necessary for the Dutch growers to apply to the Dutch Minister of Agriculture. Curtis Nye Smith.

ANY argument can be made to sound correct, but give the other side of the story a hearing, and you'll be surprised to know how hard it is to be a just Judge.

I do my utmost to give the best service in quality, price and courtesy; it's no pleasure to displease.

A BAD BILL BOBS UP AGAIN.

Senator Gronna of North Dakota introduced, December 7, 1915, a bill (S. 578) "To Prohibit the Interstate Shipment of Impure Seeds." This is identically the same bill filed by Mr. Gronna in the Sixty-second Congress (February 5, 1913), S. 8382, and in the Sixty-third Congress (April 8, 1913), S. 480, the former being unacted upon, the latter unfavorably reported by the Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry. The present bill is thoroughly unwise, impracticable and would, if enacted, wholly prohibit the shipment in interstate commerce of certain seeds. It applies to all field, vegetable and flower seeds, arbitrarily defining adulterations which no expert can detect, and making all seeds unfit for sale which are under ninety per cent germination.

Curtis Nye Smith.

MACNIFF'S NEW LEADERS.

The MacNiff Horticultural Co., New York, has two notable accessions to its staff in the seed department, James Stirling and John M. McCauley.

Mr. Stirling lately has been with Weeber & Don and for twenty years was a department manager for Dickson, of Edinburgh, Scotland. Mr. McCauley was with William Henry Maule, of Philadelphia, for twelve years and for the last five years has been manager of the New York branch of S. D. Woodruff & Sons, Orange, Conn. He will be manager of the seed department of the MacNiff concern.

SWEET CLOVER A MONEY CROP.

Sweet clover is rapidly gaining in favor as a cultivated crop. This is due, according to the United States Department of Agriculture, to its value for soil improvement, for pastures, and for hay. There are three species of sweet clover commonly found in the United States. The biennial yellow-flowered species, Melilotus officinalis, and the biennial white-flowered species, Melilotus alba, are valuable over a wide area, while the annual yellow-flowered species, Melilotus Indica, is of little economic importance except in the extreme south and southwest, where it is grown as a winter-cover and green-manure crop. With the exceptions of a few localities, white sweet clover is grown almost entirely. This is due to the fact that it yields more forage and produces larger roots than the other species. The white-flowered species is ordinarily referred to as sweet clover, while the other two species are called yellow sweet clover.

In harvesting the seed it is important that the plants be cut before the seed is fully matured. One must watch the seed crop carefully, and as soon as the lower racemes or spike-like arrangements of flowers are dry and mature it is best to cut the crop. Even where it

GOOD DAY, SIR.

Do you grow lilies? If so, do you want some good bulbs? Bulbs that will be sure to produce a good crop—bulbs that will be most profitable to you? You can get bulbs that will please you if you buy Horseshoe Brand Giganteum. You can depend on them more than on any other brand. They cost very little measured by their results and they will be a credit to your business. The prices quoted below are incidental—merely as a guide. The quality is the main thing, and that is why Horseshoe Brand bulbs net so much profit to the grower. Order now for 1916 planting—you will need the flowers when they will be ready to use. Prices are as follows:

Lilium Formosum

8/ 9.....$17.00 per case 230 bulbs

is mowed and the seed flailed out, probably not more than three-fourths of the racemes should be allowed to become fully mature. Sweet clover seed can be threshed most easily by the ordinary threshing machine, but if it is to be hulled a regular clover huller with special rasps is used. In semi-arid and irrigated sections the hulls are so dry that an ordinary grain thresher will remove most of them. Since the seed shatters very easily, sweet clover should be cut when it is wet with dew. If the first growth be cut for hay when it is two and one-half feet tall, leaving a 6-inch stubble, the seed crop will come on much more evenly. Care should be taken to cut the stubble of the preceding hay crops as high as possible, so that there will be sufficient stems remaining to resume growth, as this plant, unlike alfalfa, does not form new crown shoots. Seed yields vary from two to eight bushels to the acre.

CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

Clark W. Brown, Ashland, Mass.—A 12-page, illustrated catalogue of gladioli. The alphabetical list is followed by offers of various sorts of mixtures and assortments.

Ebbert Seed Co., Rocky Ford, Colo.—An illustrated catalogue of vegetable, flower and forage seeds, with the vegetable seeds heavily predominating. Though the book contains fifty-eight pages, it bears every evidence of persistent condensation; it is printed compactly on thin paper of good quality and the pages are closely trimmed.

Ratekin's Seed House, Shenandoah, Ia.—Thirty-second annual seed catalogue, a book of 112 good-sized, densely packed pages. The illustrations are numerous, but are closely surrounded by the text. It contains a condensed list of the more popular flower seeds, but by far the largest proportion of the space is occupied by the vegetable and farm seeds. Implements for the farm and garden are also listed.

USINGER'S UTTERANCES.

W. H. Brouse & Son, of Tyrone, Pa., contemplate building a few more greenhouses in the spring. They will then grow cut flowers. At present their output consists mostly of plants and bedding stock.

Adolph Engelman, of Tyrone, Pa., was unable to finish building his greenhouse, owing to the cold weather. The unfinished part, about sixty feet of space, will be completed as soon as the weather permits.

Frank Luhr, of the St. Marys Greenhouses, St. Marys, Pa., has at the present writing shipped about 20,000 pounds of ground pine this season. Joe Schloder is also a heavy shipper of ground pine in St. Marys.

H. W. Girton, of Ridgway, Pa., is off on a hunting trip. His party has already bagged two deer and a bear.

The Kane Greenhouses, at Kane, Pa., have some extra fine mums, of the late varieties, which they will offer to the Christmas trade.

Seth Roper, of Oliver's Greenhouses, Bradford, Pa., will have cut poinsettias four and five feet long for Christmas.

After twenty-five years in one store, George L. Graham, of Bradford, has moved into more commodious quarters. With the added room, Mr. Graham will make a larger display of plants and novelties. At present the store is in holiday attire. Mrs. G. L. Graham is in New York city visiting friends, prior to the holiday rush.

The Red Rock Rosery, of Bradford, has on display, for the holidays, baskets of plants and cut flowers, besides wreaths, boxwood, baskets made of ruscus, and other seasonable novelties.

LOOKING FOR EDELWEISS?

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

As Christmas approaches the inquiries for stock of all kinds naturally increase and once again the wisdom of being forehanded in ordering plants is apparent. Sooner or later, retailers will absorb the idea that the business of this city is a staple entity that will have to be brought down to a business basis. Then the unseemly scramble for stock when it is short and the beating down of growers when it is overplentiful will cease automatically. The mossback nurseryman who depends on local pull and the equally hidebound retailer who regrets the passing of the good (?) old times, will enjoy each other's company in the discard and still another instance of the survival of the fittest will be shown. It is far better to deliver the goods than to tell customers that the shipments of import stock were turned back at Podunk or some other way station. There must be enough azaleas and other stock left between Los Angeles and New York, if all accounts are true, to make the desert bloom like a rose—that is, provided the water was turned on as freely as the hot air (in the desert).

There is every indication of a good cut of roses, carnations and other staples for the holidays. Pickling has not been elevated to a fine art here, as in some other places. Consequently, between now and the holiday, out-of-town dealers may depend on our up-to-date wholesalers finding stock to fill orders. It is certainly gratifying to note the great increase in these out-of-town shipments and to read the encomiums of satisfied customers at far-distant centers.

The duty of the wholesaler to the retailer is much the same as that of the latter to the ultimate consumer, and just as important. It is not wise to prophesy, but there is every reason to think that there will be plenty of cut stock for everybody.

Society Meeting.

The meeting of the Los Angeles County Horticultural Society, held at Kruckeberg's hall, December 7, was a crowded and interesting one, the dual attraction of nomination of officers and an address by W. Edouart on "Mealy Bug" being responsible. Mr. Edouart spoke for about a half hour on the best methods of eradicating this troublesome pest and others, his remarks being followed with the closest interest by all.

Three Seattle Florists Take Day Off to Climb Mount Rainier.

The treatment advised was in line with that followed by the inspectors in their work, many valuable recipes and formulas being given. At the close of the lecture Mr. Edouart undertook to answer, as far as possible, all questions asked, and an interesting discussion took place.

The nominations of officers were as follows: President, W. W. Felgate; vice-president, James Taylor; secretary, Hal Kruckeberg; treasurer, Mrs. Belle Miller and James MacGilvray. H. R. Richards also was nominated for president, but declined the nomination, as there is a general feeling that one term as president is enough.

L. Edlefson, under the heading of the good and welfare of the society, made some able suggestions as to the lines of work that should be taken up by the society, proposing among other things that the society secure an acre of land at Montebello or some other section, where a garden could be started and possibly a hall built, eventually. Sundry other matters were advised and on motion duly seconded; it was decided to look into these matters in the near future.

George Roeding, of the Fancher Creek Nurseries, of Fresno, was present and at the request of the chair gave a short address, which, as usual with anything Mr. Roeding says, was listened to with interest. An unusually large attendance is looked for at the January meeting, when H. W. Turner is slated to speak on "Rose Culture."

Various Notes.

K. Groen having withdrawn from the firm of Polder & Groen, this house in the future will be known as Polder Bros., John Polder still being at the head of affairs. His brothers will assist him as before. There will be no difference in the conduct of the business.

Inquiries into the cause of an exceptionally empty icebox at the store of Freeman & Lewis brought out the fact that the hiatus was owing to an exceptionally heavy funeral demand. Mr.
Freeman says that to date the season has been above the average, and as our old friend, Charlie Lewis, gets more Falstaff-like than ever, in spite of bending exercises, posing for the moving pictures and other "diversions," it looks as though things must be coming their way.

Letters from widely separated localities keep coming in to the Los Angeles Floral Co., speaking of the excellent condition in which the long-distance shipments arrive at their destinations.

H. W. Turner is busy on his new rose catalogue, advance proofs of which show a business-like arrangement and a long list of novelties. All are well tried out at the Montebello plant before being recommended.

Geo. C. Roeding, of the Fancher Creek Nurseries, Fresno, was a visitor this week.

Large consignments of imported nursery stock continued to arrive at the Germain Seed & Plant Co.; also a carload of plant tubs, the latter having been delayed by the Panama canal slides. Heavy shipments also are being made from the nursery, the demand for small ferns, rhododendrons and lilacs being especially heavy. Truckload shipments are now being made from this nursery to Santa Barbara, San Diego and other towns within a radius of 100 miles or so, the consignees thereby saving packing charges and at least a portion of the freight, which is no inconsiderable item.

George W. Smith reports business good in the nursery and expects a big call for azaleas and other plant stock for Christmas. His azaleas at the nursery look promising and I noted fine stock of poinsettias, begonias and other holiday plants coming in line.

Early on the morning of December 10 a serious fire occurred at the Germain Seed & Plant Co. nursery, on the Whittier road. It evidently had started from the oil burner used for heating and had burned the corner of the new greenhouse before it could be extinguished. As yet it is impossible to say how much damage has been done, as the house was filled with smoke and gas. It was thrown open at once, but it is feared that the fine Christmas stock of azaleas, ferns and other plants is ruined. About $100 of damage was done to the structure.

H. R. Richards.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The shipping movement is heavy and some special decorative work is being done. A storm one day week before last, with some showers since, has tended to shorten the offerings, especially of mums, which are likely not to last much longer. A fair quantity of good Appletons and Nonins, with many pompons and a mediocre assortment of other varieties, is arriving, but Bonnaffons are about gone. Shipping business is principally in violets, baby roses and greens. The rain helped the violets, which are in good supply and as fine as they ever have been. There are plenty of greens of all kinds. The baby roses are in such demand that there is hardly enough.

The shortening of mums has turned more attention to the more popular roses, which clean up well. Really fine stock is by no means plentiful, perhaps because growers are holding back a little for Christmas. Cosmos, stocks and marigolds still appear at nearly all the stores. Some large lots of Paper Whites, hyacinths and freesias are coming in and a little more warm weather will bring a heavy supply. Valley is about enough for requirements. Lilies are scarce, but find no demand. Carnations are steady and, with a good stock in fair supply, the demand is increasing. Cattleyas are fairly plentiful. Other orchids are less in evidence. Gardenias find a growing demand.

California holly is offered freely, the quality being good. English holly should be plentiful in another week. Poinsettias are fairly plentiful, local stock being better than southern; there should be plenty for Christmas. The azaleas do not look promising, but there will be an abundance of fine cyclamens, begonias, primulas and heather, the present supply being sufficient. Small potted mums continue popular.

Various Notes.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society will give a reception on the evening of January 4.

Albert O. Stein is busy, although large decorations are not so numerous as last month. This is partly made up for by baskets of fruit and flowers for presentation to eastern and foreign dignitaries connected with the exposition, who are leaving for home.

It is most gratifying to note the reports in the trade papers, and especially those of the great Cleveland Show, where Prima Donna won hands down for best vase of 50 roses. We had every confidence in introducing it as a forcing rose, knowing if it had a fair trial it would make good. Note the prices it has been bringing in the New York market, which has been glutted with good roses. It is of splendid, quick, strong growth, throwing an abundance of two to three-foot canes, healthy and exceptionally free in production of blooms. A truly distinctive rose that is a big money-maker for the grower. We will have an elegant lot of plants from 2½-inch pots, Feb. 1st delivery and later.

cleaned up. The more exposed sections of the city were visited by a light frost December 9. The retailers have been busy looking up supplies for the Christmas trade and found ample quantities of potted stock of all sorts ready. Enough chrysanthemums and cut poinsettias are in the growers' hands to fill all wants. The supply of carnations and roses will be short. Holly and other greenery is coming in plentifully.

Various Notes.

Father Schoener will continue his work in plant breeding in Portland. The committee from the Chamber of Commerce has completed arrangements and the lot of plants saved from the fire at Brooks, Ore., are being brought here and installed in the new gardens. There are about 10,000 plants, including 6,000 rose bushes, many of which were imported, besides a large quantity of seeds. A society, nation-wide in its scope and limited to 200 members, with dues of $10 per year, has been formed to finance the work. The society is named Schoener Scientific Gardens and the products will not be commercialized. Members only who wish to help with the experiments can obtain specimens. The new gardens will be established on a 5-acre tract near the St. Johns car line, the free use of which for five years has been donated by the owner, Coe A. McKenna. Improving existing varieties of plants and creating new ones will be the line of work pursued. The Portland Chamber of Commerce will give full particulars to inquirers.

William S. Duncan, of Albany, Ore., was in Portland December 10, looking up holiday stock. He reports his early fall business better than he expected. He supplies the flower wants of a number of towns in his section and finds sale for all the stock he can produce.

James O. Convill, of the 1916 board of rose festival directors, has been placed in charge of the floral center features, which will be repeated on a scale larger than the last one, and the board has voted enough money to carry out the plan. The committee on exhibitions of the Portland Floral Society met with Mr. Convill December 8 and discussed details. Julius Dossche, of the committee, was selected to act with Mr. Convill in preparing plans, which will be brought before the society at its January meeting.

The Portland Seed Co. has received a carload of rhododendrons and other stock from Holland. The stock came through without any noticeable delay and is in good condition. S. W. W.

Eugene, Ore.—William S. Duncan, of Albany, Ore., has opened a branch store in the Cherry building.

Chico, Cal.—Miss Josie Bobbie, who for many years has conducted a florists' trade in this city, has sold her business and good will to Mrs. S. Bosdine, who has been associated with her for some time.

Seattle, Wash.—Fully 10,000 Seattleites and visitors in the city accepted the invitation of Felix Rosaia, proprietor of the newly formed Orpheum Floral Co., to visit his new flower shop at the corner of Third avenue and Madison street. Souvenirs in the form of small corsage bouquets were given all the ladies who attended the opening, and the number was legion.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

President, E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia.; Vice-president, John Watson, Newark, N. J.; Secretary, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treasurer, Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.
Forty-first annual meeting, Milwaukee, Wis., June 28 to 30, 1916.

A STEAMER from London brought sixteen cases of Manetti stock to McHutchison & Co. last week. The shipments from Great Britain continue, although somewhat delayed.

SALESMANSHIP is becoming a factor of steadily increasing importance in the nursery business. With production at least as large as demand, the sales manager comes into command.

THE nursery stock imports are coming along steadily, but several weeks behind the usual schedule, the transportation delay frequently resulting in some damage to the stock.

At the forty-ninth annual convention of the Horticultural Society of Northern Illinois, W. J. Moyle, of Union Grove, Wis., read an interesting paper on "Hardy Perennials that Sell Themselves."

THOMAS E. CASHMAN, of the Clinton Falls Nursery Co., of Owatonna, was re-elected president of the Minnesota State Horticultural Society at its meeting at Minneapolis last week. There are many nurserymen among its 3,079 members.

SEEDSMEN have not found a way of selling seeds as Christmas gifts, but they have found a means of acquiring their share of the holiday money by handling greens. If the nurseryman had a downtown store he could do the same, but without it perhaps the only chance is for the salesman to convince Ma that it would be fine for Pa to find some Delicious trees in his stocking Christmas morning.

WESTERN NURSEYMEN MEET.

Officers Elected.

At the twenty-sixth annual meeting of the Western Association of Nurserymen, held at Kansas City, December 8 and 9, the following officers were elected:

President—Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.

Vice-president—W. A. Harrison, York, Neb.

Secretary—Geo. W. Holsinger, Rose-dale, Kan.

Financial secretary and treasurer—E. J. Holman, Leavenworth, Kan.

Executive committee—Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.; D. S. Lake, Shenandoah, Ia.; H. D. Simpson, Vincennes, Ind.; J. H. Skinner, Topeka, Kan.; George H. Johnston, Kansas City.

Large Attendance.

The attendance was the largest in the history of the organization and was augmented by the presence of many members of the committees of the American Association of Nurserymen, who took this opportunity to hold sessions to set on foot the work outlined for them by the changes in the form of organization adopted at Detroit last June.

This association follows a most admirable method in that a preliminary business session is held in advance; then the routine of officers' and committee reports is heard an hour before the general open session, which is free to follow whither it will any interesting subject that is opened up by the papers and discussions.

An amendment to the constitution was adopted to provide for honorary memberships for "those who have distinguished themselves as nurserymen, and for those whose fellowship and assistance have promoted the interests of the association." The by-laws also were amended to fix the date of the annual meetings of the future as the fourth Wednesday in January instead of the second Wednesday in December, which will result in there being no annual meeting in 1916, the next one occurring January 24, 1917. The summer meeting will be held as usual.

There was an interesting discussion over the report by J. W. Schuette, E. P. Bernardin and H. B. Chase, the committee on trade terms. There is a general feeling that it is time for the trade to tighten up on its business terms, but it is difficult to secure concerted action.

Papers Presented.

The program was as follows:

"How Can the Wholesale Nurserymen Avoid Loss from So-called Poor Collections?" by Peter Youngers.

"The Effect of the Tendency of Eastern Nurserymen to Grade No. 1 Plum, Cherry and Pear 11/16 instead of 3/4," by J. H. Skinner.

The Market.

ticle was carnations, and it seems as if the supply for Christmas will be the reverse of that of last year, when the cut was heavy. No doubt carnations will be scarce and prices high this Christmas. The mums are about over, the quality of those now coming in being poor. Roses have been fairly plentiful; enough colored ones were to be had, but there was no surplus. White was rather hard to secure. Beauties were plentiful and moved nicely. Another condition that is the reverse of last season's is the small quantity of Paper Whites on the market. Last year they were to be had in any quantity, while the few now coming in meet with a ready sale. Soleil d'Or is in larger supply and finds a ready sale. Violets were none too plentiful and moved fairly well.

Club Meeting.

A regular meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Baltimore was held December 13. William Feast presented the final report of the show. It was ordered put on the minutes. Mr. Feast was tendered a rising vote of thanks. A number of worthy suggestions pertaining to the general welfare of the show were embodied in the report. These will be taken up and acted on at the first meeting in January. A discussion arose relative to the premiums. It was agreed that the amounts should be increased, to bring out more active competition.

C. M. Wagner read a list of the most suitable herbaceous plants and spoke a short while on this topic. "Fertilizers for Outdoor Use and Their Relative Values" was also under discussion.

F. J. Michell, of Philadelphia, spoke about the show to be held in that city in March.

J. J. Perry acted as secretary, in the absence of N. F. Flitton. The presence of Mr. Perry behind the desk recalled pleasant memories of bygone days when he capably filled that position. After the question box was disposed of the meeting adjourned.

Various Notes.

John McCormick is cutting some good Christmas Pink and orchid-flowering light pink peas.

Matthew Richmond has a fine lot of cyclamens in good shape for his Christmas trade.

Mr. and Mrs. William G. Lehr are receiving the congratulations of their friends on the arrival of a bouncing baby girl December 7. Mother and daughter are doing well.

Erdman & Ulrich have their usual good lot of plants for the Christmas trade. Their poinsettias and cyclamens are particularly fine.

J. J. Goudy, of Henry A. Dreer, Inc.; Charles E. Meehan and William P. Craig, all of Philadelphia, were recent visitors.

John Wilhelm, of Raspeburg, has a fine lot of Mme. Petrick azaleas in good shape for Christmas. His Chatelaine begonias are good.

Samuel Feast & Sons received their new auto truck last week. The body is specially built to hold large plants for decorative purposes, being large and roomy.

August Tischinger reports a heavy demand for ferns, having almost sold out in this item. His azaleas were delayed in transit and he will be unable to have them in flower by Christmas.

Halliday Bros. are showing their usual good line of attractively arranged Christmas designs. The crescent-shaped wreaths of red cape flowers and statice, and another combination of magnolia leaves, ruscus and statice, are effective.

The Market.

Trade was brisk last week. The dark and cold weather has shortened stock considerably. Carnations have been a trifle scarce, prices ranging from $2.50 to $4 per hundred, the same flowers retailing at 60 cents to $1 per dozen. Fancy roses are bringing a stiff price, making $8 to $15 per hundred. Seconds and shorts are more plentiful, bringing from $3 to $6 per hundred. Poinsettias are doing well, wholesaling at $2 to $4 per dozen and retailing at $3 to $6 per dozen. Owing to the scarcity of roses, carnations meet a ready market at $3 per hundred.

Valley, lilies, orchids, violets and small roses for corsages have had a good call. The trade in Christmas greens, holly, laurel and Christmas trees is now in full blast.

Various Notes.

Oliver Steinkamp and Herman Junge were the only Indianapolis florists who attended the meeting of the Indiana State Florists' Association at Fort Wayne last week. At this meeting an auditing committee composed of Herman Junge, Charles Pahud and L. Elder was named to audit the books of the secretary and treasurer. A committee on entertainment for the annual meeting of the association, which takes place in Indianapolis, January 11, composed of Homer Wiegand, Oliver Steinkamp and Clarence Thomas, also was named. C. O. Wilcox, with the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, and Charles Treffenger, of Van Wert, O., were the first associate members to be elected into the state association. C. M. Freese, of New Haven, Ind., was elected to membership.

POMPONS—there are plenty of them—YES—too many varieties for the growers.

SOME make small sprays—others large ones—costs the same to grow either.

IF you are obliged to put more than six sprays in a 25c bunch there is no profit to the grower.

THERE is a great difference in the shades of pink, yellow and bronze. SOME are Early, others are Midseason and Late.

IF you contemplate planting POMPONS in quantity, let us submit you a list of the best.

OUR experience is at your service and costs nothing but the asking.

MORNING GLOW

One of the strong features of this Carnation is its attractive color, several shades lighter at this time of year than Winsor. This, with the prettily serrated edge of petals, calls forth such expressions as "charming," "exquisite."

New Salmon Pink Carnation NANCY

Color, light salmon pink, a little darker than Pink Delight and a more even color. Blooms are good commercial size, three inches and over, nicely formed and have never shown a bursted calyx. Stems always hold the flower upright. The habit is a quick productive growth and as a producer it stands highest among commercial varieties. Color does not fade. Fragrance is very noticeable. Having an excellent cerise pink and an improved yellow to offer in 1917, we have decided to disseminate the variety NANCY this year (1916). For a light pink that will produce quantities of bloom and is commercially good in every respect, plant NANCY. The stock is limited and orders will be filled in rotation as received. Price, rooted cuttings, $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000. First deliveries in January.

Various Notes.

Ralph Plebany states that he never had a better chrysanthemum season than the one passing. The flowers were of fine quality and prices averaged well during the season. He is enjoying a heavy demand for Paper Whites.

Charles Stormer, of 145 Union avenue, has an unusually fine lot of stevias. His orchid-flowering sweet peas, which he planted for the first time this year, are coming into crop.

Edward W. Fengar has a fine lot of carnations coming on, of which he has about 40,000 plants.

Edward Jacobi has the finest lot of late chrysanthemums seen in this vicinity. The Jeanne Nonin plants have fine, large white flowers and good foliage, and his Mrs. Seidewitz is equally vigorous. He expects to be cutting these until after New Year's.

Ernest Helms smilingly remarked that the chrysanthemum season this year was the best that he has had in fifteen years. He says there is a brisk demand for calendulas. Mr. Helms has 75,000 pansy plants ready for spring forcing.

John Pfeufer complains of too much cloudy weather, which has retarded his carnations to some extent. He is developing several varieties that he originated.

Charles Deisler, 1287 Springfield avenue, has enough mums to last him for a week or two more. He makes the common complaint that carnations are developing slowly because of cloudy weather.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

All the flower stores are preparing for the Christmas rush. Wreath-making and similar work are much in evidence, but otherwise there is little activity. The latter part of the week found a shortage of white carnations, but otherwise there was a sufficiency of everything. Prices have not commenced to stiffen.

Various Notes.

The Lapham Floral Co., of Pawtucket, has given up its branch store at Central Falls.

Alonzo W. Vose, of Cumberland, is a member of the grand jury now serving in the Superior court.

At the annual municipal election at Newport last week, James McLeish was elected alderman and Thomas J. Gibson a councilman.

S. J. Taber, who has been on a two weeks' automobile trip through Maine, returned a few days ago.

Louis J. Reuter, of Westerly, was high man at the recent shoot of the South County Rod and Gun Club, making a total of sixty-five out of a possible seventy-five in four events. He won two prizes.

At the meeting of the common council a few nights ago, the salary of Frederick C. Green, superintendent of the parks of Providence, was increased from $52.90 to $60 per week.

Thomas Gilligan has returned to his old position with Timothy O'Connor.

James Brown has succeeded Mr. Bishop as head gardener of the Bancroft estate at Newport.

Swanson Bros. are building a new greenhouse on Stenton avenue, 30x120 feet.

At the next monthly meeting of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society, Dr. C. Stuart Gager, director of the Brooklyn Botanical Gardens, will speak on "The Uses of Radium and Electricity in Growing Plants."

Welcome S. Carmichael, of the Carmichael Orchards, Shannock, has registered a 21-horsepower touring car.

S. Peterson is having a new house for carnations erected at his place on Central avenue, East Providence.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS.

Jas. G. Barrett, Sambrook Bros. and Felix Menand, all of Troy, N. Y., express satisfaction with the returns from Thanksgiving sales. There was good stock in abundance and it went well.

A. J. Hilton, of Amsterdam, N. Y., says the sales were fully equal to the capacity of the store and force, which are constantly growing.

Christian Dehn and John Ralph, of Saratoga Springs, N. Y., were in the market with a fine cut and report good business. Henry Schrade, of the same city, says Saratoga is again on the map. He is shipping quantities of native pine.

When the writer was in Philadelphia, J. Otto Thilow, of Henry A. Dreer's, expressed big satisfaction with the results, both direct and indirect, of the various modern methods of advertising. He referred especially to the series of lectures being given by the several speakers, now becoming well known, who are seeing their efforts rewarded in a tangible manner. This was noted in Schenectady, when, dur-

BRAMPTON, ONT.

The Market.

In comparison with last year, the closing month of 1915, up to the present, shows results that the most hopeful would not have dared predict. The prospect of an exceedingly busy holiday season becomes brighter with each succeeding day. Orders for orchids are coming in daily from across the border. Florists as far south as St. Louis apparently have heard that such stock flourishes in Canada. If the weather shall continue as favorable as it has been so far, there will be some magnificent Cattleya Trianae and C. Percivaliana for the market. As for violets, the blooms being picked at the new 3-acre range at the Dale Estate exceed in size, fragrance and length of stem the best stock that ever found its way from the south of France. Quality must count, as Christmas prices are fixed at $3 and $2.50 per hundred, wholesale.

The last of the mums are being cut. The bulk of this stock has proved a satisfactory crop. Valley should prove of better quality than usual, special care having been shown in the selection of the pips. One or two ultraloyalists have been expressing themselves in strong terms in the Toronto newspapers in an endeavor to show that valley pips are grown only in Germany. Ever since Adam's time persons have made mistakes and many have still to learn that Denmark grows fairly good pips. Carnations, it is feared, will be exceedingly scarce during the busy season. However, the quantity and quality of the roses allows one to suppose that trade will prove brisker than ever.

Various Notes.

I. Drury, C. Jenkins, C. Cassels and E. Armstrong have left the Dale Estate to join the 126th Peel regiment. Lieut. C. R. Duggan has gone to England to join the royal flying corps. W. G. P.

Youngstown, O.—E. J. Richards has broken ground for a greenhouse.

Johnsville, Pa.—James Moss, wholesale grower, is putting up five houses 15x150. He expects to have them in complete operation by Christmas. J. C. Schmidt, of Bristol, called on Mr. Moss November 29, on his way to the funeral of W. Atlee Burpee at Fordhook, near Doylestown. Mr. Schmidt took a load of Beauties with him. The Moss place is halfway between Bristol and Doylestown, on the main road. Mr. Schmidt told Mr. Moss that he put up seven houses last summer.

The Market.

The supply of stock is somewhat limited, especially in roses and carnations. The stores are beginning to have a holiday look. Some choice Beauties are on the market. They sell rapidly at a good price. In fact, all kinds of roses are clearing well, with Russells, Richmonds and Hadleys at the head. White roses are not moving as well as the rest. Carnations, which were abundant recently, are clearing well, with a growing demand. There are some mums of poor quality on the market and once in a while one will see a good lot in a shipment. Pompons have gone entirely.

Violets are doing better than ever. Valley is about equal to the demand. Snapdragons and mignonette are growing in favor. Orchids are scarce and active. Easter lilies are moving slowly. Roman hyacinths have appeared. A demand is opening for box-wood cemetery wreaths.

Various Notes.

C. F. Guenther, of Hamburg, is shipping some fine Jeanne Nonin mums.

Mr. Slattery, of W. J. Palmer & Son, has been visiting the New York market.

Fifteen of Mack Palmer's Cornell college friends visited him in Buffalo last week. They were entertained at the Ellicott Club. From there they went to Lancaster to see the green-houses.

W. J. Palmer & Son report a heavy week with debutante work, mostly in baskets.

Activity in pot plants has increased. A good assortment of begonias, ardisias, cyclamens and poinsettias is arriving.

Galley Bros., on Genesee street, have been having some unusually attractive window displays. A reindeer hitched to a typical Santa Claus sleigh featured their most recent exhibit.

W. H. Sievers has an attractive window, dressed in red roping and ruscus. A. E.

New Ulm, Minn.—J. H. Anderson, of the New Ulm Greenhouses, reports a banner season in carnation plants. Although he had 3,000 more plants this year than last year, there have not been enough of them to fill all orders.

“Out of the Trenches”

This newly coined slogan will soon be a familiar one to every man on the Globe, because of the sincerity of one man. Men will differ as to plans and methods, but all acclaim “GOD SPEED THE DAY.”

With America at peace it is for her to dig other kinds of trenches—trenches that will yield beauty and profit—trenches that will be productive and not destructive. The gardener and florist know trenches, and he who would enjoy a full measure of profit must dig lots of them and keep them filled. One good thing to use is snapdragon, and as all have ample evidence that our famous Silver Pink is the best one, it is safe and proper to use it. It is now time to begin sowing seed. We offer new crop stock as follows:

Our original Silver Pink, $1.00 per pkt.; 3 for $2.50; 7 for $5.00. Nelrose, Buxton, Garnet, Yellow, White, and mixed, at 35c per pkt.; 3 for $1.00.

Plants of Silver Pink at $5.00 per 100; $45.00 per 1,000. Other varieties later.

All should try a few plants of SILVER QUEEN, a counterpart in color and habit of Silver Pink, with flowers one-third larger than any variety of snapdragon. The price is 50c per plant; $3.00 per doz.

Snapdragon growing is our one hobby. We can supply your every need. Free cultural directions. All orders cash or C. O. D.

THE COAL MARKET.

One of the features of greatest interest in the coal trade this week is the contrast between the eastern and western markets. In the east the market is strong; in the west it is easy. This marked difference is said to be due to the scarcity of labor and cars and the obstruction of traffic in the east, while the opposite conditions prevail in the west. To trace the cause a step farther, the obstruction of traffic in the east is largely the result of the tremendous movement of merchandise to the coast, for transportation to Europe. As the boats for the transatlantic trip are not available in sufficient numbers, the railroad tracks are blockaded with long lines of loaded cars.

In the smokeless coal market, which has been abnormally quiet for the last three weeks, the dullness continues, especially in mine-run, some of which has been sold as low as $1.25, though the major operators hold the price at $1.40.

WATER BOILS OVER.

What would you advise me to do to prevent the water from boiling over the expansion tank, in a hot water system which works remarkably well except in that one particular? The trouble only occurs when the water gets extremely hot. The expansion tank is located three feet above the highest point of the flow pipe and is connected with the lowest point of the return pipe near the boiler. The greenhouse is 30x175. There are a 4-inch main flow and return in the center of the house; the main flow is overhead. One 2½-inch flow pipe runs on each purlin to both ends of the house and they return in eight 2-inch pipes. Anything you may suggest will be appreciated.

B. B.—Wash.

If the flow pipe runs downhill—that is, if the highest point in the system is near the boiler—the trouble will be largely if not entirely prevented by connecting the expansion tank with the highest part of the system, or even by running a 1-inch pipe from the highest part of the system, so that in case the water in the heater boils, it will discharge into the top of the expansion tank. The foregoing alteration may also suffice in case the flow pipe runs uphill, but, if it does not correct the difficulty, it will probably be an easy matter to change to a downhill system.

It sometimes happens that heaters boil over owing to the use of a boiler that is too large. In that case it can be largely prevented by reducing the area of the grate and fire-box, or by attaching a mercury generator. As we understand the piping, the number of square feet, excluding the main flow and return, is not far from 1,100, and six feet of grate surface should be ample. In a house 30x175 feet we would not

ANOTHER FLOW NEEDED.

Have I enough piping in my greenhouse to maintain a night temperature of 60 degrees in central Alabama? The house is 16x80. The side walls consist of three feet of concrete and two feet of glass. The ends are glass. The height to the ridge is eleven feet. There is one 2-inch flow at the south side and six 1½-inch returns at the north side. I use a Wilks hot water boiler, 20x36.

anced and, while it might be well to have one more pipe on the side that is exposed to cold winds, we would prefer to have approximately the same radiation on one side as on the other. As we understand it, the house contains about 300 square feet of radiating surface, which is more than can be supplied properly by a 2-inch flow pipe. We would prefer to use one 2½-inch flow pipe on each plate, or on the purlins, with three 2-inch pipes in a coil on each side wall, or under the side benches, but fairly good results can be secured by using one 2-inch pipe on each plate and four 1½-inch returns on each wall. If the minimum temperature is not much below 30 degrees, one return less in each coil may be used, or two 2-inch flows and six 1½-inch returns.

IS PIPING IN STORE CLOGGED?

I have built a small greenhouse, 18x28, at the rear of my store and have installed a hot water heating system. The greenhouse piping, consisting of one 2-inch flow and ten 1½-inch returns, heats finely. The boiler is next to the store, which is 18x65. In the store I placed one 1½-inch flow and four 1¼-inch returns. The water in the pipes in the store will not circulate or become warm until the water is almost boiling in the main flow in the greenhouse. Can it be that the piping is closed in some way, or what is the trouble? All the flow pipes have a slight fall from the boiler, and the return pipes have a fall toward the boiler. I use a stove to help heat the store. C. H. T.—W. Va.

From the description given by C. H. T., we are not able to decide just why the circulation is so unsatisfactory in the store. One cause of such trouble is the pocketing of air in the pipes. If the coil in the store is fed by an independent pipe from the boiler, a pipe should lead from the highest point in this system to the expansion tank, or at least there should be an air valve at that point. If the store heating system is correctly vented and contains no pockets for air, we would make sure that this system is properly balanced with the one in the greenhouse.

We note that the store system has a 1½-inch flow and four 1¼-inch returns, but the length of the pipes is not given either in the store or greenhouse. If the coils are sixty or more feet in length, we would run a 2-inch flow pipe to supply the store, carrying it up to a point as high as, or a little higher than, the highest point in the flow pipe leading to the greenhouse. In case the coils in the store are not as high as those in the greenhouse, and especially if they are lower than the top of the boiler, we would elevate them to a level with the coils in the greenhouse.

Everything else being equal, the circulation is better the higher the pipes are above the boiler. Moreover, as the friction in the small pipes in the store is greater than in the 1½-inch and 2-inch pipes in the greenhouse, this would tend to favor the circulation in the greenhouse, especially when, as appears to be the case in the store, the flow pipe is too small for the radiation it supplies.

THE HEATING PROBLEM SOLVED

Judging strictly according to mechanical merits, it's the METROPOLITAN PATENTED BOILER you want.

Because of their proven scientifically perfect construction, Metropolitan Patented Boilers will heat a given amount of water quicker, with less fuel and less attention than any other boiler on the market. The remarkable heating efficiency and quick steaming qualities of these boilers are due to their large and effective heating surface.

Just a few points of Metropolitan Patented Boiler merit:—Smooth, perfect finished castings. Push nipple connections. Large fire box, providing ample combustion chamber, and permitting a sufficient charge of fuel to require attention only at long intervals. Deep ash pit, making the removal of ashes a slight task. Large flues, making the boiler easy to clean. Grates that are made for hard usage and long service. And above all, they are Fuel Saving, not Fuel Wasting.

We also make soft coal boilers which are smokeless, and save 50 per cent in coal.

Put Your Heating Problems Up to Us.

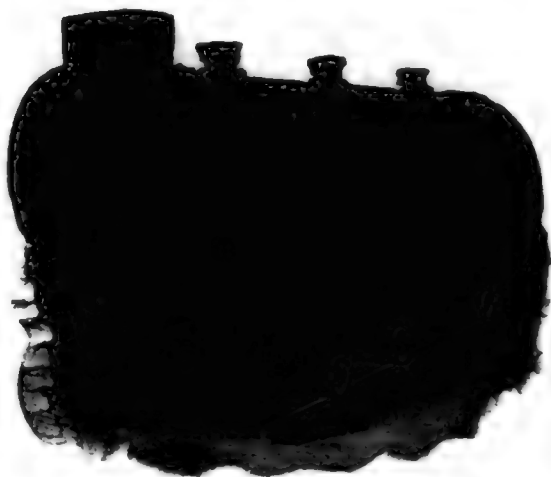

We've Been at it for 44 Years.

The dark weather has had a somewhat depressing influence on the cut flower trade. Good stock cleans up readily, though. Carnations are scarce, as there was only one hour's sun last week. Potted plants are in good demand. Sweet peas are scarce. Chrysanthemums are about over for this season.

Various Notes.

For its recent meeting, the Syracuse Florists' Club attended the theater, then dined and afterward held a short business session. The next meeting will be held January 8 at Warner Bultmann's store.

The Baker Floral Co. has had a successful season with its chrysanthemums. It has a fine lot of poinsettias and azaleas for Christmas and is growing 10,000 lilies for Easter.

Charles Bourne, on Rich street, is cutting some fine chrysanthemums and carnations and is busy getting geranium cuttings into the sand.

Miles S. Henckle has been kept busy by several large funerals. He is showing some good Boston ferns in his windows.

Both windows of the store of P. R. Quinlan & Co. are filled with fine Chatelaine and other begonias and Primula obconica in 6-inch pots. This firm is receiving some excellent violets from its greenhouses at the valley.

Robert Bard has opened a store at 103 West Jefferson street. He has an attractive window display of cyclamens and ferns. He reports business good.

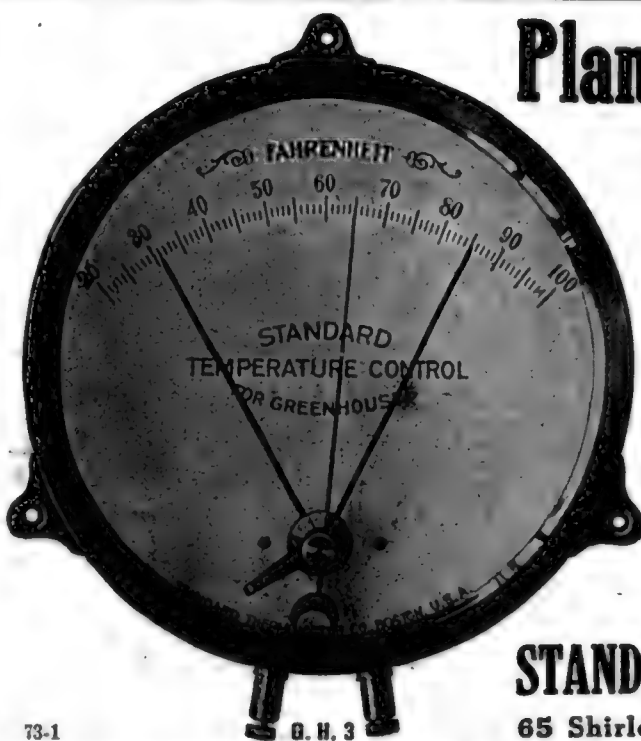

The W. E. Day Co. is having a good sale of cyclamens and azaleas. It is preparing for a large Christmas business.

Henry Morris has his store filled with cyclamens and azaleas, for which he finds a good sale. Business in general is active.

Chester Harris has an attractive window of Paper Whites, narcissi and ferns. He has been busy with funeral work. H. F. B.

NEW BEDFORD.

The Market.

The outlook for Christmas business is highly encouraging; even this early there is a call for plants of various kinds. Azaleas and cyclamens, as usual, are the most popular. At the present time the market is short on cut flowers. Last week there was little sun, with the result that prices on roses and carnations took a jump upwards. There still are a few mums to be had, principally Bonnaffons and Nonins.

Various Notes.

Joseph V. Pierce & Co. have a fine collection of potted plants for their Christmas trade. The azaleas are exceptionally good.

A good call for wreaths is reported by Ernest Chamberlain, of Sixth street.

H. A. Jahn had a big week in funeral work.

William P. Pierce is doing his usual good business. There is a growing demand for blooming plants.

Post & Gray installed a refrigerator last week in their department at the Steiger-Dudgeon store. They will open a temporary store for the holidays at 287 Union street and will have a stand in the lobby of the Parker House.

E. G. Davis, of 191 Shawmut avenue, is having serious trouble with his carnations. He has lost nearly two-thirds of his entire crop from stem-rot. Mr. Davis has some excellent Whitmani and Roosevelt ferns, for which he finds a ready market. W. M. P.

ROCK ISLAND, ILL.

The Tri-City Florists' Club recently met in regular session at the residence of Edward Patten, Mr. and Mrs. Patten and James Hansen being the hosts. President Harry Bills occupied the chair. After the routine business had been disposed of, the question of holding a fall flower show was brought up, but this was defeated. C. O. E. Boehm, superintendent of parks, started the discussion of the evening with a talk on lawns, trees, shrubs, fertilizer, winter protection, pruning, etc., other members taking part in the discussion. This was followed by refreshments, after which a vote of thanks was extended to the hosts of the evening. The next meeting will be held January 13, at the residence of J. Staack, Moline, Ill. Wm. Goos, Sec'y.

Athenia, N. J.—As business has been brisk since September and stock for Christmas selling is in splendid shape, George W. Vreeland anticipates a banner holiday trade.

The Market.

Interest is centering in the industrial exposition in January in the new Delco building, East First street. Few of the florists will be represented. Coming at a time when stock is scarce and prices above the average would make it too expensive an undertaking for most of the local florists. Those taking space are, so far, the Heiss Co., Miami Floral Co., Dayton Floral Co., and, among the nurserymen, John Siebenthaler, this city, and the Bohlender Nursery Co., of Sidney.

Chrysanthemums being over with, roses and carnations are coming into prominence. The demand for them is already good and prices took a decided jump last week, stock not being any too plentiful. In potted plants some good azaleas already are seen. Cyclamens, among many of the growers, are not so good as they were a year ago, the warm fall weather being blamed. Primula obconica and P. Sinensis are coming in good, as are some nice specimens of Chatelaine and Cincinnati begonias. The stores are putting on their Christmas appearance, in green and red. Red ruscus is being used extensively, especially for cemetery purposes. All look for a good trade throughout the holidays.

D. Rusconi, of Cincinnati, was a recent visitor. G. W. B.

Cairo, Ill.—H. W. Cade is proprietor of the flower store formerly conducted by his brother, H. H. Cade.

Van Wert, O.—Fire occasioned a loss of $2,000 to the greenhouses of Scharff Bros., on Miller street. Rebuilding has been started.

Des Moines, Ia.—Immediately after his return from the Chicago flower show, James S. Wilson began planning for a fall flower show at Des Moines in 1916. Mr. Wilson says he will have the coöperation of growers from all parts of the country. Mr. Wilson was one of the judges of the Chicago show.

MINNEAPOLIS.

The Market.

Business last week was brisk. Stock cleaned up well each day. The bright weather of last week is plainly shown in both the quality and quantity of the flowers. Carnations are scarce, bringing $5 per hundred. The greenhouses are well stocked with fine carnations, and if the sun shines this week there will be plenty of stock on hand, for a large crop is on the way. Valley still is in large demand and is bringing $5 per hundred. Violets are decidedly scarce and as soon as they arrive they are sold at $1.25 per hundred. Lilies are in demand and make $1.50 per dozen. Roses are arriving in good condition, with the exception of Killarney, which is quite light. The prices range from 6 to 18 cents each.

Ladies' Club Doings.

The monthly meeting of the Lady Florists' Club was held at the residence of Mrs. G. Malmquist, 2607 Grand avenue, December 14, at 2:30 p. m.

Various Notes.

Cal Rice, of Rice Bros., and J. Van Bochove, of Kalamazoo, Mich., gave a venison party at the Elks' club, to which a dozen friends were invited. Their hunting bag this year contained one deer and one moose apiece. This is about the seventh or eighth year that Messrs. Rice and Van Bochove have made this trip after big game. This year they went 125 miles from Duluth, on Lake Superior.

The Whitted Floral Co. had a pretty display last week, done in white and black. The powder puff corsage was one of the attractions.

Carl Christensen, of the Minneapolis Floral Co., is back on duty again, having recently undergone an operation for appendicitis.

NASHVILLE, TENN.

The Market.

There are more shoppers on the streets than I remember having ever seen before. Of course this has been good for the trade and, as a result, business was good last week. There were a goodly number of social events and one or two store openings that heightened the demand. There was practically no stock of any value to go to waste. Mums still are on the market, but the buyers have lost their appetite for them and most of the loss on unsold flowers was on this item. Taken as a season, however, there has been less loss this year on mums than for a long time. Roses are coming in plentifully again and there is every prospect of a good supply for the holidays. American Beauties are especially promising. Some have 4-foot stems and are of exceptional quality. Ophelia and Hoosier Beauty continue to hold the market for medium-priced roses, few other varieties selling as long as these are to be had. Ward has fallen off in demand as a result of the popularity of Ophelia.

Carnations are plentiful and are selling well, but there is no feature to be mentioned. The varieties offered are the old stand-bys. No one here tried any of the novelties last season. Poinsettias of excellent quality are appearing in the windows, as are the regular made-up boxes. I have, thus far, seen nothing novel in Christmas supplies for the florists. There are a few Buddha Asiatica to be offered if they can be forced early enough. Bulbous stock has not made its appearance thus far, with the exception of a few Paper Whites. Roman hyacinths will not cut such a large figure in the Christmas stock here this season as in the past, I am told. Dutch bulbs are about all cleaned up. The stock on hand is the smallest I have ever seen at this season. The demand for tulips and bedding hyacinths has been especially good.

Various Notes.

Geny Bros. erected a handsome electric sign last week that reaches well over the sidewalk.

The Hillcrest School Farm has a single chrysanthemum that has proven entirely hardy, which began blooming early in July and still has a few blooms in spite of the winter weather. The farm will propagate this mum this season. It was grown from seed two years ago.

The Joy Floral Co. has built a new "den" for Tom Joy at the rear of the storeroom. It is built on the side of the wall like a balcony and will afford much-needed privacy when there is difficult work to be done.

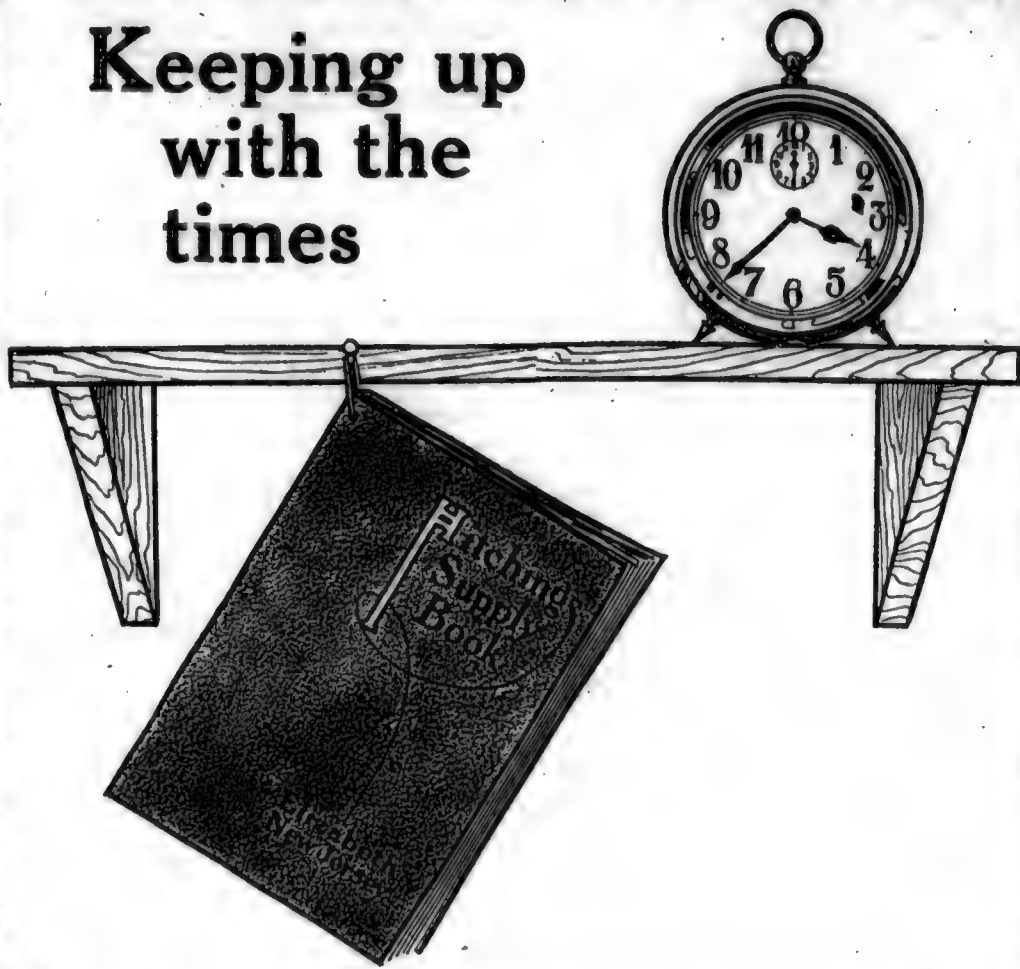

J. F. Corbett has given himself a new automobile for a Christmas present. His houses are filled to overflowing with young bedding plants.

Charles Waine is remodeling his houses and will enlarge them in the spring.

McIntyre Bros. have things in good shape for the holiday trade. The mums and other Thanksgiving plants are all sold. They say they had practically no loss on mums this year. F. B.

Binghamton, N. Y.—William H. Graham is manager of the flower and plant department recently opened in the Fowler department store.

Keeping up with the times

ONE day last week I walked into a New Jersey Grower's workroom, and right there, plump in front of me, was a neat little shelf with a Big Ben clock on it and one of our Supply Books hanging underneath.

The owner, seeing my glance, smilingly said: "Those are the two things that keep us right up to the times."

Taking the Supply Book down, he turned to the inside cover and pointed to these words—"Anyone not hanging this book on shelf when through using, liable to discharge."

Then he explained how he considered that book almost like insurance. "Suppose, for example," he said, "a heating fitting breaks some zero day. All I have to do is leaf over that book until I come to the picture of the very fitting I want, call you folks on the phone, and in the shortest possible time I get the fitting. No, sir, I wouldn't be without that Supply Book."

Coming home I wondered whether you had one or not.

Will you let me know? If you haven't I will promptly see that one is sent, hot foot, to you.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

RHODODENDRONS IN RIGOROUS REGIONS

Are any of the rhododendrons sufficiently hardy for satisfactory use in northern outdoor planting? Many would answer, "No." But this article, written by an experienced landscape architect of Buffalo, N. Y., answers positively, "Yes, if the planter chooses the right varieties, the right part of the grounds and the right methods of culture."

IF WE are really in earnest in making the grounds beautiful, we must begin by studying our conditions critically and must not yield too readily to the popular notion that success with the rhododendron, the most beautiful of all flowering shrubs, is impossible in the northern states. Too often a spot is selected in dense shade, where nothing else would grow and where the soil is absolutely unfitted, and in the end the plants die and we join in the chorus that rhododendrons do not succeed in the north. As the best argument to the contrary, the writer might call attention to the now famous collection of rhododendrons and azaleas in Highland park, Rochester, N. Y., started by John Dunbar about fifteen years ago.

Preparing to Plant.

The proper location of the rhododendron border is the most essential point to be considered. In this connection we must bear in mind that it is not the extreme cold that kills the rhododendrons, for the tops of the plants do not have to be covered in the winter, but it is the deep freezing of the ground, and the action of the winter sun on the frozen leaves, that does the damage. For this reason rhododendrons should be planted with a northern exposure, or in the shade of high and rather thin evergreens, or on the north side of tall, dense evergreen trees, so that the foliage will be shielded from the effects of the winter sun.

Next to location, the preparation of the planting bed is of chief importance. This should be well drained and excavated to a depth of about two feet, according to local conditions, and filled in with leaf-mold, sand and a small proportion of well prepared top soil.

When it is impossible to secure leaf-mold or wood soil, a light sandy soil may be treated with Epsom salts at the rate of one-quarter of a pound to the square foot. This treatment, used three times during each growing season, will greatly aid matters, as the Epsom salts will neutralize the effect of the lime in the ordinary soil, and the lime is the element that is death to the rhododendrons.

Keeping Them Green in Winter.

The covering of the foliage in winter is not absolutely necessary, if the winter sun is excluded, but old, dry leaves should be packed around the plants to a depth of a few feet, in the late fall before the ground is frozen, and weighted down to prevent them from being blown away. In this way the green leaves are exposed and their beautiful effect gives cheer during the long winter months; yet the plants are perfectly secure from deep freezing and are enabled to obtain the necessary supply of soil moisture to keep the leaves plump and fresh. Whenever the soil is frozen at the roots, the moisture supply is cut off and the plants take on the dry, yellow appearance that is usually seen in faulty plantations. This point regarding moisture supply can also be applied to every evergreen tree or shrub, whether broad-leaved, like the rhododendrons, or like the ordinary cone-bearing or typical evergreens.

Success or failure is largely dependent on our skill in selecting suitable varieties and in limiting ourselves to what are known as the ironclad list, and the best rule is that masses of a few of the hardiest species and varieties are more to be desired than a larger variety of those of questionable hardiness.

Choosing the Right Varieties.

The nucleus of the rhododendron collection should be the species known as Rhododendron Catawbiense grandiflorum, an improved form of the rhododendron that grows wild from Pennsylvania to the south. This plant is absolutely hardy and is perhaps the most beautiful wild shrub in the United States. The flowers in the budding stage have a purplish color, but when fully expanded they are a beautiful rosy lavender. This species and its white-flowered form, known botanically as Rhododendron Catawbiense album, can be absolutely depended upon, under proper conditions, to thrive and give perennial satisfaction.

Another species that is useful for large plantations, especially on country estates, is the giant laurel of the south, Rhododendron maximum. This species is absolutely hardy, growing in a wild state as far north as central New York. Its flowers are white, sometimes with a touch of pink. Although not as large and conspicuous as those of Catawbiense, the flowers are quite showy, and, as they bloom later in the season, are desirable in prolonging the season of bloom.

There are a number of useful hardy low-growing species, such as Rhododendron Wilsoni, a pink-flowered species from China, and R. punctatum, a species native to our own country; also the two species from the European Alps, R. hirsutum and R. ferrugineum, well known to tourists of the Alps as Alpine roses. All of these are well adapted, by their low, compact growth, for use as marginal plants in front of the higher-growing species, and their different style of foliage is remarkably pleasing when the plants are out of bloom.

The so-called ironclad list embraces a number of thoroughly tried varieties, which can be depended upon for hardiness, but great discretion must be used in restricting one's self to the few absolutely hardy forms. It must be remembered that the hybrid forms have in them the blood of the Indian species, tual advantage, provided care is taken to prevent a clash of colors. The dark foliage of the rhododendrons forms a splendid background for the brilliant blossoms of the azaleas. On the country estate unexcelled combinations can be secured by planting giant laurel, our native Rhododendron maximum, which is a tall-growing plant, for a background, and grouping in front large masses of these deciduous azaleas. As the giant laurel blooms a month later than the azaleas, the season of bloom is thereby prolonged for a considerable period.

Treatment After Flowering.

The care of the plants after flowering is of great importance, but is quite the plants. Enough buds should be left to give a magnificent display and the following year will well repay for the slight sacrifice.

An abundant supply of water should be given during the dry weather and the foliage should be occasionally sprayed to keep the breathing pores, or stomata, open and in good condition, especially in smoky cities or wherever the atmospheric conditions are not the best.

HIS SUGGESTION.

"What do you think of our scheme for the Christmas decorations?" she inquired. "It is holly over laurel leaves."

"Very good," he replied, "but personally I should prefer mistletoe over yew."—Examiner.

PURELY PERSONAL.

H. P. Knoble—High Pressure Knoble they call him in Cleveland, landed at Castle Garden Christmas day 1884. He's gone some distance since then.

So many florists have enjoyed the hospitality of the J. A. Evans home at Richmond, Ind., that there will be wide regret at the news that Mrs. Evans was operated on at Mercy hospital, Chicago, December 16, for appendicitis. The trip to Chicago was made to obtain the services of one of the most famous surgeons in America and it will be noted with pleasure that she is convalescing rapidly. Mr. Evans expects to remain at Chicago until he can take Mrs. Evans home with him.

PAINT FOR GREENHOUSES.

Greenhouse structures, in addition to being subjected to the action of the elements from the exterior, are constantly menaced by the warm, humid atmosphere within. It is for this reason that the greenhouse structure must be adequately protected from rapid decay, this being accomplished most economically and efficiently by the application of a sufficient coating of paint to all surfaces which are subjected to interior or exterior exposure.

In an investigation of the special requirements of greenhouse paint, made A Rhododendron Plantation at Buffalo 5 Years Old.

Rhododendron arboreum, which is not hardy in this country. It is this blood which, in conjunction with that of Rhododendron Catawbiense, gives the great range of beautiful colors which the florists show in their Easter displays.

Among the best are the following: Rhododendron album elegans, blush pink, changing to white; Lady Grey Egerton, silvery pink; Caractacus, rich crimson; R. roseum elegans, rosy purplish flowers; Boule de Neige, pure white, and Kettledrum, purplish lavender.

Many others might be added to this list, but we would simply be sailing too close to the danger line and inviting disaster.

Other Shrubs with Rhododendrons.

A number of highly desirable and absolutely hardy plants of the same family could be associated with the rhododendrons in the same plantations. Chief among these is the mountain laurel, or Kalmia latifolia, which is used in England by the thousands and is there considered the most beautiful plant ever imported from America. As it is an evergreen, it is as useful for its winter effect as the rhododendron, and its graceful pink flowers, produced in great abundance, place it in the first rank of floral beauties.

The native and hybrid Ghent azaleas, which, although not evergreens, have even a greater range of brilliant colors than the hardy rhododendrons, can be planted with them to their mu-simple. Immediately after the blossoms have faded, it is necessary to pick them off to prevent their going to seed, giving just the same treatment that is accorded to lilac bushes, for when seed is developed there can be no blooms for the following year. It is also well, when planting a new border in the spring, to pick off about one-half of the flower buds, so as to prevent too heavy a drain on the constitution of by the Patton people at the request of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co., it was found that the most essential property of a paint for greenhouses is impermeability to moisture. The paint must be sufficiently impermeable to prevent the penetration of moisture from within or without. Moisture in the structure will in time cause decay, or be drawn to the exterior paint surface by the heat of the sun, causing blistering and peeling of the paint coating. In this connection it would be well to call attention to the fact that the structure must be dry throughout before painting. If this important feature is not carefully considered, the moisture will in time be drawn toward the exterior exposed surface, causing blistering and peeling.

White is the most rational color to use for greenhouse painting, since it gives the maximum reflection of light.

Other features to be considered are ease of application, elasticity of dried coating, permanency of color, durability and, last, but not least, is the matter of covering the maximum quantity of surface with the minimum quantity of material without losing the other essential qualities. No! Paint is not paint, by any means. There is as much difference in the value of paint as in the value of flowers.

BRIEF FACTS ON GIGANTEUMS.

We would appreciate some advice on the best method of growing giganteum lilies, both recently imported and cold storage bulbs, for Easter. When should they be started for that date?

Y. P. C.—Mo.

This is the latest date for potting giganteum lilies for Easter, 1916. Give them a temperature of 60 degrees from start to finish. Be careful to run them on the dry side until the pots have plenty of active roots. Giganteums need warm culture and some shade to give them the necessary length of stem. The cold storage bulbs require a much shorter period than the recently imported ones.

TIMING PLANTS FOR EASTER.

Kindly state the best time to bring azaleas, rhododendrons, hydrangeas, etc., into the house so as to have them in bloom for Easter.

R. K.—Md.

Allow azaleas eight weeks; rhododendrons, six to eight weeks; lilacs, four to five weeks; genistas, four to five weeks; spiræas, eight to ten weeks—the pink varieties require more time than the white ones; lilies, six weeks from the time buds can be counted; rambler and other roses, nine to twelve weeks; French hydrangeas, eight to ten weeks; Hydrangea Otaksa, ten to twelve weeks in a temperature of 60 degrees. Much will depend on weather conditions. The periods stated will each allow time to give the plants a little hardening off before they are used. Easter comes late next year, April 23.

C. W.

HIS POINSETTIAS ARE LATE.

My poinsettias seem to be a trifle late this year and I wonder whether the trouble is local or general, as I cut my plants back at the same time as last year and this is the first time I have had this trouble. Can you advise me?

R. K.—Md.

The general trouble with poinsettias this year has been that they are too early, many being fully developed for Thanksgiving. I am afraid you have been growing your plants too cool. They need a temperature of 60 degrees at night, which can be reduced somewhat when the bracts are well expanded.

C. W.

DISEASED HELIOTROPE PLANTS.

I am sending you a heliotrope plant which I think is full of mite or is affected with some sort of disease. Will you please let me know what the trouble is, and the remedy for it?

E. M.—Mass.

The sample plant was so dried up that I could not possibly tell what had been the trouble with it. I think possibly your cuttings may have been overpotted, or kept too damp and in too low a temperature. Try keeping your plants in a warm, sunny house and they will grow well. A winter temperature of 55 degrees suits them.

THAT PRIMA DONNA ROSE.

Reading in The Review of the controversy over the Prima Donna rose at the meeting of the New York Florists' Club December 13, we trust we shall not transgress too much on your space by answering some of the points made.

In the first place, we wish to say that three years ago we bought a number of plants of Prima Donna, that were sold to us and billed to us as Prima Donna. In addition to this, it was advertised all over the west, and is so today, as Prima Donna. In our circular, which we are sending to the trade, we have printed, in addition to Prima Donna, the words "Mme. P. Euler, Guillot, 1908," without knowing from our own experience that Euler and Prima Donna are one and the same.

The strain which we are selling under the name of the Florex Gardens has been produced after careful selection, experimentation and thorough cultivation, and the success we now have in producing this beautiful rose is by no means the same as it was when we first began to grow it. The fact that the judges at the New York Florists' Club gave the exhibitor a vote of thanks and the rose was awarded eighty-seven points of merit, shows the value of the rose, with which the name had nothing whatever to do.

In addition, we think the name of Prima Donna is much more attractive to the general public, whom we all want to serve. The French name would have been contorted in all manner of ways. If Euler and Prima Donna are one and the same rose, that would be nothing unusual in rose nomenclature. From the action of Mr. Wallace R. Pierson at the meeting of the New York Florists' Club, one would infer that he is strongly opposed to this matter of change in rose nomenclature, but opening one of the latest catalogues of A. N. Pierson, Inc., we find Prince de Bulgarie advertised as Mrs. Taft and Mme. Ferdinand Jamain listed as American Beauty. No doubt there are many others in the same class.

It is not our intention to exhibit this rose for awards of merit, which, of course, are always acceptable, but it is done to show the grower what this beautiful rose can do. And it is our intention to exhibit it at the meetings during the dark months, as an impression has gone abroad that it will not do well in the dark winter days. We have never shown the rose as a new rose and if it has been called a new rose in newspaper reports, it was done without our knowledge and authority.

The Florex Gardens.

THE MRS. THAYER ROSE.

The following clipping from the Horticultural Trade Journal (British) will be read with interest by many growers here:

"Mr. Harry A. Barnard, of Stuart Low & Co., has just returned from his usual business trip through the United States, bringing back with him a number of blooms of a fine new light pink rose named Mrs. Bayard Thayer, raised by A. Montgomery, of the Waban Rose Conservatories, Natick, Mass. Unfortunately, most of the flowers failed to last out the fortnight of travel, otherwise it was intended to exhibit them at the R. H. S. meeting. Mr. Barnard did, however, bring along a couple of blooms, and we feel safe in hazarding that the Mrs. Bayard Thayer is an important rose. It appears to have the build and growth of the Mrs. Charles Russell, another of the Waban Rose Conservatories' seedlings, and these characteristics, coupled with its strong perfume, should make it a serious rival to the Mme. Abel Chatenay."

The Mrs. Thayer might be expected to have "the build and growth of Mrs. Russell," since it is a sport of that variety. It is understood it is to be disseminated next season.

HEARST AND RADIANCE.

A large number of growers who have found My Maryland an excellent rose, except for its color, will be interested in the approaching dissemination of Mrs. William R. Hearst, a sport said to be identical in all respects except color, which is a clear dark pink.

Radiance has succeeded admirably with some, but not with all, of those who have grown it under glass; but it has been a great success everywhere as a garden rose. Red Radiance is a sport, described by the name.

Both these varieties were shown at the Cleveland exhibition and at shows farther east this season by A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., from which place they will be disseminated in the spring. The photographs used for the accompanying illustrations were made by Wallace R. Pierson.

IN THE HEART OF THE ROCKIES.

Not far from the famous old Anacconda mine in Montana, a short distance south of the city of Butte, the traveler suddenly comes upon what at first sight appears to be a mountain lake glistening in the distance, but what at subsequent and closer view is nothing more or less than the greenhouses of the Butte Floral Co. Here, under 90,000 square feet of glass, stock is grown for sale in Butte and elsewhere.

It was in 1900 that three energetic men, William J. Day, James H. King and Philo H. King, concentrated their resources and launched the Butte Floral Co. The beginning, as most beginnings are, was modest, but by business acumen and enterprise the three owners in sixteen years have developed the inauspicious beginning into what is one of the largest greenhouses and retail establishments in the state.

Roses are a specialty and Charles Adams, the rose grower, particularly likes Richmond, Killarney, White Killarney, Shawyer, Hoosier Beauty and Ophelia. These varieties in large quantities are disposed of by the downtown salesroom at 27 West Broadway. The illustration herewith gives a view in the rose house. There are 5,000 plants and the Christmas cut is estimated at 7,500 flowers. It is the first Christmas since the concern started business that it was not necessary to send to some distant market for roses.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The executive committee of the American Rose Society held a meeting in New York city December 13. It was reported that the rose garden premium for the Philadelphia flower show, March 25 to April 2, had been raised, so that the first prize shall be $500 in cash, second prize $400 cash and third prize $300 cash.

The Henry F. Michell Co., of Philadelphia, offers a gold medal each for the best vase of twenty-five cut blooms of American Beauty roses, of twenty-five cut blooms of Mrs. Charles Russell roses and of twenty-five cut blooms of red roses. Special prizes have been received from:

August Doemling, Lansdowne, Pa.	$25
Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa. (private grower)	25
Charles H. Totty, Madison, N. J.	25
S. S. Skidelsky & Co., Philadelphia	10
S. J. Reuter & Son, Westerly, R. I.	25
Lord & Burnham Co., New York city	25
Harry O. May, Summit, N. J.	25
Pulverized Manure Co., Chicago	25
Kroeschell Bros. Co., Chicago	25
Dingee & Conard Co., West Grove, Pa.	25

These prizes are all at the disposition of the American Rose Society, to place where they will be most useful.

The secretary was directed to notify all affiliated societies that beginning January, 1916, they will be required to pay 25 cents for each member instead of 10 cents as heretofore. The reason for this action is that the furnishing of medals and annuals as now proposed makes it an impracticable arrangement, based on 10 cents, for the American Rose Society to carry out.

The committee appointed at the last annual meeting to report on the standardization of stems of various cut flowers for commercial sale reported progress. The committee was composed of S. S. Pennock, of Philadelphia; Patrick Welch, of Boston; Frank H. Traendly, of New York city. The arranging of standard lengths of stem was brought up by former President Elliott. From time to time such procedure has been requested by commercial florists in various parts of the country.

Rose Red Radiance.

A matter was referred to the executive committee asking if something could be done in regard to preventing the renaming of roses different from the name under which they were first disseminated. Action was deferred, the report to be presented at the coming annual meeting.

There are 114 members of the American Rose Society in good standing with the Society of American Florists and this entitles S. S. Pennock, the president of the American Rose Society, to membership for 1916 on the board of directors of the S. A. F.

The following roses were registered and publication of the register directed: Mrs. Wm. R. Hearst—A sport from My Maryland, with the same productive habit of growth and freedom of flowering. In color, a clear, dark pink, a shade resembling Bridesmaid, and a decided improvement on the parent.

Red Radiance—A sport from Radiance. Similar in habit and growth, but a clear, even shade of red in color and of equal merit to its parent as a forcing and garden rose.

Little Sunshine—Seedling from Rosa multiflora nana x Soleil d'Or. Color, creamy yellow, varying to deep golden yellow, occasionally flecked or splashed with crimson. Double flowers one and one-half to two inches in diameter, carried in large panicles throughout the season. Habit, dwarf, spreading and vigorous, similar to R. multiflora nana. Very hardy and valuable for garden planting, but of special value for pot culture.

These were submitted for registration by A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn.

Benj. Hammond, Sec'y.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Hydrangeas.

Avoid leaving hydrangeas too long in frames or pits from which frost cannot be excluded. The French varieties, which are more valuable for early forcing than H. Otaksa, are also somewhat more tender, and a little neglect may cause a loss of all the terminal buds. The French varieties bloom so much better early in the season that they have practically superseded H. Otaksa. However, the latter will still be grown in great numbers for later flowering and is still without a rival for growing into specimens in tubs for lawn, piazza or other uses. A batch of the French hydrangeas can be started now in a temperature of 50 degrees. These will flower in March and prove useful; also, if any H. Otaksa were propagated late and it is desired to flower them with a single large head each, such plants can be put in heat now. It is better not to subject such plants to a temperature as low as freezing, as is often recommended. It is far better to let them hold all their foliage.

Callas.

Callas in pots flower much more freely in midwinter than those planted in benches. Keep the pots well watered and, in addition to waterings with liquid manure, give surface dressings of fine bone or Clay's fertilizer. It is astonishing how the roots will come to the surface and greedily devour these top-dressings. Callas will bloom well if grown as cool as 50 degrees at night, but flowers will come more quickly at 55 to 58 degrees. As between the old Calla Æthiopica and the newer Godfrey there is absolutely no comparison. The latter will outbloom the former three to one and the flowers are more purely white. Sometimes callas are troubled with mealy bug, but not if the hose is used judiciously among them.

Cinerarias and Calceolarias.

With the passing of chrysanthemums, it is now possible to give cinerarias and calceolarias some much needed additional space. It is not possible to house shapely plants of either of these where they are allowed to crowd each other. Elevate some of the larger plants on inverted pots. Nice specimens can be grown where this is done. Both of these plants prefer a cold house, not over 45 degrees at night. Neither likes much sun, even in midwinter, and each appreciates a spraying over on clear days. Green aphid is partial to both plants and will soon disfigure them if spraying with nicotine or fumigation is neglected. Now that the weather is steadily cold, both calceolarias and cinerarias grow quite fast. When repotting use a fairly coarse but moderately rich compost and firm it well.

Pansies.

If there is any vacant space in a cool house where a night temperature of 40 to 45 degrees is maintained, it is a good plan to lift and plant a batch of pansies from coldframes, or even outdoors if there is not any frost below the mulch over them. These pansies will soon start to flower and will give good stems, which are what is needed in bunching these popular flowers. Too little attention has been paid by pansy specialists to stem development. Mere size of flowers seems to be the constant aim. The man who can perfect a strain with flower stalks two or three inches longer than existing types will confer a great boon. If outdoor pansies are not yet mulched, lose no time in covering them. All herbaceous plants should also be mulched without further delay, where the work has not already been done.

Canterbury Bells.

Canterbury bells are impatient of hard forcing. They rarely are seen in good condition for Easter, but, as the coming Easter is unusually late, it will be possible to have them in good condition at that time, April 23. Plants potted in September and being carried over in a coldframe, can be placed, or at least a part of them, in a cool, sunny house. They will not start throwing up spikes for some time, but you will only spoil them if you give them a warm house. The cooler they are allowed to start up, the better they will be. In watering use care not to damp the centers of the crowns, or rot may set in. The single variety is much the best for pot culture.

Anemone Japonica.

Anemone Japonica, the beautiful fall-flowering perennial, is not half sufficiently appreciated by florists. It is valuable for cutting and extremely useful in floral designs. Propagation is easy at this season. Dig up a few old plants, cut off the thicker roots and cut these up into short lengths. Spread on a cutting bench where they can have a good bottom heat and cover with a light layer of sand. Give the bench a watering once a day. It does not take more than a few weeks for growths to appear, and when these have made two or three leaves, lift and pot them. Grow warm for a while, and gradually harden off toward spring. They can be planted out about the end of April if not sold to some of your customers. There are many varieties now in commerce, but for commercial growers nothing is better than A. Japonica, with single, pure white flowers.

STIGMONOSE AND LEAF-SPOT.

Enclosed you will find some Enchantress foliage, which seems to be badly affected by both stigmonose and leaf-spot. What can I do to stop the further progress of these diseases? From the time of benching, about August 5, until recently, I have sprayed about every ten days with Bordeaux mixture. Lately I have sprayed with Bordeaux about once in two weeks. I have kept the soil well loosened. The plants have made good, strong growth and the flowers are excellent, but in several benches the entire foliage is withering. I notice that the trouble is also starting on my Ward and White Enchantress. J. S.—N. Y.

Bordeaux mixture is the proper remedy for leaf-spot, but there is not much of that disease on the specimens submitted. Apparently most of the trouble is due to stigmonose, which, in aggravated cases, causes the leaves to dry up. Ordinarily there are only spots of dead tissue, but when a spot spreads across the width of a leaf, that portion above the spot is certain to dry up for lack of nourishment. There is practically no help for a plant when it is as far advanced as that. Either pull out such plants or cut away any branches that are badly affected. When you propagate your next season's stock, avoid such plants, and in course of time you will be free from the trouble.

A. F. J. B.

TEMPERATURE FOR CUTTINGS.

Kindly inform me what is the right temperature for the sand in the cutting bed, in rooting carnation cuttings.

G. W. S.—Mass.

It is a mistake to use much bottom heat for rooting carnation cuttings. It would no doubt hasten the rooting somewhat, but it would also cause the cuttings to soften. If you maintain an overhead temperature of 50 degrees and you have a 2-inch pipe under the propagating bench, there will be enough bottom heat. We do not box up the space under the bench to any extent, but consider a board or curtain twelve inches wide below the edge-board as being enough. Of greater importance than bottom heat is proper control of the air currents and the shading from the sun at certain periods. If you have proper control over these, you will be able to propagate carnation cuttings successfully on any bench.

A. F. J. B.

INFESTED WITH RED SPIDER.

We are enclosing some carnation leaves. The plants a month ago were in first-class condition. The soil was not changed in the bed last year, but was all spaded up well and cow manure was mixed with it. We have been giving a considerable amount of ventilation, but have had a great deal of cloudy weather. Please let us know what treatment to use. The houses containing the carnations run north and south, and the plants at the south end do not seem to be as badly affected as those at the north end. S. & S.—Ia.

Your carnations seem to be badly infested with red spider. That scurfy appearance of the leaves is the result, and if you will look closely you will be able to detect the tiny insects. Get an Evans salt sprayer and use it according to directions and you will be rid of the spider in due time. Lose no time in this, as the longer you put it off, the harder it will be to exterminate them.

A. F. J. B.

INFESTED WITH NEMATODES.

We have begonia plants that are infested with nematodes, which cause a form of club-root. The roots become enlarged and the plants begin to wilt and finally die. We believe that our carnation plants also have become infested. We want your advice as to how to kill out the nematodes and how to prevent their presence. What plants do they principally infest?

R. F. C.—Tex.

Several cases of this kind have come to my notice during the last few years, but I have heard of none that was treated successfully. In each instance, the plants either died outright or became stunted and ceased to grow during the winter months, much the same as we have seen roses do. If your stock is badly infested, I would suggest that, as soon as they decline enough to be unprofitable, you throw them out and use the room for some other crop. I do not know that the trouble is limited to certain plants. Sterilizing is undoubtedly the surest and most practical remedy. If your soil seems to be infested, it will pay you to install a sterilizing plant and to treat all your soil in the future. You will then be practically safe from trouble along this line.

A. F. J. B.

VARIETIES FOR LOCAL TRADE.

We wish to plant 1,000 carnations next year, but are undecided as to which are the best varieties. What varieties would you recommend, and in what proportions should we plant the different colors so as to have the most salable flowers for local retail trade? We already have Enchantress, White Enchantress, Rosette, Bonfire and Lady Bountiful, but thought that there might be better varieties. In giving your list, please state the temperature at which each variety will do best. Would this season's lettuce soil be suitable to use for carnations next fall?

C. F. B.—Wash.

Dividing 1,000 plants into the different colors, I would plant 300 White Wonder, 300 Enchantress Supreme, 250 Rose-pink Enchantress and 150 Champion. I would further suggest that you get a limited number of the following varieties, as second choice in the same colors: Matchless in white, Alice in flesh-pink and Good Cheer in bright pink. You may like the latter three better than those first recommended. All the varieties you name are back numbers except White Enchantress, and that is not as good as either White Wonder or Matchless. Last year's lettuce soil is not suitable for benching the carnations in. Use new soil, made up of sod and manure, using about four parts of sod to one part of manure. All these varieties will do well in a temperature of 50 to 52 degrees at night.

WASHINGTON'S FLOWERS.

A large percentage of the florists of this country who believed in Booker T. Washington, of Tuskegee, Ala., and admired him for his heroic and successful efforts to elevate his race, probably will never find occasion to visit his grave. For them, particularly, the mountain has come to Mahomet, in this issue of The Review, in an illustration of his grave with its funeral flowers.

Even the casual, uninformed visitor, in nearing the grave of Booker Washington as it looked at the time the photograph was taken, would have at once realized that there reposed all that was mortal of one who had been esteemed far above the generality of his kind, even though his skin was black. He would see a pyramid of designs, twenty feet at the base and about twenty-five feet high.

Most of these designs were furnished by the Oak Grove Greenhouse, of Tuskegee. The pyramid, therefore, stands not only as a monument, temporarily, to the esteem in which the deceased was held, but to the ability of the florist to meet a sudden heavy demand. The Oak Grove Greenhouse was called on and found not wanting on an occasion of nation-wide moment. Orders came from florists all over the United States.

GETTING THE ORDERS.

Those florists who have received telegraph orders from Hugo Schroeter during the Christmas season will be interested in knowing how he got so many of them. In everything that left the store this month Mr. Schroeter has included a neatly printed card that said:

GOING HOME THIS CHRISTMAS?

If not—then why don't you remember your folks or friends in that distant city with a pretty plant or a few flowers for the holidays? Christmas without flowers is like Thanksgiving without a turkey.

We have representatives in every city, and will guarantee prompt delivery. Place your order now—our phone number is —.

Legislation and Legal Decisions

RESTRICTING COMPETITION.

Rose, an alert florist who has a well established business on a busy street, desiring to restrict competition, sizes up the situation, and decides that he is safe against the establishment of a rival business on his street unless Gotrox, who owns a building half a block away, should rent the ground floor to Chris Anthemum, Rose's main competitor. Rose goes to Gotrox and pays him $200 for a written agreement that the building will not be rented for a period of two years to any florist. Later Gotrox violates the contract. Has Rose any legal remedy against him?

A decision handed down the other day by the Texas Court of Civil Appeals answers the question in the negative (Smith vs. Kousiakis, 172 Southwestern Reporter 586). The gist of the decision is that a person may acquire a valid option on a building to be rented for a certain purpose; and that a seller of a business may validly bind himself not to reëngage in the same line of business in competition with his successor, if the agreement is made as a part of the contract of sale; and that an owner of a building, in leasing part of it for a certain line of business, may validly agree not to rent any other part of the same building for use by a rival of the tenant, but that a naked promise by an owner of a building not to rent it for a certain legitimate purpose is violative of the antitrust laws. AUTHORITY OF TRAVELERS.

A florist, dealing with traveling salesmen, should remember the following mentioned points of law, as recently decided by the Supreme court of Arkansas:

Third persons, in dealing with such salesmen, act at their own peril, except as to matters which are clearly within the actual or apparent authority of the salesman. For instance, the mere fact that a traveling salesman is authorized to take orders for goods does not give him implied power to collect the price. Unless the employer has in some way manifested intention to authorize the salesman to receive payment, the buyer will take the risk of making payment directly to the salesman. If such payment is made to a salesman it certainly should be made in the form of a check payable to the seller, rather than to the salesman individually. Even when it appears that a salesman is authorized to collect cash payments, that cannot be relied upon by a customer as showing authority to take a note, check or draft payable at some future time.

In the Arkansas case, a customer accepted a draft payable in the future, drawn by a salesman in the name of his house, but payable to himself. The salesman negotiated the draft, kept the proceeds, and disappeared without accounting for the payment. It now appears that the customer will have to pay the bill again, merely because he had no legal ground for believing that the salesman was authorized to receive the payment. S.

FRANK DINDA'S EMMA.

Those of the New Yorkers who braved the stormy night of December 13 and attended the annual meeting of the Florists' Club, will recognize in the accompanying illustration the new seedling chrysanthemum, Emma, which was exhibited by A. J. Guttman, in behalf of Frank Dinda, of Farmingdale, N. Y., with whom Emma originated. This variety is described as being an anemone of the Garza type. Its full, solid flowers are of a light pink color, edged with a still lighter center. Chrysanthemum Emma comes into crop about November 10. It is said that this season more than 8,000 sprays were disposed of at the average price of 6 cents per spray. "Everybody liked it," according to Guttman & Raynor, Mr. Dinda's agents. It is planned to disseminate the variety this season.

Chrysanthemum Emma.

GARDENIA FOLIAGE IS PALE.

I have a number of Gardenia Veitchii in pots. Three months ago they were transferred from 3½-inch to 6-inch pots. The compost consisted mainly of peat. Until about three weeks ago the temperature was 50 degrees at night. The soil remained wet so long that I repotted them in a soil of sandy loam, well sifted, and reduced the pots to three-quarter sizes. They are now in a night temperature of 60 to 62 degrees. I spray them twice a week. They are ventilated about 9:30 on sunny days and I only give them water when the soil shows signs of drying up. Now the leaves, that is the young growths, have a pale, almost white appearance and look sickly. The growths from the base of the plant seem to dry up and die. Is the defect in the soil or in the temperature, or should they be grown in the bench instead of in pots and should the soil have manure mixed with it? I shall appreciate it if you can help me out with a few details as to their treatment. C. R. W.—Mich.

Gardenias require a compost through which water will pass readily. Evidently yours is of a different nature. A suitable potting medium is one composed of two-thirds fibrous loam with the finer particles shaken out, and the balance lumpy, dried cow manure, coarse sand, broken charcoal and half decayed leaf-mold. Water will soon pass through such a compost and soggy conditions are unlikely. A temperature of 50 degrees at night is low for gardenias. The plants may stand it in the early fall, but they should have 62 to 65 degrees at night after the early part of September. In shifting from 3½-inch to 6-inch pots you made a mistake; a change from 3½-inch to 5-inch would have been far better.

It will be difficult to get your plants back into condition now. If they are well rooted, try the effects of an occasional dose of soot water. In using peat as a compost you made a mistake. Loam is preferable. The plants are just as likely to have pale foliage in benches as in pots, if the compost, watering and temperature are not right. C. W.

POT PLANTS ON SOLID BEDS.

We have some solid beds on which we wish to place some material to provide drainage for pot plants. In some of the beds the pot plants will be followed by chrysanthemums; other beds will be used next year for carnations. What shall we use for drainage? We have cinders or ashes from soft coal, sand and gravel. The cinders are fresh and we have been told that they contain sulphur, which will injure the plants. We know that a great many florists in this section will not use cinders, but prefer a layer of sand on board benches. Would sand be good for solid beds? Aside from the drainage, we find it necessary to use something to keep the pot plants from rooting through. Y. P. C.—Mo.

I have always found coal ashes an excellent covering to place on beds or benches on which pot plants are to be placed, and have yet to find any injury they have done to any plants. You will find that the roots will run into the coal ashes just as greedily as they will into sand or gravel. There will be less trouble with worms in the pots where ashes are used than with sand. The latter is more inclined to get slimy unless it is quite coarse, in which case it makes an excellent material to stand pot plants on. It will do your plants no harm to root through the bottoms a little. Such plants will be found to be of better quality than those placed on bare boards or slates. C. W.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Last week will not soon be forgotten. Added to the dullness that almost invariably precedes Christmas, the worst snow storm in many years arrived December 13, delaying trains, making streets almost impassable and paralyzing business of every kind. It was especially discouraging to the cut flower trade. These conditions were intensified as the week closed by a blinding rain storm that spoiled the Saturday business and left the market with much unsold stock with which to start Christmas week.

Business last week was not so good as in the corresponding week of 1914.

The shipments of American Beauties have been slowly increasing and there is the promise of a good supply for Christmas. The best did not go above 40 cents last week. Some grand Hoosier Beauty are arriving daily and 20 cents has been the asking price for the best of them. Hadley, too, is exceptionally good. In fact, nearly all the roses are at their best and the rose-loving public never had such a wonderful list to choose from. For Christmas there will be enough of all varieties to hold prices on a reasonable level.

Carnations have not been overabundant and quite an advance occurred last week, the best bringing 5 cents and even 6 cents, but it is doubtful if even the best red sell above 10 cents for Christmas.

Gardenias are lower, $4 per dozen buying the best last week, and probably the shortage is over. Valley remains unchanged and lilies are selling at better prices than for a long time. Sweet peas are improving and the best sold at $1.50 per hundred December 18. Violets are decidedly scarce and have been holding at top quotations. This seems to be a violet year and the old favorite is coming to the front again.

In pots and pans and cut there is an oversupply of poinsettias. Only the best can be disposed of at paying prices. There was a great surplus of stevia as last week ended. It is surprising what a display of chrysanthemums is being made for the holidays. There will be plenty of bouvardias, narcissi, pansies, callas and daisies. Orchids are more abundant, but good prices are being obtained. The figures will doubtless be maintained until the holidays are over.

MISS PAULINE WINDMILLER.

TO HAVE one's picture and smile in the daily papers is no insignificant matter these days—the war news and Christmas ads have placed space for other things at a mighty high premium; one must accomplish something decidedly out of the ordinary to attain the limelight even for one fleeting day. By her good work did Miss Pauline Windmiller win fame in her home town, Mankato, Minn., and this week she graces The Review's "Who's Who." Miss Windmiller's achievement was the Mankato flower show, or, rather, the Windmiller show, which, mind you, was not held in the Windmiller store, but in a good-sized auditorium, to which admission was charged. Miss Windmiller invited some of the leading growers and florists to participate in her show, and thereby pleased a city. It is said that Miss Windmiller sells flowers as successfully as she manages exhibitions, which of course is the reason why the Windmiller Co. is forging ahead so rapidly.

Legislation and Legal Decisions

RESTRICTING COMPETITION.

Rose, an alert florist who has a well established business on a busy street, desiring to restrict competition, sizes up the situation, and decides that he is safe against the establishment of a rival business on his street unless Gotrox, who owns a building half a block away, should rent the ground floor to Chris Anthemum, Rose's main competitor. Rose goes to Gotrox and pays him $200 for a written agreement that the building will not be rented for a period of two years to any florist. Later Gotrox violates the contract. Has Rose any legal remedy against him?

A decision handed down the other day by the Texas Court of Civil Appeals answers the question in the negative (Smith vs. Kousiakos, 172 Southwestern Reporter 586). EVANSTON, ILL.

The Market.

While trade has been quite up to the expectations of the most sanguine, up to the end of last week it was not affected by the holidays, which is a fairly good indication that every florist will have as much Christmas business as he can conveniently handle. Everyone was busy getting display windows and stock ready for Christmas, and as Evanstonians betray a much stronger penchant for plants than for cut flowers, plants seem to figure most prominently.

The honors for first place among the roses seem to be divided among Russell, Ward and Ophelia. All are extremely popular here, and all are excellent sellers. Ward and valley have the call for corsage work. No one was inclined to book advance orders for carnations. There is a good demand for cattleyas, and bouvardia will always sell. Paper Whites and Roman hyacinths are moving easily, while sweet peas and violets meet with favor.

Azaleas and cyclamens are selling unusually well and the retailers last week began to experience a call for poinsettias.

Various Notes.

An unusual experience in the way of F. T. D. orders fell to the lot of George C. Weiland the other day. It was an order for $5 worth of roses to be delivered in Buenos Aires, Argentina, South America. Mr. Weiland wired to Albert Pochelon, secretary of the F. T. D., Detroit, Mich., to ascertain the name of the florist in Buenos Aires. He then cabled the order at an expense of $14.

An English shipment of $1,200 worth of delphinium roots has just been received by Richard F. Gloede.

A good corsage and basket trade is reported by John Weiland, who anticipates an unusually heavy Christmas business.

According to Philip Eichling, of Fisher Bros., their patrons take more kindly to plants than to cut flowers. Many contend the plants give greater satisfaction. Their cut flower demand is strongest for Russell and Ophelia roses.

Believing that it pays to get in the best physical condition before a holiday rush, N. K. Welter spent last week in the southern part of the state hunting for quails and rabbits.

The entire propagating force of Weiland & Risch is hard at work on the new rose, Champ Weiland, which this firm will put out in the spring. The last flowers have been cut and sent to the Atlantic coast. From now on for the next few months everything goes into wood. Among the other new varieties that are receiving close attention here are Russell and Mrs. Moorfield Storey.

ITHACA, N. Y.

E. C. Volz has recently been appointed an instructor in floriculture at the New York State College of Agriculture at Cornell University, in place of R. H. Patch, who resigned to accept a position in the Essex County (Mass.) Agricultural School. Mr. Volz is a graduate of the Michigan Agricultural College, where he specialized in floriculture and related subjects. He has also had considerable commercial experience. During the last year Mr. Volz has had charge of instruction in floriculture and vegetable gardening at the Agricultural College at Ames, Ia., where his work met with pronounced success.

The short course is now well under way and the commercial class is unusually promising. Nearly all in the class have had experience in greenhouse work, so that it has been possible to eliminate much elementary practice and devote the time to more technical and scientific phases of the subject. Those taking the course are Charles Aubrey, Caldwell, N. J.; Mrs. J. K. Burden, Cazenovia, N. Y.; R. P. Corbin, Stamford, N. Y.; D. S. Dunlap, Altoona, Pa.; Frank M. Dunlop, Toronto, Canada; Joseph Rosenthal, New York city, and Charles E. Tefft, Cambridge, N. Y. Immediately following the Christmas vacation this class will make an observation trip in the vicinity of New York city. The trip will include visits to large rose, carnation, orchid, potted plant and other growing establishments, park and private conservatories, also to retail, wholesale, auction and seed establishments, where careful studies will be made of methods used in flower production and marketing.

Men taking the four-year course recently took an observation trip to Buffalo, which was immensely instructive. The class, numbering fifteen, was most hospitably entertained by W. J. Palmer and W. F. Kasting. Mr. Palmer and son, Mark, entertained the class at a luncheon at the Ellicott Club, after which automobiles were furnished and Allbright's private conservatories, Delaware park conservatories, the commercial ranges of Sandiford and Neubeck and the retail stores of Anderson and Palmer were inspected. Mr. Kasting also showed the men the working details of a large city post-office, which was instructive. Saturday morning an early visit was made to the wholesale establishment of the W. F. Kasting Co., where all details of management were carefully explained. Automobiles were then provided for the trip to Lancaster, where careful study was made of W. J. Palmer & Son's commercial ranges. The foreman, B. F. Myers, gave the visitors a vast amount of useful information. After lunch the party visited the South park conservatories, where they became enthusiastic over the wonderful collection of unusual plants.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

Business has been brisk during the pre-Christmas week. Stock in general has shortened up considerably. This is especially true of carnations, which seem to become scarcer as Christmas approaches. The situation in roses is good; there is a fair supply and a good demand for all grades, except, possibly, the specials. The short white and medium white are in extra good demand for funeral work, owing to the shortage in carnations. Paper Whites are arriving in larger quantities, but are still selling well. Peas have been moving well, with only a limited supply. The prices of all cut flowers have increased until normal Christmas prices are now prevailing and they show a fair increase over last year's figures for the same period.

Various Notes.

Mrs. Katherine B. Halliday, wife of Wm. J. Halliday, died at her home on Liberty Heights avenue, December 13, of Bright's disease. The funeral services were held from her late home, December 16.

James Glass erected a miniature greenhouse around his stand at Eutaw and Lexington streets, for the protection of his plants and cut flowers during the holiday season. The structure consists of a number of glass-paneled doors fastened together by bolts and angle irons, and is removable with little trouble. The roof is of canvas, tent-shaped, with a high center and low sides. It is a decided improvement over the usual open stand and it is to be regretted that protection somewhat on this line cannot be had permanently by all the growers selling in the market.

John B. Harmon is cutting some fine Mrs. Siegwart carnations at his greenhouses in Catonsville. The stems are long and strong and the flowers eclipse anything seen so far this season.

W. F. Therkindson, publicity agent for W. Atlee Burpee & Co., of Philadelphia, spoke before the Advertising Club of Baltimore on "Advertising Methods as Applied by the Seedsman," at its meeting held in the Hotel Emerson, December 16.

F. C. Bauer is cutting some fine Radiance roses. The blooms are the equal of Beauties in size and are of a good color, due to being grown in only a moderately warm house.

L. H. A. Klein is cutting some fine orchid-flowering sweet peas and a later crop also looks promising. His azaleas are in good shape for Christmas trade and should meet with a ready sale.

The next club meeting will be held December 27.

The Leo Niessen Co. has been handling some excellent single violets. A fine cut of Ophelia has also been coming in.

Stevenson Bros. have a lot of Richmonds that are just starting to give a good cut and they promise a heavy crop for the holiday trade. W. F. E.

TOLEDO, O.

The Market.

The cut flower supply has shortened considerably. There is a scarcity of stock and prices have advanced in all lines. Chrysanthemums are entirely done with and this has helped the sharp price advance of other cut flowers. Only about enough flowers are on the market each morning to enable the florists to take care of orders for that day. This is proof positive that business is good. Poinsettias are in fine cut, as are roses. Carnations are good, but the cut is not in proportion to the demand. Narcissi are in demand, but as yet are scarce. The wholesale price shows an increase of $\frac{1}{4}$ cent each over the retail selling price a year ago. Roses are exceedingly good and, with plenty to be cut, florists may rest assured of securing enough stock for orders. Violets are scarce, due to a lack of sun in this part of the state. Sweet peas are in their prime.

Every florist in this city has been exceedingly busy the last week decorating show windows and interiors of business places throughout the city. All the florists have done an unusually large amount of holiday advertising, and have met with great results. A "Decorate your store for Christmas" campaign, started by prominent florists, has done much to increase Christmas sales. Decorative wreaths attractively made up of ruscus, boxwood, holly, etc., have sold well and can be seen throughout the residence as well as the business district. To help make Christmas business more spirited, came a heavy fall of snow for several hours, which gave people a desire for Christmas greens and plants.

Various Notes.

Harry Heintz, a well known West Toledo grower, is supplying retail flower shops with perfectly grown poinsettias and azaleas. Mr. Heintz, noted as an expert grower, has had exceedingly fine results with these plants.

Some fine Glory of Cincinnati and Chatelaine begonias are for sale at local stores. They were grown by Christ Winterich, of Defiance.

George Bayer reports a scarcity of violets for Christmas, due to the cloudy weather.

Helen F. Patten has had a fine display of bird houses and cages in her display window and has sold many of them. Miss Patten is a member of the Toledo Society for the Protection of Birds.

Schramm Bros. have had the entire front of their store covered with southern smilax and studded with ruscus. A reddish lighting effect in their windows, harmonizing with the ruscus-covered front, produced a novel Christmas decoration.

Mrs. J. B. Freeman has had a fine window display of artificial baskets for Christmas. Mrs. Freeman reports that holiday trade is excellent.

Henry Klunder, of the Lindley Floral Co., recently established, reports a heavy Christmas demand for artificial baskets. Mr. Klunder is an expert in this line, and hence the demand.

Krueger Bros. are packing poinsettias and roses for shipment to all points of the state.

Mr. Breese, aged 60 years, a landscape gardener for the last thirty years, died December 18. Many flower beds and much landscape work in Toledo's public parks stand as a tribute to his efficiency. The funeral was held December 21 from his residence, 1127 Prospect street.

James McLeod, a landscape gardener for Schramm Bros., has been confined to his bed for several weeks, due to a severe attack of rheumatism.

The Market.

Last week's business was good and compared favorably with that of the corresponding period of last year. Everything points to a busy and prosperous Christmas. Quantities of good orders are coming in and most of the stores are well prepared for the grand rush. There is an exceptionally fine display of plants in all the stores, and a fine lot of Christmas baskets, which have been selling well. Poinsettias are wonderfully good this year, as well as ardisias, which are well berried. A large quantity of palms and ferns is moving satisfactorily. Many outdoor decorations have been made in laurel and pine roping with pleasing effects.

In cut flowers the shipments have been a little irregular, on account of the severe snow storm in the eastern part of the state. The quantity of flowers received is about as usual. Trade has been good and a large quantity of flowers has been disposed of. While there is practically no glut on the market, there is about all the stock the trade demands. Roses are plentiful, with a good supply of Ophelias, Wards, Sunbursts, Marylands, Russells and White Killarneys. Scott Keys are becoming more plentiful and some good stock is seen. American Beauties are exceptionally good. Carnations are arriving more freely and the scarcity that was looked for will probably be overcome. Some good white, lavender and yellow chrysanthemums still are arriving and the retailers find them most acceptable at this time. Violets are plentiful. Sweet peas are good and scarce. Lilies and valley are good and sell well. Orchids and cypripediums sell easily. Paper Whites, Romans, stevias and bouvardias complete the stock. Greens are quite plentiful, but Asparagus plumosus has been somewhat inferior.

Various Notes.

The monthly meeting of the Rochester Florists' Association was held at the Musicians' Headquarters, December 13. A. H. Secker gave an interesting and practical talk on "Advertising for the Retail Florist." It was a timely subject, being especially appropriate at this season of the year.

The trade regrets to hear of the illness of Mrs. E. R. Fry, who has been confined to her home for a few weeks. At time of writing she is improving slowly.

Heartly congratulations are due Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Lester, as they are the proud parents of a fine baby boy. Both mother and son are doing splendidly.

Handsome Christmas window displays were seen at each of the flower stores last week. Salter Bros. had a large quantity of white and red cyclamens, poinsettias and a number of flower dishes filled with snapdragons and bouvardias. H. P. Neun's display was conspicuous. Bells of all sizes, and many of them, hung from the pergola, which represented a belfry. A huge basket of artificial poppies with colored electric lights gave a pleasing appearance. The H. E. Wilson window was being attractively filled with fancy baskets. The J. B. Keller Sons window was one big mass of poinsettias.

The Lord & Burnham Co. is enjoying a good business, orders as well as numerous inquiries arriving daily. The last quarter has been especially good and is far ahead of the corresponding months of last year.

Harry Brush has opened a store on Central avenue, at the corner of Clinton avenue, north, and appears to be doing a fair business. He is disposing of many Christmas novelties.

About the busiest place in town last week was the wholesale house of George B. Hart. His staff of men have been working into the early hours of the morning. Mr. Hart is well pleased with the holiday trade.

The Allen Fruit Co. has been busy making up holly wreaths. Formerly, most of the florists made them, but the small margin and the immense amount of extra work led most of the retailers to discontinue the wreath-making end of the business.

OBITUARY.

John R. Hunt.

The announcement is made of the death of John R. Hunt, of John R. Hunt, Inc., Ellenville, N. Y.

Leonard G. Townsend.

Leonard G. Townsend, proprietor of the Townsend Floral Co., of St. Louis, Mo., died December 12 at St. John's hospital after a short illness. Mr. Townsend left no relatives and the business was willed to Miss A. Histon and her brother, who will continue the establishment. Mr. Townsend was not well known, as he never mixed with the local trade, although he had been in business for the last sixteen years.

George Pedrick.

George Pedrick, 63 years old, pioneer florist of Windsor, Ont., died at his home, 239 Sandwich street, east, December 16. He had been ailing about two months from stomach trouble, but only a week previous to his death did the ailment become serious.

Mr. Pedrick was born in Devonshire, England, and crossed the Atlantic to Canada more than thirty-five years ago. For twenty-two years he conducted a florists' business at Windsor, Ont., and was a member of the Detroit Florists' Club since the formation, twelve years ago. Mrs. K. Pedrick and one daughter, Miss K. Pedrick, survive.

Lynchburg, Va.—J. J. Fallon is much pleased with his new place of business at 1009 Main street.

Springfield, Ill.—The Illinois State Civil Service Commission announces an examination for January 8, 1916, for the position of florist. The examinations will be held at Anna, Carbondale, Charleston, Chicago, De Kalb, East St. Louis, Elgin, Jacksonville, Kankakee, Lincoln, Macomb, Mount Vernon, Normal, Peoria, Pontiac, Rockford, Springfield, Urbana and Watertown, all of Illinois. Details may be had by addressing the commission at Springfield, Ill.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

YESTERDAY, December 22, was the shortest day of the year, according to the almanac, but not until after Christmas will retail florists note a difference in the length of the working day.

THE premium list for the exhibition of the American Carnation Society at St. Louis, January 26 and 27, has been issued. Copies may be obtained by addressing A. F. J. Baur, secretary, Indianapolis, Ind.

THE tendency toward curtailment of credits, now apparent in this trade, is a highly hopeful sign. If the time ever comes that custom demands payment of all bills in thirty days it will prevent unwise expansion, curb unfair competition and cure insomnia.

IRWIN BERTERMANN, president of the F. T. D., succeeded in getting a half column interview into the Indianapolis News December 10, telling how flowers are delivered "by telegraph." The more generally the matter is understood the more generally the trade's facilities will be used.

IF you do a mailing trade in plants, write to your senators and representative in Congress to oppose House Bill 636, which, if it becomes law, will require zone rates on all parcel post shipments above four ounces. At present those up to eight ounces go at 1 cent for each two ounces. We don't want to lose this rate.

HONORABLE MENTION.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper. Among those who have this week enrolled themselves for more than one year in advance are:

TWO YEARS.

Burton, George, Philadelphia.
Butchart, George, St. Joseph, Mo.
Downs, W., Chestnut Hill, Mass.
Mueller, A. J., Carlinville, Ill.
Muller, H. J., Philadelphia.
Tossy, W. E., Detroit, Mich.

The Review stops coming when the subscription runs out. The green notice with the last copy tells the story; no bills are run up; no duns are sent.

A SMITH MEMORIAL.

The erection of a monument to perpetuate the memory of the late William R. Smith, former superintendent of the United States Botanic Garden and sometimes known as the father of the S. A. F., is planned by Congressman George S. Graham, of Pennsylvania, who has introduced H. R. bill No. 6419 in the House of Representatives, providing for an appropriation of $50,000 for this purpose. The plans for the monument are to be made in the Treasury Department and the construction of the memorial is to be under the supervision of the Secretary of the Treasury.

THE OFFICE STATISTICIAN.

There are a lot of people who take much interest in the continued growth of The Review—they seem to look on the paper as affording visual evidence of the progress and standing of the business in which its readers all are engaged.

Know, then, that the Christmas business of The Review, counting the first three issues of December, broke all records. For the three issues a total of 412 pages was printed. To print these three editions 30,000 pounds of body stock was required, and 1,560 pounds of cover stock, a total of 31,560 pounds of paper, or almost sixteen tons.

Sixteen tons of Reviews for Christmas!

ATTENTION, A. C. S.

In making up the forms for printing the premium schedule the printers inadvertently dropped Class 6 in Section A. This class calls for a vase of 100 blooms any red or scarlet, to include all varieties generally included in those colors. The premiums are the same as in the other classes in Section A.

A special notice will be sent to all members about January 1.

A. F. J. Baur, Sec'y.

THE BIGGEST PLANT SEASON.

The Christmas season of 1915 goes on record as the best the wholesale plantmen ever have had. If there is any man who looks to florists for the sale of his blooming plants who has not sold out this Christmas, the reason will be found within his own establishment and not in trade conditions. Those who look to wholesale growers for plants to sell at the holidays have bought flowering stock more heavily than ever before and all the growers whose stock and methods are in line with the times have enjoyed a banner business—they had prepared larger stocks than ever before and have sold out as closely as it ever is possible to do. The number of cyclamens offered this Christmas was something prodigious; it has been the season's best seller so far as the growers are concerned.

Whether or not the retail florists will be able to sell all the stock they have bought will depend on their individual ability to do a big volume of business in an extremely short time. The public will test the trade's facilities in the closing days of this week.

A WORD FOR THE WISE.

Here are two interesting letters—interesting, not because they are unusual but because one is from a grower who depends on wholesale trade while the other is from florists who retail most of their stock and only have an occasional surplus to sell to the trade.

The regular wholesaler advertises only in The Review. He says:

We had such splendid results from our ads of cyclamens that we are entirely sold out.—Davis Floral Co., Davenport, Ia., December 16, 1915.

The man with the occasional surplus says:

We had no answer from our ad in another trade journal, but one insertion in The Review cleaned up our surplus of 500 cinerarias.—John G. Witt & Son, Chicago, Ill., December 20, 1915.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

There has been little time on the market during the last week for a discussion of prevailing conditions, as all wholesale houses doing a shipping business have had their hands more than full with out-of-town orders. In bold contrast to last year's Christmas season, the supply in any one line is not more than sufficient to meet the demand. Mail and telegraph orders are arriving in constantly increasing numbers, and an interesting feature in this connection is that not a few of them are from eastern points. The fact that there is no oversupply of stock, and that instead of eastern growers shipping to this market, as they did last year, the contrary is true has resulted in a generally stiff market. It remains to be seen what the local demand will be, for, as usual, local buyers are holding aloof until the bulk of the shipping orders are on their way.

Really good Beauties are scarce and are accordingly at a premium, but there is a quantity of poor stock, altogether unfit for critical Christmas trade. Other roses are by far the longest item on the market. Most of the local growers timed their rose crops to come in for the Christmas trade, and as a result the daily receipts of roses are increasingly large. This does not mean, however, that anything in the shape of a glut is threatened, for, on the other hand, there is every indication that the demand will be fully ample to take care of all receipts. This view of the matter is strengthened by the corresponding shortness in some other lines. Red roses, and in their default the other colored varieties, are always popular at this season, and when carnations are scarce it is not a difficult thing to persuade a buyer to take more roses. Ophelia, because of its dainty appearance, is enjoying a particularly brisk demand, and so, too, is Cecile Brunner.

It has become quite the usual thing during the last week with many of the wholesalers to decline orders for carnations. Others, however, who feel in duty bound to supply out-of-town patrons, make every possible effort to satisfy, at least in part, the demands of their customers. This is not always possible, for almost anything in the shape of a carnation is snapped up at an unusually high figure, and even at that cannot be had in any quantity. As for red carnations, he may be considered fortunate indeed who can secure them at even a fancy price. Violets, both double and single, are on the short side. Paper Whites and Romans have been clearing regularly. Of pansies, there are fully enough to satisfy a more or less desultory demand. The supply of orchids is insufficient to meet an unusually strong demand. Valley, always on the opposite side of the fence, is plentiful enough to take care of all orders. Sweet peas, on the other hand, are scarce. Stevia, mignonette and daisies find their place in a fair proportion of orders. Easter lilies do not figure in the holiday demand to any considerable extent. As a matter of course, poinsettias make an appeal at this season of the year that few buyers can resist.

The flower market is doing all it can to perpetuate the time-honored association of green goods and Christmas. Holly, mistletoe and boxwood are on every hand, and winter berries, though none too plentiful, add their luster to the general effect. Sprengerii, plumosus and smilax move well in spite of the large quantities of purely holiday greens.

"How Old Was Anne?"

N. P. Miller, secretary of the Grand Floral Festival Committee and head of Miller & Musser, was born December 22, 1859.

You may not know anything about the age of Anne, but of Anton you can figure it out if you but recall he was born in Bavaria Christmas day, 1854. Mr. Then will be 61 this Christmas.

from the styles and colors of other years. In plants the nearest approach to something new is a small quantity of Euphorbia jacquiniæflora, which is useful in basket work but not sufficiently striking to attract the attention of the non-professional buyer. On the whole the stock is of excellent quality but not new.

There is no bulk green, but the demand has subsided. Holly is reasonably plentiful and averages of unexpectedly good quality, considering early reports of lack of berries. Boxwood seems to be in less demand than in other years.

The value of two boilers was well illustrated December 19 at the Elmhurst establishment of Meyer & Dramm Co. The boiler that was carrying the load blew out the connection that is used for cleaning scale, etc., with the result that the steam and water were emptied into the boiler-room so quickly that the fireman did not wait to try for the door but jumped through the window. Two dogs were not so successful and were scalded to death. As soon as the discharge was over the spare boiler was brought into use and there was no loss whatever. greens at the time. The extra boiler saved the stock.

Before the week is over, 15,000 Beauties will have passed through the Wietor store, according to N. J. Wietor, who counts it the most successful Christmas crop in the history of the firm. Most of the stems are long.

W. M. Tiplady, formerly in charge of the Elmendorf Greenhouses at Lexington, Ky., is assisting at C. A. Samuelson's during the Christmas rush.

One of the faults of the Sunburst rose, according to Emil Buettner, is the pithy character of the neck at this season of the year; not sufficient wood in the stem to keep it from snapping off if handled a little carelessly by wholesaler, retailer or customer—of course the grower always is careful.

The telephone facilities at Peter Reinberg's city store have been doubled by the installation of another line and two stations.

Christmas is proving especially difficult this year, for the E. Wienhoeber Co., because of the fact that business has been so heavy there was no time for special preparation for the rush. December from the start has been decidedly better than last year and Christmas is all in the day's work this week.

A double store at 55 and 57 East Lake street has been an invaluable assistance in handling Christmas greens for the E. F. Winterson Co. Mr. Winterson says he personally never has had a busier fortnight than the last one.

The store at 1155 North State street, opened last summer by the Jegen Floral Co., the same interests long on Dearborn and Washington streets, now is doing a fair business in spite of the proximity of the Wienhoeber store, with its reputation for excellent stock, perfect service and moderate prices, a combination against which more than one man has found it difficult to compete.

The first jonquils made their appearance December 19, reports John Michelsen, of the E. C. Amling Co., who also comments on the excellent sale for Paper Whites, Easter lilies, callas and other white stock last week.

It has been an excellent Christmas for Frank Oechslin. His cyclamens never were better and they sold clean. Poinsettias for basket work also were in good shape and in brisk demand. Not many azaleas were in flower, but these also sold readily. About everything of a Christmas character was sold and delivered early this week.

It is reported that Wendland & Keimel Co., Elmhurst, expects to cut approximately 60,000 roses this week.

George C. Weiland, a director of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, will replant all of his roses next year. The greatest amount of space will be devoted to Russell, the next, to Ophelia. This is a sufficient commentary on his opinion of these two new varieties. For red he will plant Milady. Richmond he will always have. Cecile Brunner will also receive a fair proportion of space. As for Hoosier Beauty and Hadley, they have no place in his favor. Killarney Brilliant is another variety under the ban.

The Michigan avenue store of the J. F. Kidwell Co. has a larger window frontage than any other flower store in Chicago. Open evenings this week until a late hour, it is a blaze of light and color marked by every automobilist and a fine ad for the trade.

The chrysanthemum season closed with Christmas, when Erne & Klingel marketed a nice lot of Helen Frick, pink, for one of their growers.

Evidently it does not take the rose growers of this country long to appreciate a good thing. So says John Risch, of Weiland & Risch, referring to the manner in which orders are coming in for stock of the new rose, Champ Weiland. He thinks it will solve the color problem for Christmas roses.

A patent has been issued to Richard F. Gloede, of Evanston, covering a metal hanging basket of his invention. He says the great objection to the wire basket is the difficulty of keeping the plant from drying out. Moreover, to water it you must take the basket down and carry it from the room. His invention overcomes both of these ob-of brass or copper, with a small stop-cock at the bottom, and is suspended by three brass chains. The wire hanging basket is to be placed in this metal bowl, thus permitting a free circulation of air without subjecting the plant to the drying effect of a breeze. It can be watered without removal and the surplus water may be drained by means of the stopcock. The metal bowl is in itself quite ornamental. Mr.

low tripod, which permits the bowl to be tilted at any angle. This is to contain azalea or other pot plants for display purposes.

ing Mrs. Evans, who was operated on at Mercy hospital December 16, for appendicitis.

John C. Chase, label manufacturer, of Derry, N. H., was a visitor December 20 on his way home from San Diego, Cal., where he has been since March, renewing his health.

H. B. Rine, of the Hill City Greenhouses, Humboldt, Ia., believes in preparedness, so in order to be prepared for the exigencies of a Christmas shopping trip, both business and personal, he brought with him to Chicago this week five carloads of cattle. This is his first trip to the Chicago market since last July.

Among those who visited the market this week was J. E. Lapes, of Cedar Rapids, Ia., who was buying supplies and stock for the holidays. He says prospects were never better for a big Christmas business.

Preparations for the Christmas rush brought Frank X. Gorly, of Grimm & Gorly, St. Louis, to the Chicago market this week.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

We do not want to know much about the market just before Christmas—it is the market at Christmas that holds our attention. Still, in order to understand things when they happen, it is necessary to follow each change as it occurs. The changes have been quite marked; some extraordinarily bad weather cut down the supply to an extent that kept flowers from accumulating in spite of the light business. The improvement in the weather came too late to overload the market during the dullness so apt to precede the holidays. Many flowers are bringing close to holiday prices even during this period of light demand, notably carnations. The shortage of lower-priced roses continues; with it there is a strong demand for white, due partly to weddings, but, alas, more due to sadder events increased by the bad weather. Gardenias have been particularly scarce; we are told of crop failures as the explanation. There still are a few fairly respectable chrysanthemums, mostly Nonin and Eaton and Jones. Sweet peas are more in evidence and of improved quality. The loss of some boxwood in transit is severely felt. The flowering Christmas plants have met with a remarkable support, indications pointing to larger sales than those of any other season; this probably is due to their fine quality.

The "Peach From Peachville."

A charming visitor arrived in town on the day after the Florists' Club meeting. "A Peach From Peachville," the boys would say, as a tribute to the lovely pink and white complexion, the tasteful garb and the erect carriage of the visitor. Her name was Mrs. Bayard Thayer, and she came all the way from Natick, Mass., where she has been staying with Alexander the Great Montgomery. There was a gathering of our distinguished rosarians of an impromptu character at the S. S. Pennock-Meehan establishment as soon as her arrival there became known. William Munro came in from Garrettford; Martin Samtman came in from Chestnut Hill and there were many others. The general opinion seems to be that the visitor was a winner, but, then, you know that these rose men are so cautious lest they may make a mistake, which some unkind friend will remind them of afterwards, that it is rather hard to get an expression of unqualified approval, even for the angel Gabriel himself.

THE FLORISTS' SUPPLY HOUSE OF AMERICA

Christmas 1915

A very Merry Christmas and a Glad New Year to our many, many friends who have favored us so generously with their patronage from all over the United States and the Dominion of Canada. We thank them heartily for their confidence in us, and hope that their Christmas season has been most successful and that they will have a prosperous season in Nineteen Sixteen.

Various Notes.

T. Malbranc made a flying trip from Johnstown, Pa., to this city to take his daughter home from school for the Christmas holidays.

Mrs. George G. Parker, wife of the prominent florist of Philipsburg, Center county, died after a long illness December 18. She is mourned by many warm friends. The funeral took place from Mr. Parker's residence December 20. Three daughters and a son survive.

The December meeting of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society was held in Horticultural hall on the afternoon of the shortest day of the year, December 22, for the election of officers to serve during 1916.

Through a slight error, Edward N. Habermehl was recently quoted as though the assemblies were of the past. They will take place in the ballroom of the Bellevue-Stratford, Friday, January 7, and Friday, March 3. Both promise to be brilliant balls.

Mrs. John H. Claus has put a good-looking car on the street.

A wedding of interest to the trade here will take place at Detroit, Mich., December 27, when Miss Bessie McLoughlin will become the bride of George S. Hampton, treasurer of the Joseph G. Neidinger Co. There will be just time enough for a brief honeymoon before Mr. Hampton starts on his next business trip at New Year's.

Harry W. Jones smilingly predicts the best Christmas of four or five years, a view that is shared by George Aeugle.

The Henry A. Dreer greenhouses at Riverton and the new stable are built of building tile, concrete covered. This construction makes a dry wall, strong, durable and inexpensive.

The officers of the Germantown Horticultural Society elected for the coming year are: President, Edwin C. Jellett; vice-presidents, I. P. Willetts, Herman Burgin and Stewardson Brown; secretary, George Redles; treasurer, R. F. Welsh.

Hope you had a splendid Christmas.

LANCASTER, PA.

Club Meeting and Trip to Lititz.

The Lancaster County Florists' Club held its annual banquet in Brenneman hall, December 16. The banquet proved to be one of the most delightful affairs in the history of the club. More than thirty members attended the feast.

After cigars were lighted President B. F. Barr reviewed the club's work during the year. H. A. Schroyer, D. T. Connor and E. J. McCallum, the last-mentioned of Pittsburgh, addressed the members. D. T. Connor and T. J. Nolan were appointed to captain the bowling teams for the evening. L. S. Landis' strikes and F. L. Kohr's curved balls were features of the evening. W. B. Girvin, of Leola, won the garden rake for high score. Alphonse Peters, Edward Hardy and E. Beck furnished the music. A number of the members indulged in 500, while others tried billiards.

A short business session was held prior to the banquet, when officers for 1916 were nominated. The result of the balloting was as follows: President, H. A. Schroyer; vice-president, Elmer J. Weaver; secretary, Frank L. Kohr; treasurer, H. K. Rohrer. The nominees will be elected at the January meeting. The committee in charge of the banquet consisted of Frank L. Kohr, David F. Rose and John R. Shriner.

On the afternoon of December 16, at 1 o'clock, a party of florists visited their brethren at Lititz, Pa. Fred Spinner was the first to be called upon. He grows Gorgeous and Comfort carnations, which look well. He had a fine crop of mums, the space of which now is planted to sweet peas and lettuce. He grows large quantities of vegetable plants in season.

At the C. S. Loeffler establishment the visitors saw some fine orchid-flowering sweet peas, snapdragons, calendulas, delphiniums and primulas. In carnations, Mr. Loeffler grows Matchless, Enchantress, Mrs. Ward and Champion. He has four houses, each 35x150. Mr. Loeffler surprised the visitors with a treat in the boiler shed, which treat consisted of Lititz pretzels, delicious apples and fudge, made from the famous Lititz chocolate.

The next call was at the range of Enos W. Kohr, on the Lititz turnpike, near Lancaster. Mr. Kohr planted most of his carnations directly in the beds in June and they look fine, with promise of a nice cut for Christmas. Mrs. Ward and Matchless leave little to be desired in their respective colors, as grown here. Gorgeous also is grown and it was interesting to note that the variety comes more true to color than it did last season. White Perfection does remarkably well and will be grown another season. A bench of Alice is being tried and looks well. About 45,000 Paper White narcissi were in exceptionally good shape. Mr. Kohr has his establishment equipped with a wireless telegraph apparatus and is right up to the minute in all he does.

The next meeting of the club will be held January 20, in the Chamber of Commerce rooms.

Various Notes.

E. J. McCallum, of the McCallum Co., Pittsburgh, visited a number of the florists last week.

HIS little card is written to wish you a Merry Christmas and a Prosperous and Happy New Year. It is also written to thank you for the liberal orders that have helped to give us such a splendid Christmas. If you did not send the orders—why, the good wishes are yours anyhow; we know that you will want the Craig Quality stock some day, and when you once get it you will always want it.

December has been a month of cold weather. The first half had many mornings on which the mercury registered 20 degrees. Cloudy weather has retarded Christmas cut flowers considerably. The Market.

Business was quiet last week, due to the fact that three out of the six working days were stormy; walking was decidedly unpleasant. The retailers, therefore, will have to do all their Christmas selling this week, and most of them have prepared for a big trade. With several days of pleasant weather before Christmas, they expect to do a fine business.

On account of the cloudy weather, carnations have been unusually slow in opening. While nearby growers have thousands of carnation buds nearly open, the flowers are developing so slowly that only a small part of them will be available for Christmas trade. Carnations have been selling at from $6 to $8 per hundred in the wholesale market. Many complaints are heard concerning the poor quality of the flowers. Last year there was a glut of Paper Whites and many of the growers sustained such heavy losses that this year they either did not plant Paper Whites at all or planted greatly reduced quantities of them. A few, forecasting this situation, planted more than last year and now are reaping a harvest, for there is a great demand and a comparatively small supply of Paper Whites. The wholesale price has gone as high as $6 per hundred within the last ten days, which is higher than what Paper Whites generally retail at. The prices of roses have been high. Holly brings a stiff price this year. Less funeral work was reported last week than usual.

Club Meeting.

The meeting of the Essex County Florists' Club was held December 16 in the Krueger Auditorium. Trade conditions and other matters of interest to the club were discussed. The committee in charge of the ladies' night program, which event will be held at the February meeting, reported progress. It was announced that the annual election of officers would be held at the January meeting. Following the business session, refreshments were served.

Various Notes.

McLaughlin & Murphy report a lull in business during the first weeks of December, but they are expecting a big Christmas trade.

George Muller has had several large wedding decorations of late, but less funeral work than usual. He reports that his Thanksgiving trade was the best he ever had.

James Rose, formerly located on Bergen street, near Clinton avenue, who was obliged to move because of the wrecking of the building in which he had his store, now is located at 480 Clinton avenue, about two minutes' walk from his former location. He has erected greenhouses at the rear of the store.

Jacob H. Harvey states that business has been good during the entire fall. He has had a good counter trade and much funeral work. Thanksgiving trade was excellent.

The S. A. Rogers Nursery Co. has opened a store at 14 Branford place, where, during all of last week, all kinds of cut flowers, plants and Christmas greens were on sale. It is planned to make this store a center for nursery stock. A full stock of seeds, bulbs, etc., will be carried. The company's main office will remain for the present at 843 Broad street, Newark. The nursery is at Liberty Corners, N. J. The members of the company, which was organized last summer, are S. A. Rogers and W. E. Pratt.

The Peter Penek store is attractively decorated for Christmas. Festoons of red roping run from the center of the ceiling to points around the sides of the room, and these are hung with Christmas bells, greens, etc. The rest of the store is appropriately decorated with plants, flowers, greens, etc.

Business at Rogers' Floral Shop, 435 Vose avenue, South Orange, is reported as being good. The Thanksgiving trade was unusually heavy and a fine Christmas business is expected.

The Market.

Business last week was good and, according to some of the larger dealers, the months of November and December will greatly exceed those of last year. There is no overstock in any line and all varieties of flowers clean up well each day. There is a shortage of carnations, the crop in this locality being backward, and these now are bringing $5 per hundred and for the Christmas trade this price will be doubled.

The price on white roses now is more normal. The great scarcity of two weeks ago has been overcome and the grade which at that time brought $6 per hundred can be had at $3. The prevailing prices will be doubled by the end of this week. The locally grown American Beauty roses have not the full-sized flowers of the northern production and seem to send all of their value into stems and foliage. While the former are bringing only from $1 to $3 per dozen, the latter type sell readily at $5. The Richmond roses now to be had are as fine in quality as have ever been seen in this market. There is a lively demand for these, at an average of $15 per hundred, and there is a possibility that there will not be enough to go around, despite the fact that Richmonds with some of the local growers are right on crop. This flower takes the lead over all others in Christmas sales and it is expected that the price will soar to $30 and more per hundred for the best.

There has been a heavy demand for cattleyas at $6 and $9 per dozen; vandias are bringing $6. Valley is exceptionally fine, but no variation in price is noted. There will be plenty of Easter and rubrum lilies offered at $15 per hundred. The word has gone out to the retailers to make all purchases and place all orders for stock early if they desire to eliminate possibilities of disappointment. With the amount of supply and the strength of the demand for some of the varieties, it is said that there will not be enough of these to fill all orders. This will be particularly true of orchids, valley, Richmond and other red roses, and carnations.

President's Wedding Decorations.

The wedding of President Wilson and Mrs. Galt was a decided disappointment to the local florists from a commercial standpoint, as the quantity of flowers sold on this occasion was small. Some time prior to the ceremony, the President and Mrs. Galt let it be known that it was not their desire that gifts of flowers or of more lasting remembrances be sent them, and aside from a basket or two of roses or orchids, the orders placed with the stores were not worthy of mention.

The decorations at the home of the bride were by J. H. Small & Sons, orchids being used in profusion. For the wedding, the salon parlor and the dining room, which adjoins, were thrown into one. The wedding bower, which was set off by a background of Farleyense and maidenhair ferns, extending from the floor to the ceiling, was located in a bay window at the back of the latter room. Overhead, in the bower, there was arranged a canopy of green in the form of a shell with the inner side of Scotch heather in full flower. In the center of the background was a mirror framed with cat-tleyas. Across the top of the mirror and in the corners of the canopy were sprays of orchids. The varieties of orchids used in this decoration were Cattleya Trianæ, Dendrobium Phalæ-nopsis, Vanda cærulea and Lælia anceps alba. At both sides of the canopy were standards of American Beauty roses, the bottom of the standards being masked with cibotiums.

A prie-dieu, used upon several occasions at the White House, on which the President and his bride knelt, was ornamented at either side with clusters of orchids and placed before the bower and canopy. Opposite to the wedding bower, in the far end of the salon, the mantel was decorated with Farleyense and orchids. A large mirror in the entrance hall was banked with ferns and twined about with Asparagus plu-mosus, in which were intermingled large American Beauty roses.

The general decorations of the dining room were carried out in pink. At one end of the room was a mass of ferns and clusters of pink roses. Growing ferns and pink roses were on the buf-fets, while the table on which the wedding feast was spread was decorated with Lady Stanley roses and ferns.
The wedding cake was ornamented with orchids. The stairway in the entrance hall and the newel post were decorated with ferns, vines and American Beauty
roses.

Aside from furnishing a portion of the greens used in the decorations, the several departments of the government devoted to the production of plants and flowers had nothing to do with the work, despite the fact that it was said in the local press that the whole was accomplished under the supervision of one of these.

however, it is clear and cool, and with a few days of sunshine the cut of roses and carnations will be quite good.

Funeral work has been brisk of late. Christmas orders are coming in and indicate a splendid holiday business. Bulbous stock, azaleas, begonias, poinsettias, etc., are in heavy supply and of good quality.

Various Notes.

The Evansville Florists' Club held a meeting December 15. All present enjoyed themselves immensely. It was an extremely wet night, which kept a few away, but those that attended certainly did not regret their wet journey to the meeting. President Halbrooks was sick and could not attend. As Vice-president Zeidler was absent because of the weather, Emil Niednagel was made chairman for the evening. After the business meeting an excellent lunch was served. The next meeting will be held at the C. L. Niednagel place January 12.

Karl Zeidler has a fine lot of azaleas in excellent shape for Christmas sales. James Blackburn, of Mount Vernon, Ind., was in town December 20, buying plants for his Christmas trade.

The Blackman Floral Co. anticipates a good holiday business and has a fine lot of Christmas plants. E. L. F.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The wholesale cut flower market was in a fairly good condition last week. There was no abundance of stock like that of last year and, unless we have sunshine this week, great scarcity of stock is predicted for Christmas. I am advised that all carnation growers are off crop and the stock that came in last week showed this plainly. The prices of these flowers are sky-high, as 4 cents is asked for anything that looks like a carnation and 10 cents is wanted for the extra fancy flowers.

Roses have been fairly plentiful and these promise to help out for Christmas. This stock, too, is rather high in price. Specials in Richmond, Hadley and Milady will go to $15 and perhaps to $20 per hundred; Russell as high as $35 per hundred. Beauties are scarce and will run from $9 to $12-per dozen for long, fancy stock. The wholesalers say they expect quite a lot of other stock. Valley is extra fine. Violets are up in price and are not any too plentiful.

In stevia, Paper Whites and sweet peas, a large supply is expected at little advance in price. It is said the supply all depends upon the weather. Everything in greens will be in as large supply as usual.

The retailers say it surely will be a big plant Christmas, for the cut stock is too high and all the leading stores will be pushing plants.

Various Notes.

The French relief bazaar at Dreamland last week was a great success.
The flower booth, presided over by Mrs. Jules Bourdet, was beautifully decorated with plants and cut flowers.
At the top of the booth two large flags, the American and the French, were worked out in flowers. The sale of cut flowers and plants was large. All were donated by the local trade.

Vandervoort's flower department, of which David Geddis has charge, had a big business week. Mr. Geddis says an extra force is on this week, as advance orders indicate that the rush at Christmas will be great.

George H. Angermueller's force in the supply department had to work overtime all of last week. December 15 marked the biggest day; 108 boxes of supplies were sent by express to florists in the southwest. Local demand, too, has been large.

The next meeting of the officers of the St. Louis Florists' Club will take place at the home of Vice-President Wells, 4258 Flag avenue, January 6, at 8 o'clock, when plans will be made for an interesting meeting of the club
January 13.

Marion Uhl Schmidt, manager for the east side branch of Grimm & Gorly, says they had a busy week with an unusual quantity of funeral work. No store along Collinsville avenue is more attractive than this one since Mr.
Uhl Schmidt has put up his Christmas display.

home-grown roses from the establishments of Werner Bros., W. J. Pilcher and A. S. Cerny, all of St. Louis county. This stock in all varieties is of extra fine quality.

The Kalisch Bros. Floral Co., at Delmar and Taylor avenues, is showing a magnificent lot of blooming plants in the big show house. John Boerm, a neighbor, also has a splendid Christmas show. Both concerns expect a large run of trade for the holidays and both are pushing plants.

The St. Louis Seed Co. has a grand display of Christmas novelties at its Washington avenue store. Holly and Christmas greens are in big demand.

Ostertag Bros. opened their annex last week, next door to their store at the corner, in which everything can be had in the line of Christmas decorations. Henry Ostertag, head of this concern, says business never was better than at present.

Max Pelletier, H. Schaad, W. H. Kruse, Max Herzog and A. Meyer, south end florists, were busy last week preparing for the holidays, and, from advance orders, they expect a big rush of business this week.

The Sanders Nursery store, on Clara avenue, of which Oliver K. Sanders has charge, reports heavy advance orders for plants. The big show room in the rear is ablaze with fine Christmas plants of every description.

A big fire in commission row on the morning of December 18 destroyed quantities of holly, green roping, wreaths and Christmas trees. The fire started in the wreath house of the Corcoran Produce Co., 805 North Third street. The damage is estimated at $2,000. Other commission houses close by suffered considerable damage.

J. J. B.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Business during the week ending December 18 was quiet. Cut flower arrivals were comparatively light, but ample for the demand. Wholesalers and retailers have been busy preparing wreaths, festoons, baskets, etc., of evergreens, berries, ruscus, artificial poinsettias, etc., for which the demand this Christmas seems likely to be the greatest on record. is meeting with an immense sale, while holly and other greenery are selling remarkably well. Plants are more of a feature than ever and, as a consequence, cut flowers have not yet come into their own.

Among flowering plants, poinsettias sell better than those of a year ago. Others in heavy demand are begonias, cyclamens, azaleas, ericas, Otaheite oranges, ardisias, crotons and nephrolepis. Mixtures of foliage and flowering plants in large pans, baskets and other receptacles are selling well.

American Beauties are abundant and have been somewhat weak in price, but are firmer at present. Among other roses the leaders in popularity are Hadley, Richmond, Scott Key, Russell, Shawyer, Ophelia, Killarney Queen and Sunburst. The last named is seen in greater numbers here than ever before. All roses, including Killarney and White Killarney, show a good advance; reds, as usual, sell best; then pinks, and, lastly, whites. Carnations are holding their heads up and promise to become quite strong toward the last of the week. They are not in heavy crop with most of the growers. Violets have practically doubled in price; so have yellow marguerites.

Quite a few chrysanthemums, such as Bonaffon, Jeanne Nonin, Maceo, Chadwick and Maud Dean, have been on sale, but the present week should see their finish. Some nice Freesia Purity is coming from one or two growers; also small lots of yellow daffodils. There is an ample supply of valley of fine quality. Few gardenias are seen. Cattleyas sell at high prices, Percivaliana making $5 and Trianae $9 to $12 per dozen. There is an improved demand for asparagus and ferns.

Penn's Store Opening.

What is undoubtedly the finest and most up-to-date flower store in Boston threw open its doors for business December 18, when Penn's new store at 124 Tremont street was visited by crowds of people in spite of the driving rainstorm that persisted the entire day. The opinions of many well qualified to speak was that it is the finest flower store in America, with its beautiful and expansive show windows, while the tiled floors, mirrors, sculpture, fountains, ceilings, etc., are in perfect taste. The Johns-Manville refrigerating machine on the lower floor is a decided innovation.

For the opening, one window depicted an imaginary parlor scene, in which draperies, carpets, etc., were used, with several vases of Sunburst roses and pink calanthes. Another and larger window produced a fine tropical effect, with tree trunks covered with moss and dotted with cattleyas and other orchids. There were many handsome baskets, tubs, hampers and other arrangements of plants or flowers sent for the opening by Max Schling, Thomas Roland, Peter Fisher, Alex Montgomery, A. M. Davenport, the W. W. Edgar Co. and many others. Herbert Hartford is manager of this newest of Boston flower stores. Charles F. Edgar, recently with the Fleischman Floral Co., Chicago; J. Eisman and other well known floral artists constitute the store staff. All the messenger boys wear neat uniforms.

Club Meeting.

Although coming so near Christmas, when nearly everyone connected with the business is rushed to the limit, there still was an attendance of 120 at the club meeting December 21. Officers for 1916 were elected as follows: President, James Methven; vice-president, William J. Patterson; treasurer, Peter Fisher; secretary, W. N. Craig; executive committee, W. J. Kennedy, H. H. Bartsch, W. C. Rust, P. M. Miller and A. K. Rogers.

There was no contest except between the eight candidates for the executive board. Four new members were admitted to the club. It was reported that the landscape class was holding weekly meetings. A report on the recent convention of the National Association of Gardeners was made. The executive committee reported that there would be a public installation of officers and ladies' night January 18, while the annual banquet of the club would be held at the New American House February 9.

A committee consisting of D. Finlayson, R. Cameron and W. N. Craig was appointed to draw up resolutions on the death of W. Atlee Burpee. There was some discussion on the National Flower Show, to be held in Philadelphia. A good-sized Boston representation seems assured. There was an in-interesting discussion on the opportunities for advancement for young gardeners in America.

50 years' experience in the florist business guarantees efficiency to take care of all orders. 20 per cent allowed

The exhibits for the evening were a splendid group of Moschosma Riparium by James Methven, which was given a cultural report of merit; a large collection of plants by the W. W. Edgar Co., of Waverley; Miss Theo carnation, by Littlefield & Wyman, of North Abington; solanums, by William Watson; a new seedling rose, Tausendschon, x Ethel Malcolm, by J. Dawson, received honorable mention.

Various Notes.

William H. Elliott is strong this season on the single Irish roses. He grows chiefly Old Gold, Irish Beauty, Irish Harmony and Glory. In the way of polyanthas, Mlle. Cecile Brunner sells much better than the yellow Elger. Among the larger types, Ophelia and Sunburst are fine, as are Hadley, Killarney Queen and Christie-Miller.

William Hannan & Son, of Dorchester, had 8,000 Christmas plants, chiefly azaleas, Cincinnati begonias and solanums, and hardly a plant was left December 18.

Charles Roberts, formerly with P. R. Quinlan & Co., Syracuse, N. Y., is now employed by the Boston Cut Flower Co. Business here is brisk this week, several large decorations in addition to the store trade keeping the staff busy.

The Budlong Rose Co. has had a heavy crop of My Maryland recently, receiving an average of 2,000 flowers of fine quality daily. They have heavy crops of Hadley, Ophelia, Russell, Scott Key, Milady, Stanley, Sunburst and Shawyer for the holidays.

William J. Patterson, of Wollaston, is bringing in the earliest Trumpet major narcissi, in addition to Roman hyacinths, stevias and Paper Whites.

R. T. McGorum, of Natick, still has a fine lot of Bonnaffon mums for Christmas. His roses are looking extremely well. The principal varieties grown are Ophelia, Killarney, White always of grand quality, seem better than ever this season. The following are fine: Champion, Lady Northcliffe, which is well liked; Pink Delight,

Benora, Matchless, White Enchantress, Rosette, Alice and Gorgeous.

R. & J. Farquhar & Co., at the Dedham nurseries, have a fine batch of Erlangea tomentosa with heads of heliotrope-like, lavender-blue flowers.
This plant belongs to the composite family, is of a habit similar to the eupatoriums and requires similar treatment. It should be a welcome addition to our winter-flowering plants.

H. W. Vose, of Hyde Park, has a splendid cut of Bonnaffon, Maceo and other mums for Christmas, in addition to good cuts of bulbous flowers and stevias.

The Mann Co. received a fine shipment of beautifully berried hollies from Europe December 17 on the Nieuw days in transit and arrived in perfect condition. Several plants of the gold-the Sutermeister estate, of Readville, were the first to bring in Freesia Purity. Early shipments have realized as high as $12.50 per hundred stalks.

At Carbone's, fine vases of pale blue English iris, grown by Frank P. Putnam, of North Tewksbury, have been something of a novelty. Plants of Spiraea Queen Alexandra are well flowered and there are many other novelties at this always attractive store.

William Capstick, of Auburndale, is one of the few trade growers with a good batch of Strelitzia regina. His specialties are Asparagus plumosus nanus and Sprengerii.

The force of Welch Bros. Co. is on the jump this week to keep pace with the orders coming in. Roses are extra fine and no shortage of flowers is anticipated.

Albert Roper's seedling carnations are all doing remarkably well and some of them will be heard of at the next carnation convention. Extra fine just now are Commonwealth and Grace, each flesh pink; Alice Coombs, rose pink, and a pure and heavily fringed white of fine substance.

The Fruit Hill Greenhouses, of Providence, are sending quantities of fine Spencer sweet peas to W. H. Carr.

S. J. Goddard has recovered from an attack of the grip. He is enthusiastic over the next carnation convention and indications are that Boston and vicinity will be well represented there.

A. N. Eaton, of South Sudbury, is having excellent success with his carnations this season. His best varieties are Pink Delight, Matchless, Alice, Beacon, Benora, Mrs. Ward, White Enchantress and Fenn.

A. F. Coolidge has a fine lot of Begonia Gloire de Chatelaine for Christmas. This is a splendid keeping begonia, always in bloom. W. N. C.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

SEATTLE, WASH.

The Market.

Business was brisk last week and indications pointed to a much better Christmas trade than has been the case in any of the recent years. For one thing, stock is not too abundant, so that prices should be advanced accordingly. Chrysanthemums are not plentiful and it seems likely there will be a few good ones left at Christmas, these being principally Maud Dean, which is a good keeper in this district. Carnations are scarce and good prices will prevail from now on. The same may be said of roses, for which there always is a large demand at Christmas. There is a good supply of violets coming from California, but some locally grown violets were seen last week.

Poinsettias are hardly as plentiful as last year, but their quality is excellent and they are likely to be closed out early. Some giganteums and speciosums from cold storage were used in displays. Cyclamens are good and experience a ready sale. Of other flowering plants there is a scarcity. The retailers are busy preparing for a good holiday trade. There is the usual quantity of Christmas greens, etc.

Various Notes.

Miss Schnapp, who had to return from the east because of the indisposition of her mother, who has happily recovered, now is assisting in the Hollywood Gardens store.

A visit to the university district last week showed the stores in that locality brightly decorated and they compared favorably with the downtown shops.

The weather is mild and open and good roses still are to be seen blooming outdoors. T. W.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

At the time of writing, the prospects for Christmas do not look any too rosy. The principal retailers say that their inquiries do not compare well with those of equal date last year. Stock will be plentiful, according to present appearances, especially in cut flowers. The failure of many of the azaleas to make the market has led to a larger demand for cyclamens and other pot plants. Good, deep red carnations, Beauty roses and lily of the valley look like being on the scarce side, but other roses and carnations will probably be up to the demand. One of the finest roses here for Christmas is Hadley, of which some splendid flowers are shown, while a few Crimson Queen in one of the principal retailers' windows caused considerable comment. Good English holly is scarce so far, though heavy shipments are said to be coming.

Various Notes.

In February of the coming year the Redondo Floral Co. will move from its old location, at Third and Spring streets, to the Lankershein building, at 218 West Seventh street. Business is rapidly going south and it is thought by Messrs. Borden and Knopf that although the store has been a landmark for years, yet their old trade will follow them and there will be a much larger transient business at the new place. The Redondo Flower Shop was probably the pioneer of the Los Angeles retailers and was originated by one of the big railway interests here, to find a market for the flowers grown at the old Redondo carnation gardens, which have been out of existence for several years. F. Borden at one time ran these gardens, and then, after running his own business, at Third street and Hollywood, for a good many years, he went into partnership with Albert Knopf, who was then proprietor of the Redondo. As prophesied in this column, the partnership has turned out to be a great success and it is perfectly safe to prophesy still greater success for these two thoroughly straightforward business men. The good wishes of everyone will be with them. F. Borden, unfortunately, just now is down with a severe case of grip.

Geo. W. Smith reports excellent business at the Figueroa street store, with plentiful inquiries for Christmas stock.

He is also busy in the landscape end and does a great deal in what he terms "perpetual care" of places which he plants. For a moderate charge, he sends men at regular intervals to do everything necessary in the places he plants, thus insuring a constantly attractive appearance and incidentally keeping out the inexperienced and always harmful tramp gardener.

Poinsettias are arriving in fine shape from A. Ecker, of Puente. He has the extra large-flowered, highly colored type so popular among the best florists. He is supplying them to many of the leading wholesalers and retailers, and announces the fact that he will have them until some time after Christmas.

Wallace Boyd, who was formerly with O. C. Saakes, but for some time has been in Honolulu, has returned to Los Angeles. He is helping out at Darling's Flower Shop.

The L. A. Floral Co. is doing everything possible to make shipping to long-distance points a success, and is using the refrigerator express car service recently put on by the Salt Lake road for eastern shipments.

A pleasant time was spent at the first banquet of the Los Angeles County Nurserymen's Exchange, with Ed. Rust, president of the association, in the chair. About twenty sat down to an elegant dinner at the Bristol cafe, after which many points of interest to the trade were brought up. J. Meriweather, manager for Roeding & Wood, gave some interesting data on shipping and freight rates. Fred Howard made some timely remarks on the assessment of nursery stock. F. Warner, of South Pasadena; T. D. Robertson, of Fullerton, and others, all had something of interest to say and the chairman called for adjournment about 10:30.

H. W. Turner, of Montebello, reports big orders for September Morn and Prima Donna rose plants from east and middle west points.

Howard & Smith have put on another new Packard truck to take care of nursery deliveries. Fred Howard reports heavy sales of all classes of stock.

The sympathy of everyone in the trade goes out to Gus. Swenson, of Eagle Rock, and to Mrs. Swenson, in the loss of their baby girl at the age of 7 months.

G. M. Bridgeford has largely increased his plantings of peonies for cut flowers this season.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Cut flowers have been scarce. Last week opened with a heavy storm, followed by a touch of frost; the effect of this was intensified by the disposition to hold back stock for the Christmas market. Retail business was a trifle quiet until the last of the week, but some good funeral orders, graduation bouquet work, etc., have caused quite a firm feeling. The Christmas trade acceleration could be felt in cut flowers as well as in plants. The shipping business is extremely heavy in violets, baby roses and greens. The mums are not in good shipping condition, besides being rather scarce; with fair weather, however, a good cut is predicted for Christmas. Wells' Late Pink is about gone and there are only a few Bonnaffons. Winter Cheer, O. H. Kahn, Appleton and Maud Dean are the most prominent varieties. The carnation supply is light and prices on regular market stock have been boosted in all grades. Violets temporarily were a little scarce, but are coming out again, and their condition could hardly be better. Orders for Christmas surpass all records.

The rose cut is light, but of good quality, and everything cleans up closely. Ophelia is in demand. Russell is fine and brings good prices. Hadley roses are popular, but seem hardly as good as those of a few weeks ago. Local conditions do not encourage heavy rose shipments at present. Freesias are a little slow, but the stock of Paper Whites is fair for this season. More Easter lilies are offered and there is enough valley. There is a fine cut of orchids, including several varieties of cattleyas and cypripediums. Gardenias are excellent and move in considerable quantity.

Attention is turning more strongly to plants and there now is some anxiety over a possible shortage. Some large local plantings of poinsettias are said to be turning out badly and it is not likely that any great quantity of azaleas can be brought out in time; some fear that there will not be enough other stock to meet the shortage. There was no large showing of cyclamens last week, though plenty are expected this week. Primulas are in strong demand. Begonias sell nicely and peppers are moving well. A few fine lots of English holly and mistletoe arrived last week and an abundance of holly is offered, but the trade is cautious in placing orders unless the quality is assured.

Horticultural Society Smoker.

The Pacific Coast Horticultural Society held an interesting meeting on the evening of December 11, followed by a jolly smoker, and, while there were hardly so many members present as had been expected, in view of the festivities, a fair crowd came out and made up in enthusiasm what it lacked in numbers.

Once more an important feature of the meeting was the admission of new members, Fred Howard, H. Kruckeberg, John Young, Henry W. Turner, William Hertrich and F. Burns, proposed at the previous meeting, being admitted, and the rules were suspended to admit a number proposed at this meeting. The latter were: George Webster, of San Mateo; Max Horn, M. Susko, John Patterson and F. Staples, with the MacRorie-McLaren Co.; William Scott, of Beresford; Peter Rock and F. Hammerstrom, of Golden Gate park; E. Schwerin and N. Baldocchi, of San Francisco; A. Laing and Gus Sturm, of San Mateo. "Progress" was the report of most of the committees called upon, but something of interest is expected before long, particularly from the committee on affiliation with the S. A. F.

The exhibits for the evening were: Nephrolepis Superior, by H. Plath, 90 points; a fine vase of the latest varieties of carnations, with long stems, by N. Peterson, of San Mateo, 92 points; a good specimen of Cibotium Schiedei, by F. Pelicano, 95 points. Announcement was made of the score on exhibits at meetings for the year, the three prize-winners being: H. Plath, first, with 980 points; F. Pelicano, second, 762 points; the MacRorie-McLaren Co., third, 444 points.

The business meeting closed with the nomination of officers for the coming year. Eric James was unanimously nominated for president, to succeed H. Plath, who has worked hard and effectively in that office for a long time. For vice-president Thomas Fenton was

It is most gratifying to note the reports in the trade papers, and especially those of the great Cleveland Show, where Prima Donna won hands down for best vase of 50 roses. We had every confidence in introducing it as a forcing rose, knowing if it had a fair trial it would make good. Note the prices it has been bringing in the New York market, which has been glutted with good roses. It is of splendid, quick, strong growth, throwing an abundance of two to three-foot canes, healthy and exceptionally free in production of blooms. A truly distinctive rose that is a big money-maker for the grower. We will have an elegant lot of plants from 2½-inch pots, Feb. 1st delivery and later.

Walker, welcomed the visitors and announced that the floral center was an assured feature of the rose festival for next June. He then gave a brief address, calling the attention of the ladies to the strong influence they exert on the trade, and expressed the hope that a women's auxiliary soon would be formed, so that they might assist the society in an organized manner.

President Walker said that the aim of the society is to elevate as well as promote the business of its members, and placed the florists in a class with artists, musicians and others whose chief endeavor is to satisfy the yearning of humankind for the beautiful in art and nature. The florists are not the real manufacturers, he claimed, but simply assistants to nature; hence, no evil can enter into their product, nor can the business degenerate. He pointed out the difficulty of attaining the high aims of the society, but expressed a firm belief that they could be reached with the active assistance of the ladies.

The program that followed was heartily enjoyed. Several times the entertainers had to respond to more than one encore. The numbers were:

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, John M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I.;
Secretary-Treasurer, O. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

THE 1916 congressional free distribution of seeds has begun, the first shipments, as usual, going into the south.

GEORGE FISHER, for many years traveling salesman for the Akron Seed Co., of Akron, N. Y., now is the proprietor of the business, S. J. Wiltse, the former owner, having retired.

By a mail vote the Iowa Seed Dealers' Association practically has decided to make Des Moines a permanent meeting place and to change the date to the first or second Wednesday and Thursday in June.

THE general catalogue of the H. G. Hastings Co., Atlanta, Ga., is ready, The Review's copy having been posted December 16. R. F. Lyon, secretary, states that the edition is 600,000, distributed only in the southern states.

DAVID BURPEE, who under the terms of his father's will now is head of W. Atlee Burpee & Co., has been elected a director of the Market Street National bank, of Philadelphia, filling the vacancy caused by the death of the senior Mr. Burpee, November 26.

THE federal quarantine against shipments from foreign countries of Irish potatoes affected with powdery scab is removed by an order of the Department of Agriculture, effective January 1, 1916. The quarantine against certain countries on account of the potato wart disease, promulgated September 12, 1912, remains in full force and effect.

MUST FIGHT AGAIN.

W. F. Therkildson, chairman of the committee on postal laws of the A. S. T. A., sounds a warning against proposed legislation that will deprive seeds of their present rate in the parcel post. He writes to The Review:

"As you are perhaps aware, Representative Anderson has introduced House Bill H. R. 636, which purposes to subject seeds, plants, etc., to the same rate of postage as other merchandise.

"You know it was by considerable effort we were able to keep seeds at the old rate of two ounces for 1 cent, up to and including eight ounces. It would be a mistake to let this bill slip through at this time, after so much effort. I will depend on you to use every means in your power to prevent this from becoming a law.

"Please furnish me carbon copies of the letters you will write to the senators and representatives, so as to prevent duplication. It is also well to have these on file.

"You can readily understand the matter of having to zone over four ounces is going to add a considerable burden. Please let me hear from you at your earliest convenience.

"I will depend on you to give publicity to this in your paper, and assist us in every way possible to have the trade use coöperative effort to kill this measure."

That the present rate was obtained was due largely to Mr. Therkildson's efforts and it is too much to ask that he wage the impending battle alone. Every seedsman should write to his senators and to his representative demanding that the rates be let alone. CUTHBERTSON ON BURPEE.

W. Cuthbertson, of Edinburgh, stands as the representative head of the horticultural trades in Great Britain. On receipt of the news of the death of W. Atlee Burpee he wrote:

"When I received a message from Philadelphia that W. Atlee Burpee had passed away, I felt that one of the finest men I have ever known had passed out of my life. He was a great personality and a great friend. There was not, there could not be, anything small or mean about Atlee Burpee. He was cast in a big mold.

"A Britisher by birth (he was born in Canada), he gave his adopted country all he had to give, but was a loyal friend to Britain to the end. I know that the war and the sufferings of Belgium caused him intense anguish.

"In 1876 Mr. Burpee started the business which has grown to be so large and so famous. Much of his success was due to his prescience, and much to his literary taste and ability. Illustrative of the former, he said regarding sweet peas in 1893, 'I think the sweet pea has never received the consideration from horticulturists and flower-lovers to which it is entitled. I consider it the flower of the future. The improvements made in sweet peas by hybridization and high cultivation are greater than in the case of any other annual except pansies. How accurately he thus forecasted the popularity of the sweet pea, how generously he helped it, and how he profited by it, many of us know.

at Reading, arm in arm with Mr. Burpee, we began discussing the speeches which had been made. I had spoken, and said it was surely possible that good feeling should exist among us though we were opponents in business. He said, 'I didn't like your word "opponents."' I said, 'Why?' 'Because "competitors" is a better word than "opponents,"' he answered. That illustrated his fine, discriminating taste, even in the choice of a word.

"A feature of Mr. Burpee's character—one which is often characteristic of truly great men—was this: He could, and did, appreciate the work of others, and was never slow to give expression to his appreciation.

"He has left two sons, who, I am sure, will worthily bear the honor and the responsibilities associated with their name.

"Those of us who were admitted to his close friendship feel that we shall not look upon his like again.

"Best seem'd the thing he was, and joined Each office of the social hour
To noble manners, as the flower
And native growth of noble mind."

THE BURBANK COMPANY.

The creditors of the Luther Burbank Co., of San Francisco, Cal., are in receipt of a letter from W. F. Pitts, the general manager, which says, in part:

"I recently took charge of this company's affairs and, while matters were found in a rather chaotic state, I feel quite confident that our present difficulties can be surmounted and worked out if we have the cooperation of all parties concerned. I have taken charge of the matter of refinancing our company and am making an effort to get matters in shape within the next thirty days, although the time is rather short and it may require sixty days to complete the work. We anticipate being able to refinance the company by not later than February 1 next, and at the latest we will be in a position to take care of all our creditors by March 1."

GOVERNMENT ACTIVITIES.

In the annual report of the Department of Agriculture there occur the following paragraphs on subjects of interest to the seed trade:

"Denia onion seed.—It has been determined that in several important localities high-grade onions of the Denia type can be produced from imported seed. Several lots of American-grown seed have been produced, and from this seed bulbs of high quality have resulted, thus indicating that it may be possible to successfully produce in this country a grade of Denia onion seed which will give results quite as satisfactory as have been obtained from imported seed.

"New and rare seeds.—The distribution had for its object the dissemination of seed of new and rare field crops, seed of improved strains of staple crops and high-grade seed of crops new to sections where the data of the department indicate such crops to be of considerable promise. Each package contained a sufficient quantity of seed for a satisfactory field trial, and the recipient was urged to use the seed for the production of stocks for future plantings. A report card and a circular, giving full directions for the culture of the crop, accompanied each package of seed. Only seed of new crops or of improved strains of standard crops were distributed, including the following: Canadian, Grimm, Peruvian, Baltic and Kansas-grown alfalfas; Bromus inermis; alsike, red, sweet and white clovers; New Era, Groit, Brabham, Iron and Early Buff

"During the year, 275,814 packages of new and rare field seeds were distributed, including 106,770 packages of cotton seed. The results obtained have been gratifying, indicating the value of a distribution of this kind. Such a distribution enables a farmer to procure seed of new and improved crops in sufficient quantities to produce similar stocks for future seeding, thus resulting in materially improving the crops of the country. The appropriation was $100,000.

"Imported seed.—As a result of the disturbed condition in Europe, there has been a shortage in the supply of many seeds normally imported and the quality of others has been poor. Less than one-fourth as much hairy vetch seed was imported in 1915 as in 1914. Some of this has been badly adulterated with weed vetches, one impor-

MERRY XMAS

HAPPY NEW YEAR

For several years business has not been as good for florists as in the past because of conditions prevailing throughout the country. From now on, however, business will be better—in fact, we believe it will be better than it ever was. So we congratulate those who have weathered the storm and are sorry for those who have not. We are not without faults—we make many mistakes, so we offer a little prayer of forgiveness for those who have an ill-feeling toward us, and we ask forgiveness from those whom we have rubbed the wrong way. We have no malice toward anyone, and we wish the entire trade, including all our competitors and the Dutchmen, a very Merry Xmas and Happy New Year.

tation containing only five per cent of hairy vetch seed. At present there is no way to prevent the importation of adulterated hairy vetch seed, as it is not subject to the seed-importation act. More than 1,000,000 pounds of the crimson clover seed imported during May and June, 1915, germinated less than sixty-two per cent, the lowest germination determined being only twenty-nine per cent. While much of this dead seed may be mixed with better seed before going to the consumer, it will eventually all be paid for by the farmer and seeded in the vain hope of securing a stand."

SAN FRANCISCO NOTES.

nominated. W. A. Hofinghoff was renominated for secretary. B. E. Meyer was nominated for financial secretary; J. A. Axell for treasurer; Prof. Gregg as librarian; D. Raymond and F. Poss as ushers. John McLaren was renominated as trustee. Nominations for the exhibit committee included Messrs. Plath, MacRorie, Pelicano, Taylor, Podesta, Fenton, A. J. Rossi, Bertrand, P. Ferrari, Gill, Hofinghoff, Goertzahn, James, Munro, Kittlewell, Peterson, D. McLaren, Stein, Meyer, Poss and others.

The meeting adjourned at 9:30, when James Keegan took charge. Tables had been placed in the room and excellent cigars, beer and sandwiches were quickly distributed. Mr. Keegan also had provided for musical entertainment, a number of professionals making things lively with piano, banjo and vocal selections when the conversation lagged, which was seldom. A few left early to cross the bay, but most of the crowd smoked and talked over matters of interest until well along toward midnight.

Various Notes.

Richard Diener, a member of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society and formerly a partner in the Metzner Floral Co., of Mountain View, is associated with Congressman William Kent, of Kentfield, near San Rafael, in a new enterprise, under the name of Richard Diener Co. The company has been incorporated with a capital stock of $25,000, which will be shared equally by Mr. Kent and Mr. Diener, and a large tract of land near Kentfield is being prepared for propagating and hybridizing gladioli, petunias, pansies and carnations. Mr. Diener's new seedling gladioli have attracted a great deal of attention this year at the Horticultural Society meetings, at the exposition and among the exhibits at the S. A. F. convention, the flowers being large and showing remarkable colors. He now has enough stock of this kind to plant about three acres.

Daniel Raymond, manager of the Garden City Pottery Co., will leave in a few days for an extended eastern trip, with the particular object of visiting the leading pottery plants of the country to see if they are making better pots than those made here.

J. A. Axell, of the E. W. McLellan Co., says he is fairly swamped with orders, mostly for violets, both for Christmas and current shipment, and, while the supply has at times seemed without limit, he is beginning to wonder whether there will be enough. His cut of gardenias for the holiday season is fully up to expectations and finds an excellent market. S. H. G.

Since Easter in 1916 will be so late—April 23rd, everybody can get Liliium Giganteum in good time. Lilies are still the Easter flower, and Giganteum the Easter lily. Ours may not be the best, but they don't come any better.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.
President, E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia.; Vice-president, John Watson, Newark, N. J.; Secretary, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treasurer, Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.
Forty-first annual meeting, Milwaukee, Wis., June 28 to 30, 1916.

The private office of the H. J. Weber & Sons Nursery Co., of Nursery, Mo., which also is the post-office of Nursery, of which Frank Weber is postmaster, was robbed last week of money and postage stamps to the amount of $200.

The county commissioners of Osceola county, Florida, will establish a nursery at Kissimmee, Fla., directly after New Year's. B. E. Evans and J. Davis, of Kissimmee, have been authorized to purchase nursery stock and materials for the establishment.

If you do a mailing trade in plants, write to your senators and representative in Congress to oppose House Bill 636, which, if it becomes law, will require zone rates on all parcel post shipments above four ounces. At present those up to eight ounces go at 1 cent for each two ounces. We don't want to lose this rate.

OUR PROBLEM.

A nurseryman who had waited in vain for payment on a bill of shrubs that he had sold to a smaller dealer, finally wrote and demanded some satisfactory answer in regard to the settlement of the account. The answer came and the delinquent was surprised that there should have been any doubt as to his ability to pay. "We are not dishonest. We are not hard up," he wrote. "If we could just convert our stock into cash, we would be able to meet all our bills."

And it didn't seem to strike him that he was stating every dealer's problem in citing his own case. M. F.

FIGHTING THE MOTHS.

Over 12,000,000 specimens of two parasites that prey on the gipsy moth and brown-tail moth were released in 201 towns in Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Rhode Island during the fall of 1914 and spring of 1915, according to the annual report of the bureau of entomology, United States Department of Agriculture.

As a result of the successful establishment of colonies of these and other parasites that feed on the gipsy and brown-tail moths, marked progress is being made in reducing these pests. Effective cooperation is being afforded by the states, which carry on as much work as possible within the infested areas, thus allowing the federal authorities to carry on field work along the outer border of infestation.

As a result of scouting work carried on by the entomologists in 223 towns in New England, the gipsy moth was found in four towns in Maine, twenty-three in New Hampshire, three in Vermont, ten in Massachusetts, and ten in Connecticut, making a total of fifty towns where the insect had not been previously reported. This scouting consists in an examination of all roadsides, residential sections, orchards and woodlands. Where colonies are found the egg clusters are treated with creosote and the trees are banded with tree tanglefoot and sprayed with arsenate of lead.

The spread of the brown-tail moth during the last year has been inconsiderable, the indications being that this pest has not infested any territory other than that already reported. In cooperation with the United States Lighthouse Service, the work of collecting moths at night along the coast of Connecticut and Long Island has been continued.

Other activities of the bureau in relation to the gipsy moth include the inspection of forest products, nursery stock, and stone and quarry products shipped from gipsy-moth territory, as well as extended investigations along other lines.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

The last week has been a busy one for the florists in their final preparations for the Yuletide. It is several years since there has been so general a demand for wreaths of all kinds, as well as roping of laurel, evergreens and holly. Palms, ferns and all kinds of potted plants, especially those bearing red blooms or berries or red foliage, have sold almost as fast as offered and at slightly better prices than a year ago. Red cut flowers of all kinds are being ordered freely, causing a material stiffening in prices; some of the dealers are taking orders only conditionally. A slight crispness to the weather created a more decided holiday atmosphere.

Various Notes.

William H. Tarbox, of West Greenwich, has just received more than 100 new cactus dahlias for propagation. He is suffering from a severe attack of rheumatism.

KNOXVILLE, TENN.

The Market.

The weather during the first half of December was disagreeable, with little sunshine, and the consequence is that stock is scarce. This seems to be the condition everywhere, for it is almost impossible to buy stock at other markets. If the cloudy weather continues for a few days, Christmas flowers will be at a premium, and the demand probably will be heavier than ever. A large crop of carnations is in the state of opening, after a few days of sun, but if the crop does not arrive in time for Christmas sales there probably will be a glut soon after.

Trade during the first half of December was good. Funeral work has been heavy, while the continuous round of social affairs has created a demand for bouquets and decorations.

Society Election.

At the annual meeting of the Knoxville Florists' Society, December 13, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, A. J. McNutt; vice-president, Mrs. W. R. Ryno; second vice-president, Brockway Crouch; secretary-treasurer, A. H. Dailey.

Members of the society were agreeably surprised to learn of Mrs. Edith Crouch's marriage to Mr. Goetz, a prominent young business man of Memphis. The wedding was a quiet one and it was only the day before the nuptials that members of the society heard the news. As a token of appreciation of her services rendered as vice-president of the society during the last two years, Mrs. Goetz was presented with a handsome silver baking dish and silver bread tray bearing the engraving: "From members of the Knoxville Florists' Society." Mrs. Goetz was associated with the concern of C. W. Crouch for some time and was store manager for several years.

Various Notes.

H. C. Neubrand, representing A. N. Pierson, Inc., of Cromwell, Conn., was in Knoxville December 11. This was Mr. Neubrand's first visit to Knoxville for his concern. F. G. Slowey, representing the Sefton Mfg. Co., of Chicago, was a visitor last week.

The Crouch store has prepared for a heavy Christmas trade. The stock includes a large number of some of the best poinsettias grown in this section.

Charles L. Baum is showing a fine line of plants and cut flowers, and if the sun shines for a few days he will have splendid stock for Christmas sales.

Addison J. McNutt has been exceedingly busy during the last two weeks and everything indicates a fine Christmas trade. He recently purchased a fine 5-passenger Overland car, and has mastered the art of driving without an accident.

A. H. Dailey was busy last week. Funeral work has been unusually heavy and preparations for Christmas necessitated a great deal of work. His new store on North Gay street, managed by R. M. Speer, is proving a success.

Mrs. W. R. Ryno complains of stock being scarce. Friends are glad to hear of her recovery from a recent attack of the grip.

The annual banquet of the Knoxville Florists' Society will be held at the

THE THIRD EDITION OF THE Album of Designs

(A Book Every Retailer Needs)

THE original Album of Designs was published in response to many requests from florists who felt the need for an up-to-date book that could be used in taking orders for Funeral Designs, Wedding Decorations and Bouquets, Table Decorations and all cut flower work where it was not practicable to show the customer the finished article as it would be when ready for use. With the publication of this album it became possible to show the finished work in beautifully printed pictures. The first edition sold like hot cakes, and a second edition went quickly. Now a third edition is off the press. Everything is in it—all the standard designs and many new and heretofore unpublished pieces.

The Market.

Trade is about all that can be reasonably expected. Stock is more plentiful and is cleaned up about as fast as it comes in. Funeral work has been heavy and has used up a great deal of the output. Roses are fine. Carnations are in heavy demand, but there will be a fair cutting for Christmas. Some growers, however, report a scarcity.

There will be a good supply of narcissi, both in white and yellow. Valley is in good supply, as are sweet peas. Violets are coming in well and many early Christmas orders were booked for them. Some fine poinsettias are to be seen in the cut ones, and are meeting with ready sales. Those in pans do not seem to be up to the standard, but are fair. There is a good supply of azaleas, which are finding a ready sale, and it is doubtful if there will be enough to go around. Cincinnati begonias are much in evidence, but move somewhat slowly in this market. Primulas are to be seen in quantities and some extra good plants are on the market. Pans of valley will be plentiful. They always find a ready sale at Christmas time. There seem to be quantities of trees, holly and Christmas greens of all kinds, and all report good sales of them.

Various Notes.

The Livingston Seed Co. is making its usual good run on Christmas goods.

Richard Winters is having a fine cut of sweet peas, with quality just about right. He says he is sorry his crop is not heavier, as he could dispose of them easily.

The Munk Floral Co. has completed its improvements and looks for heavy business.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. is cutting some fine roses and carnations.

Dorner's Novelty for 1916

New Salmon Pink Carnation NANCY

Color, light salmon pink, a little darker than Pink Delight and a more even color. Blooms are good commercial size, three inches and over, nicely formed and have never shown a bursted calyx. Stems always hold the flower upright. The habit is a quick productive growth and as a producer it stands highest among commercial varieties. Color does not fade. Fragrance is very noticeable. Having an excellent cerise pink and an improved yellow to offer in 1917, we have decided to disseminate the variety NANCY this year (1916). For a light pink that will produce quantities of bloom and is commercially good in every respect, plant NANCY. The stock is limited and orders will be filled in rotation as received. Price, rooted cuttings, $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000. First deliveries in January.

The Market.

The prospects are for only a fair Christmas supply, but prices are not any too good. For the last fortnight receipts have been extremely light and, as the holidays approach, the receipts show only a small increase. American Beauties are of excellent quality and in good supply. The cut of other roses, particularly of Killarney and White Killarney, has increased and these are again in fair supply. Carnations are exceedingly scarce. Both Easter and magnificum lily receipts are heavy. Poinsettias are plentiful. Valley, orchids and violets apparently are in sufficient supply to meet all requirements. These have an active market. Other offerings include stevias, calla lilies, sweet peas, narcissi, forget-me-nots and primroses.

Various Notes.

C. E. Critchell reports that this year's sale of boxwood has been the largest he has ever had.

Friends of C. A. Peters, now of Huntington, W. Va., and formerly of this city, are sorry to hear of the death of Mrs. Peters, which occurred December 11.

Henry Koester has the sympathy of his many friends in the loss of his father, who died December 14, in his seventy-first year.

Recent visitors included E. J. Fancourt, of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia; L. F. Benson, of Indianapolis; Miss F. D. White, of Lexington, Ky.

NEWPORT, R. I.

The regular meeting of the Newport Horticultural Society was a busy and an important one, as plans for next season were discussed. The report of the committee on the revision of the constitution and by-laws was adopted and ordered printed after several amendments had been made thereto.

The society voted to cooperate with the Newport Garden Association in holding a rose and strawberry exhibition at the garden and grounds of the association, in June, at which time sweet peas will be given a prominent place. The premium list for the mid-summer show, to be held August 11 to 13, in conjunction with the Newport Garden Club, was presented by the executive committee. The list was thoroughly discussed and, finally, after some additions had been made, it was adopted. It is understood that there will be a number of special premiums added later.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Stock will be exceedingly scarce for Christmas. The cold, dark weather has held back the cut to a great extent and the orders have been coming in so fast that the entire stock was booked almost two weeks in advance. Plants have had an exceptionally good sale and are becoming more and more prominent as a factor in the holiday sales. Roses are in fine shape and those who purchased the better grades of stock will have something exceptionally fine this year.

Red stock, both in roses and carnations, is in heavy demand, as usual, and of course the demand far exceeds the supply. The crop of carnations is good, but white seems to predominate and the call for this color is the lightest. Violets will be scarce this year. The quality of the singles is good and the doubles, while not so good as they might be, are readily disposed of. Prices have soared and still orders will have to go unfilled regardless of price. Orchids will cut more of a figure in the market than heretofore and there is some fine stock to be had. Valley is about equal to the demand and is in fine shape. Business seems to be getting over the depression which has been in evidence for some time and it is almost safe to prophesy a banner year for the trade.

Various Notes.

Quite a few of the trade from out of town were visitors last week, making arrangements for Christmas shipments.

P. L. McKee, of the American Greenhouse Mfg. Co., of Chicago, has made several visits to Milwaukee of late, as he has secured the contract for the erection of three new houses to be added to the range of the Cudahy Co. early next spring. H. J. S.

Toronto, Ont.—The following officers were elected at the annual meeting of the Toronto Gardeners' and Florists' Association: President, Louis Whytock; vice-presidents, George Thompson and T. J. Gould; secretary, George Douglas; treasurer, George H. Mills.

Greenhouse Heating.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

THE COAL MARKET.

It is perhaps hardly necessary to say that the weather, with its change to real winter conditions, has been one of the strongest influences in controlling the coal market during the last week and has greatly benefited the trade. The weather, though ordinarily the subject of commonplace small talk, is sometimes the chief arbiter in men's affairs—in the florists' trade, the coal trade and elsewhere. In the east the fall in the temperature was accompanied by a blizzard, which added to the other interruptions of transportation and intensified the demand for fuel. Already the expansion of trade has been sufficient to clean up the unwieldy accumulations of coal, and it is predicted that the severe weather, if it continues, will soon force the mine operators to increase their output.

The point of chief interest to the florists is that there are no more prospects of bargain sales of smokeless coal. The smokeless market, which of late has been exceptionally lax, "has righted itself quickly" under the stimulation of the weather. The circular price on mine-run, $1.40, is now maintained.

ONE HOUSE IS PARTITIONED.

I have two greenhouses, running east and west, with a service house, 20x24, connecting them so that the combined buildings form one continuous line. One greenhouse is 20x50 and has a 30-inch concrete wall all around, with thirty inches of glass in the side walls from the concrete to the eaves. The

BOILERS ON THE GROUND LEVEL

The Morehead Mfg. Co., Detroit, Mich.

Gentlemen:-

Mr. Fitzgerald, Mex.

"No news is said to mean good news". It certainly has proven so in this case, as you have neither had letters of complaint or approval regarding the two large sized Morehead Tilling Steam Traps and Receiver purchased from you last September.

My reason was I wanted to give them a thorough test before doing so, and during severe weather. One trap and receiver is 75 ft. distant from the boiler room. The height of "lifts" between the two traps is 22 ft. (my boilers being set on the ground level).

Usually daily 20 to 25 lbs. of steam on our boilers, and under all conditions of weather the traps perform the work in a very efficient and satisfactory manner.

I know there will be a large saving in fuel, but cannot say just how much yet, but ~~assure~~ assure the problem of returning the condensation to our boilers is solved, and that in a very satisfactory manner. I make it a point to show the traps to all interested parties, and you may depend that I will always speak a good word for the Morehead Steam Trap.

Thanking you for your interest in my case,

Yours very truly,
Peter Fisher

to travel before entering the greenhouse. This house has four flows and four returns on the north side and three flows and three returns on the south side, all of 2-inch pipe. This piping is supposed to give a night temperature of 50 degrees.

The boiler is situated at the west end of the service house, in the basement. The top of the boiler is eighteen inches below the lowest point in the pipes, which rise five and one-half inches in fifty feet. The boiler is a Metropolitan, 1911 patent. It stands three feet high, exclusive of the base. The grate is 22x38. Is this boiler, with the system of piping described, sufficient to give the temperatures stated, when the outside temperature is 10 degrees below zero? C. R. W.—Mich.

From the description given, we are not positive regarding the amount of pipe in the two sections into which the house first described is divided. As we understand it, a 3-inch flow pipe runs through the first section and supplies eight 2-inch flows and a similar number of 2-inch returns in the end section. This will give about 180 square feet of radiation, which should furnish a temperature of 60 degrees in the section 18x20 feet.

In addition to the 3-inch flow and return which pass through the other house, there are two 2-inch flows and two 2-inch returns. If, besides this, the four returns from the end section also pass through this section, there will be about 225 square feet, which should be sufficient for 50 degrees.

Our method of piping the two sections would be to run three 2½-inch flow pipes to the farther end of the farther section, placing one flow on each plate and the other under the ridge. At the farther end of the house, drop the central flow down and supply two coils of two 2-inch returns. These should start at the middle of the end of the house and run in either direction to the corners of the house, and then on the walls back to the boiler. Each of the other flows should feed two 2-inch returns on the walls. All of the pipes, both flows and returns, should run through the other section, where they will give a temperature of 50 degrees. In the other house there will be four 2-inch flow pipes on one side and three on the other, with the same number of 2-inch pipes as returns. This should give 50 degrees.

There will be not far from 1,000 square feet of radiation in the system, for which the boiler should have a rating of 1,200 square feet. This is approximately the size of the boiler which has been installed.

THE HEATING PROBLEM SOLVED

Judging strictly according to mechanical merits, it's the METROPOLITAN PATENTED BOILER you want.

Because of their proven scientifically perfect construction, Metropolitan Patented Boilers will heat a given amount of water quicker, with less fuel and less attention than any other boiler on the market.

The remarkable heating efficiency and quick steaming qualities of these boilers are due to their large and effective heating surface.

Just a few points of Metropolitan Patented Boiler merit:—Smooth, perfect finished castings. Push nipple connections. Large fire box, providing ample combustion chamber, and permitting a sufficient charge of fuel to require attention only at long intervals. Deep ash pit, making the removal of ashes a slight task. Large flues, making the boiler easy to clean. Grates that are made for hard usage and long service. And above all, they are Fuel Saving, not Fuel Wasting.

We also make soft coal boilers which are smokeless, and save 50 per cent in coal.

The Market.

We are experiencing real Christmas weather, with the thermometer registering 10 degrees above zero, and plenty of snow and ice underfoot. The Christmas spirit of buying gifts has been prevalent the last two weeks and business is exceedingly brisk in every department of the trade. Owing to the severely cold weather and the almost continuous snow storm, the supply of cut flowers has shortened considerably. Then, too, many of the growers are holding back their stock of plants for Christmas ordering. Carnations are scarce, and a great shortage is expected for Christmas, especially in red. Red roses are also at a premium, and cannot be had in very large quantities at any price.

Prices for Christmas already have gone into effect. Roses are in better supply in Killarney, Mrs. Chas. Russell, Shawyer, Sunburst, Ophelia and Ward. White roses are scarce. Sweet peas are more plentiful. Stevia is in excellent condition. American Beauties are good, and the prices quoted for Christmas are high. Violets are plentiful, and are having a good demand. Easter and calla lilies sell well for funeral work, of which there is a great deal. Lily of the valley is in splendid condition and the demand is good. Only a few stragglers are left of the chrysanthemums, and these are mostly yellow, although a few white ones are being used for funeral work.

The variety and quality of Christmas plants are exceptionally good. Poinsettias are proving great favorites, and azaleas are close seconds. Cyclamens, narcissi, primulas, ardisias and Jerusalem cherries are going well. Heather plants in both the Scotch and French varieties are a novelty in this locality and are selling well. The business in Christmas greens and novelties is active. Baskets of boxwood, Scotch heather, ruscus, Diana grass and immortelles are proving popular and wreaths of holly, boxwood, heather, ruscus and immortelles are in great demand. The quality of mistletoe is unusually good.

Various Notes.

Miss Catherine Vesey is at home for the holidays, from Glendale College, Delaware, O.

Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Shive, of the Flick Floral Co., motored to Decatur last Sunday, in a lively snow storm. They covered fifty miles.

The decorations in the downtown florists' windows are unusually attractive, with their Christmas suggestions. Red and green are the prevailing color schemes, while many novelties are displayed to attract the public's eye and lure its purse. Striking Christmas decorations have been carried out by the Wolf & Dessauer department store. They consist of evergreen, laurel and holly roping, draped from the top of the 5-story building to the ornamental lights, which are green and red.

The Flick Floral Co. has received a large shipment of evergreens, arbutus and blue spruce in tubs, and has a fine display of them in front of its conservatory on West Berry street. Its handsome new building, adjoining the Berry street building, is well under way. A conservatory will be erected in connection with it. R. F.

The Market.

Business conditions in every line are satisfactory. The books show an increase over last year by a large margin. The total of bank clearings each week has shown an average increase of twenty per cent over each corresponding week of last year. Stock has been scarce. One reason for this is that the growers have been letting flowers hang on the plants to help meet the demand for Christmas. This especially applies to carnations, which are the easiest to hold and the hardest flowers on the market to buy today. Other cut flowers are plentiful and up to the standard in quality; good prices are being obtained for them.

Pot plants of all kinds are plentiful. This market never has seen better pot plants in such large numbers. Azaleas were all easy to get in flower this year and all blooms are coming at one time. Cyclamens have increased three-fold over last year and all plants are of better quality. Poinsettias are more numerous than last year. Begonias of all kinds are of good quality and in sufficient supply to meet all demands. Basket work has been prepared for and a large number of plants has been grown for that purpose.

Various Notes.

For several years Arthur Newell and Samuel Murray owned jointly some valuable ranch land in the Texas panhandle. A deal for this land was closed last week by Mr. Newell. The land sold for cash at a good profit over the original cost. A trip to the orient is being planned by Messrs. Newell and Murray.

W. J. Barnes has the best pot plants for Christmas he has ever had, especially in Lorraine begonias and cyclamens. He has begonias that measure thirty inches across and large cyclamens in 8-inch pots. The poinsettias are three to a pan, and from six to eight inches above the pan.

The commission houses have plenty of holly and mistletoe of excellent quality. They report that business in that line is a great deal better than, and consignments not so heavy as, last year.

T. J. Noll & Co. report plenty of stock of all kinds. Consignments of holly and peppers are of first quality. Orders are a great deal heavier than a year ago for Christmas cut flowers and supplies, due, he says, to honest dealing and the help of The Review ads.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. had a busy week in decorating. It has received a fine line of novelties for the holiday trade.

The George M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. had a busy week in funeral work, out of town. A good crop of cut flowers and plants is expected from the greenhouses for the Christmas trade.

There was plenty of funeral work in this city last week. Practically every florist had a good share of it.

Horace Cheeseman, representing Ralph M. Ward & Co., of New York, was in this city last week.

Business across the state line has been good, with plenty of funeral work, an increase in decorating, and extensive preparations for Christmas.

The Market.

Business last week was not so good as that of any of the several weeks previous, for the reason that buyers were waiting for the holidays and also because of the cloudy weather. Roses are becoming scarce, but if we have sunshine this week it will help matters. It looks as if the heavy crop the growers have planned for the holidays might arrive just after the heavy demand is over. There are plenty of good pot plants for the trade, poinsettias being especially plentiful and good. Roman hyacinths are in good supply, as are Paper White narcissi in pots. Cyclamens are plentiful and of the best quality. Some growers have more good azaleas than usual, while others have none.

There is little static on the market, but as there is plenty of other similar stock there will be few who will miss it. I have seen few immortelles thus far. Christmas decorations are selling well, especially at wholesale. There seems to be nothing new this season. There is plenty of the regular stock we have had for years, but what is needed is a few good novelties each season. While holly has appeared on the streets and in the market house, it is not up to the usual standard in quality. It has been claimed that Tennessee holly is unusually good this year, but its appearance does not warrant the statement. Mistletoe, however, is berried better than I have ever seen it here. None of the florists handle either of these items except in a few made-up wreaths.

On the whole, prices are satisfactory and everyone will boost them this week. The general expectations are that holiday business will be better than ever this year. Perhaps more advance orders have been booked this year than last.

Various Notes.

The Joy Floral Co. is doing a good wholesale business in Christmas goods. This company's American Beauties are as good as I have ever seen on this market.

McIntyre Bros. say they will have a good line of cut flowers this week, as well as a heavy supply of pot plants. They are doing most of their retailing from the Broadway store.

Geny Bros. have an unusually fine lot of azaleas this year and their roses are at their best. At no time have they had a larger cut than now. They have a good line of bulbous stock.

Most of the small growers are not attempting to do much at Christmas this year, though all of them will have nice assortments of plants at their greenhouses. F. B.

The Market.

The fore part of last week was rather dull, but at the end of the week business became livelier. Friday and Saturday it was much like the starting of the holiday rush. All kinds of plants continue to come in and the stores have the Christmas spirit about them. Much extra help is required and longer hours are necessary.

The supply of roses is about equal to the demand, with the exception of white, which is more plentiful. Red, of course, is scarcer than any other color. Beauties are selling well and bring good prices. Carnations are rather scarce and seem to sell out every day. The red carnations are insufficient for the demand. Mums of all descriptions are done for; they are no longer called for.

Violets are selling nicely, the singles being scarce and the doubles having good quality. Valley at present is quite sufficient for the call and mignonettes are plentiful. Orchids still cling to the scarce side of the market. Calla and Easter lilies are not selling well. Holly and laurel wreaths are experiencing a large demand; likewise the immortelle wreaths, which are being used more than ever. All kinds of plants are appearing on the market, with azaleas, cyclamens, ardisias, poinsettias, begonias and heather in the lead. Greens of all kinds are selling well.

Various Notes.

David Scott, of Corfu, is shipping excellent mignonettes. They are as good as any that can be seen hereabouts.

A. Reichert, at Main and Leroy streets, has a unique Christmas window worked out in electric lights.

Miss Barry, who has been sick for the last two weeks, has resumed her duties at the branch store of W. J. Palmer & Son. A new system has been tried out here for accommodating the large number of plants for Christmas. Wooden racks, made like latticework, ten feet high and two feet wide, were placed about four feet from the win-

COMBATING WATER HYACINTHS.

The water hyacinths that flourish in the fresh-water streams and lakes of Florida, and at times become a serious obstruction to navigation on the Saint Johns, Withlacoochee, Caloosahatchee and Kissimmee rivers and their tributaries, are destroyed by a peculiar process, which is described in the report of the officer of the War Department of the Jacksonville district.

The water hyacinth is said to have been introduced to Florida waters in 1890. It spread rapidly, and before operations for its removal were started the rivers were not infrequently so blocked with floating masses of the plant that navigation was seriously impeded and the rafting of logs was at times entirely stopped. In 1899 Congress authorized the engineers to remove the hyacinths, which, while varied in color, are not used commercially because of their inaccessibility.

The engineers crush the plants with a mechanical device installed on a steamer, using log booms to close sloughs and backwaters as an auxiliary means. The cost of equipping the vessel and operating it for one year was $36,000. As an outfit like this had been used in Louisiana with but little satisfaction, the plan of spraying the plants with a chemical solution was used until Congress stopped it on the ground that the chemicals might injure cattle. The plan of breaking up the packs of hyacinths and floating them out with the current, using log booms to confine the plant to waters outside the channel, was then adopted. In 1909 a hyacinth elevator, consisting of a catamaran scow carrying an inclined conveyor, was placed in service and has been used since with success.

Under these operations the Saint Johns and other rivers have been practically cleared of the hyacinths so far as they obstructed navigation. About $140,300 has been expended in this work. To continue the removal of the hyacinths on these rivers, an appropriation of $10,000 has been asked of Congress. E. H. P.

Just think, right in the heart of New York City, a full iron frame, curved eave greenhouse, 33 x 125 feet, built on top of a Broadway building. This house was recently completed by us for Mr. C. C. Trepel, the well-known and largest New York Florist.

Our plans for this unique building were accepted by the numerous building departments of the City of New York, and the finished job passed by them.

Easy access is gained by an electric elevator from store to greenhouse.

YOU MAY WANT TO SELL. BUILD SO YOU CAN SELL.

Suppose, Mr. Greenhouse Man, you want to sell your property after a few years—how about that? If it is built of Cypress, the recognized wood for greenhouse construction, you will not have to meet the objection of the proposed purchaser that the building will not last—that it is not standard-built. You will not need to go into an argument to try and convince him that the substitute wood is as good as the recognized standard wood—CYPRESS.

In other words, Cypress is so firmly established as the definitive greenhouse wood that a structure built of it is as standard as gold dollars. A Cypress greenhouse will sell—it is an asset. Everybody knows what Cypress stands for in greenhouse construction; if anybody knows what the substitute woods stand for, we would be glad to hear from him.

It seems to us worth while for you to accept the verdict of time, test and all worthy experience in greenhouse work and build of Cypress, the greenhouse wood. That is your only course for securing a real asset in the undertaking.

If you built with anything but Cypress and ever want to sell, you would need to hunt around and find some purchaser who was wholly ignorant of the universal standard practice in greenhouse construction—which is Cypress from ridge-pole to foundation, with "Pecky" posts, benches and standards. You wouldn't be able to sell to anybody who knows Cypress or who knows anybody else who knows. These suggestions are worth while, even though you don't expect to sell out. They simply mean making the most of your investment, for your own sake.

Think them over.

A FEW MORE REASONS

WHETHER you are building a new range or one small greenhouse or just making repairs on the old place, here is some talk you should consider. You want your place modern in every respect, or rather you want it as near modern as is possible without going to enormous expenditures. Do you know that a proper sash operating device for opening and closing the sash can be purchased for a very reasonable price? No longer are they considered a luxury in a greenhouse. In fact, Mr. Florist, a good sash operating device is a necessity, for it assists you wonderfully in raising the kind of stock your customers demand. You can't afford to overlook these facts, and besides, just think of the time you save every day. Why, in time saving alone the device will pay you back the money you spend in a year or a year and a half.

You want full control of the Ventilating in your greenhouses of course, so write us for our catalogue. We fully illustrate and describe our line of sash operating devices and greenhouse fittings in our catalogue, and besides, we put net prices right in the catalogue, so you get all the information desired at one time.

ADVANCE CO., - Richmond, Ind.

We are ringing down the curtain on a year that has ended much better than it began; on a year that has turned out far better than the most sanguine of us dared hope; on a year that has given us much reason to be proud of our occupation, our business, our profession; on a year that has proved flowers more staple than steel.

STANDING on the threshold of 1915, in the shadow of the misfortunes that befell us all in the latter half of the year then closing, he was a man of unusual foresight who could discern the course of events in this trade during the twelve months now drawing to a close. Then, if ever, when we voiced the salutation, "Happy New Year," was the wish father to the thought—we hoped for it, but scarce expected it to come true.

In common with almost every other line of business in the United States, we had been hard hit by the war. By the beginning of 1915, however, it began to be apparent that florists as a class were not suffering so greatly as many other classes of business men; indeed, by spring it was evident that in certain sections florists were not suffering at all, while many other lines still felt keenly the depression.

It was in October that the boom began. There are communities in which the florists have not yet felt the pulsebeat of business above normal, but in the middle west the tenth month of the year was the best October this trade ever has experienced and in many places as much may be said for November and for December. While florists had not suffered so seriously as many others during the months of depression, the boom in other lines was reflected promptly in an increased call for flowers. The revival, felt first in the agricultural west, soon spread to the manufacturing east.

Our Position Today.

It can be said for the florists' business that today we stand in a better position than ever before. It has been demonstrated that flowers are more staple than steel, as necessary as food and clothing to a considerable and constantly increasing proportion of the population.

Having weathered the storm of the first year of war in Europe with business failures scarcely so numerous as in normal times, it may be assumed that the greater caution now habitual has put the trade on a footing where it is in safer shape than ever before. We are growing more stock than ever before, better stock, and have a wider outlet. We are, today, in position to wish each other a "Happy New Year" with the conviction that it will come true.

The Staple Flowers.

Considering the staple flowers, it must be said 1915 was a rose year. Under the depressed conditions of the first part of the year roses did not suffer in price to the same extent as other flowers and under the improved conditions of recent months they have maintained their lead in salability. Aside from this, the special feature of the rose year has been the meteoric rise of that prophet-like variety, Mrs. Russell.

The year has been marked by the spread of the opinion that the great bread-and-butter flower, the carnation, is declining in popular favor. Those who so hold point to the way it suffered in price last season and explain recent stiff prices by the assertion of reduced supply, while those whose special interests are bound up in the flower contend that the experiences of 1915 were due to unusual business and weather conditions and that they prove nothing at all. Really, the carnation shares the workingmen's fortunes.

The violet did so poorly in the early part of the year that production was considerably reduced in the latter part. The result has been a recently improved status for the flower. In parts of the middle west outdoor violets from San Mateo county, California, now compete with the indoor violets from the Hudson river district and violet growing has almost ceased to be a local industry.

The business acceleration of the autumn was most timely for chrysanthemums, which, although produced in greater quantities than ever before, on the whole had the most successful season in years.

The longiflorum lily became an every-day flower in 1915 and there were few days on which the principal markets did not afford sweet peas, with the result of lower average prices for both these flowers, independent of other conditions.

The summer was poor for asters, because of weather conditions, and for gladioli, because of greatly increased production.

faster than have the biggest days. For instance, St. Valentine's day, Mothers' day and Thanksgiving were relatively better than Easter, Memorial day and Christmas.

McKinley day was forgotten, except in a few places. St. Valentine's day produced a notable sale for corsage bouquets and boxes of loose flowers. Easter was good, but is limited by the difficulty of getting advance orders. Mothers' day showed another big gain; the fastest growing special flower day. Memorial day is more generally observed each year, but the demand for flowers varies with local weather conditions. All Saints' day called for many mums in the south, many shipped from California as well as from the north. Thanksgiving was ahead of expectations; the best yet. Christmas has become the big day of the year, possibly because of the more moderate prices that have accompanied increased supply, but assisted by the "Do your shopping early" campaign.

Credits and Collections.

Possibly the most important event of the year, so far as the general good of the trade is concerned, has been the inception of a national movement for closer credits and collections. Without concerted action, it chanced that the subject was considered in the conventions of all three of the leading national trade organizations, the American Association of Nurserymen and the American Seed Trade Association at their conventions in June and the Society of American Florists at its annual meeting in August.

In the nursery and seed trades for years there have been recognized trade customs with regard to due dates of accounts, but the settlement dates have been so infrequent that the impression has become general that reform is desirable, if not absolutely necessary; indeed, some of the more progressive houses already have come to enforce special terms much shorter than the trade custom. In the florists' business there never has been such a thing as a recognized trade custom with regard to credits and collections, with the result that those who have sought to establish business terms in their own selling have had more or less difficulty in getting their terms taken seriously.

With conditions as they are, and have been for many years, it is of course difficult if not impossible to secure concerted action, but the fact that the three big national trade bodies are discussing the subject and appointing committees to dig deeper into it indicates the general interest that is being taken in putting this trade on a footing where each will do business on his own capital instead of on the capital of those from whom purchases are made.

The Shows.

There were not so many trade shows in 1915 as in some previous years. In part this may have been due to the general unsettlement of the times, but it appears to be increasingly difficult to make large flower shows self-supporting, especially in communities where they now lack the element of novelty. It seems quite general, too, and not related to the unusual conditions of 1915, that the periodical exhibitions of the endowed horticultural societies are becoming smaller rather than larger, that they are becoming more and more private gardener and amateur in character and that the trade, outside of a limited number catering to this class of customers, is taking a less and less active part in them. The reason seems to lie in the difficulty of achieving distinctiveness year after year.

In spite of these conditions 1915 was notable for two outstanding successes in the way of trade shows, one at New York in the spring, the other at Cleveland in the autumn. The New York show took in over $33,000, more money than any local show ever did before, while at Cleveland, with a lower admission fee, the attendance represented a higher percentage of the city's population than ever has been achieved elsewhere. It is to be noted that the financial success of each of these shows was due to the income derived from the sale of space to trade exhibitors. In neither case did the net profits equal the sum paid for space.

Conventions of the Year.

The meetings of the national trade societies several years ago ceased to keep pace with the growth of the trade, so that the fact that most of them fell short of expectations was not wholly due either to times or location. The problem before the officers of the national as well as the local trade organizations, as emphasized by the experience of 1915, is to revive the interest that has been submerged by familiarity and the development of many fresh interests in the lives of florists.

The nurserymen, facing almost the same problems and conditions as florists, at their national convention reshaped their organization on the basis of dues according to the annual gross business of the member, which will, of course, imply in most cases a direct financial gain or a lapse of the membership.

For some years it has been said, "There are too many trade societies; no man can afford time or money to attend more than a few of their meetings." But the only apparent check on their increase in number seems to lie in the fact that with the birth of the Dahlia Society in 1915 the special flower interests seem to be pretty completely covered.

Greenhouse Building.

Plans for new glass usually are made some months in advance, so that the virtual cessation of greenhouse building in the east in the early part of 1915 reflected the conditions of the closing months of 1914. There was a marked revival in the manufacturing east during the latter part of the year, while in the agricultural middle west the new glass equaled the record of any previous year. With this difference, however: In 1915 the additions were to the country establishments catering to home trade, rather than to the places that grow cut flowers for the wholesale markets of the big cities. With improved markets the last quarter of the year, builders now are busy on plans for 1916 greenhouses.

PROPAGATING MARGUERITES.

Will you please tell me the proper time to take marguerite cuttings? I want to grow them in beds for winter flowering. When is the best time to plant them? How closely should they be planted and which is the best variety to grow? J. G.—N. J.

The best time to propagate marguerites, both yellow and white, is from September to April. During the warm months all the shoots run to flower, and, while they can be rooted, they do not make desirable plants. The yellow marguerite, Chrysanthemum frutescens Etoile d'Or, is the most popular one in the market. There are several forms of this marguerite. In the vicinity of Boston these yellow marguerites are extensively grown and are popular, realizing nearly as much money as carnations.

Cuttings taken now should be potted and planted in beds in August, twenty-four inches apart each way. It makes the plants more floriferous in midwinter if the root action is somewhat restricted. For this reason some growers grow their plants in large pots and allow them to root through the bottoms, carrying them over for a number of years. However, I have seen just as fine flowers produced from young plants benched in August, from cuttings taken the preceding spring. Yellow marguerites make a useful crop to plant in carnation houses where any plants have failed or where any particular batch of carnations is pulled out early. Cuttings rooted now, planted out in February and grown right along will give a wealth of flowers the same season. While marguerites will flower in midwinter, they do not produce a really heavy crop until towards spring and they probably produce more dollars in May and June than in any other months.

The white marguerite, Mrs. F. Sander, meets with a fair demand, but is not so much in demand as the yellow varieties. Its flowers are partly single and partly semi-double in summer. It is a splendid summer bedding plant and produces its double white flowers all through the hot months. C. W.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

New Year's Greeting from President MacRorie.

HERE is no day in all the year that brings more expectant joy to the heart of every man than the advent of a new year. The privilege, as president of the S. A. F., of extending to its members and to their families the sincere wish for a happy and prosperous New Year, gives me extreme pleasure.

There is no doubt whatever in my mind but that it will be a prosperous year and, inasmuch as prosperity and happiness go hand in hand, I can readily assume that it will be a happy one. Trade conditions throughout the country are very healthy. We have harvested the largest crops in our history and this is the backbone of prosperity in any country.

We have more to hope for in the year 1916 than we have ever had before. Our country has been saved from the horrible calamity which has overwhelmed Europe and we are hopeful that we will be spared from such a fate, not only this year, but for all years to come.

It is with great personal gratification that I can look upon the S. A. F. as more truly a national body than it has ever been. The convention held in San Francisco in 1915 was, in my opinion, a step forward. Its convening in Houston, Tex., in 1916 will be another step toward making it a really national organization in every sense of the word. By extending our conventions to the west and south we not only benefit those sections, but the society itself gains much by securing large numbers of recruits from the new territory which has thereby become attached to it. Every section of the country is benefited and the members are already drawn closer together than ever before, forming a universal brotherhood for the promotion of all that is beneficial to the individual and to the society as a whole.

As the president of this worthy organization I am proud to be able to send a kind greeting to all the craftsmen of the society. Our membership is increasing steadily and I know that it will continue to do so. This larger membership will make it possible for us to undertake in the future many things that would be otherwise impossible. I am particularly desirous that every man associated with our profession should have the opportunities which our society affords, and as a slight stimulant toward increasing our member-only stipulation being that the winner must bring at least thirty new members.

I hope that the vice-president in every state, as well as every member of the board of directors, and that every permanent committee will cooperate with me in pushing forward this endeavor to increase our membership. In order that these heads may attain the required success it will be necessary for every individual who is fortunate enough to be a member of the S. A. F. to give forth his best efforts, for "in unity there is strength," and if these efforts are put forth untiringly, we will beyond a doubt soon have a membership list three times what it is today.

It is the sincere desire of this society to build up a permanent institution founded on a pillar of fairness and good-will, and I hope every member will lend his efforts to this end.

Again extending a message of hearty good wishes and unbounded blessings for the New Year, I am,

Faithfully yours,

Secretary Young states that the names of the S. A. F. directors for 1916 under the affiliation plan will be announced next week. They are the presidents of the trade societies that each have 100 or more members also members of the S. A. F.

Department of Registration.

Notice is hereby given that Lager & Hurrell, of Summit, N. J., offer for registration the cattleya mentioned below. Any person objecting to the use of the proposed name or registration is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

GLADIOLI FOR MEMORIAL DAY.

Will you kindly tell me of some of the best commercial pink, salmon and scarlet gladioli for forcing, and the date to plant them? Also, please give date to plant America and Augusta to have them in bloom for Memorial day. They will be forced in a carnation temperature.

A. A.—Ill.

The following are recommended as good forcing varieties for the purpose named and can be planted in a carnation temperature about January 20: America, Augusta, Mrs. Francis King, flame pink; Pink Perfection, rose pink; Pink Beauty, deep rose; Brenchleyensis, scarlet; Halley, coral pink, creamy white throat; Hollandia, rosy salmon. The foregoing are all good and inexpensive commercial varieties. C. W.

VEGETABLES AND FRUITS DEPARTMENT

GOOD TOMATOES FOR FORCING.

Please tell me what is the best tomato for forcing. C. E. S.—Wash.

Opinions differ somewhat on this point, but Comet and Lister's Prolific would be my choice, with Carter's Sunrise, Stirling Castle and Best of All as other good varieties. C. W.

RHUBARB AFTER FORCING.

What shall I do with rhubarb roots that have been forced during the winter? I want to use them again next winter. C. E. S.—Wash.

Keep your rhubarb in a frost-proof cellar until you can plant it out, usually in March or April. It will be of no use for forcing the following winter. It should have two seasons' growth to be of any value. Personally, I think the best thing to do would be to throw away the forced stock and either raise seedlings or keep dividing your clumps to give the necessary stock for forcing. C. W.

GLOBE ARTICHOKE.

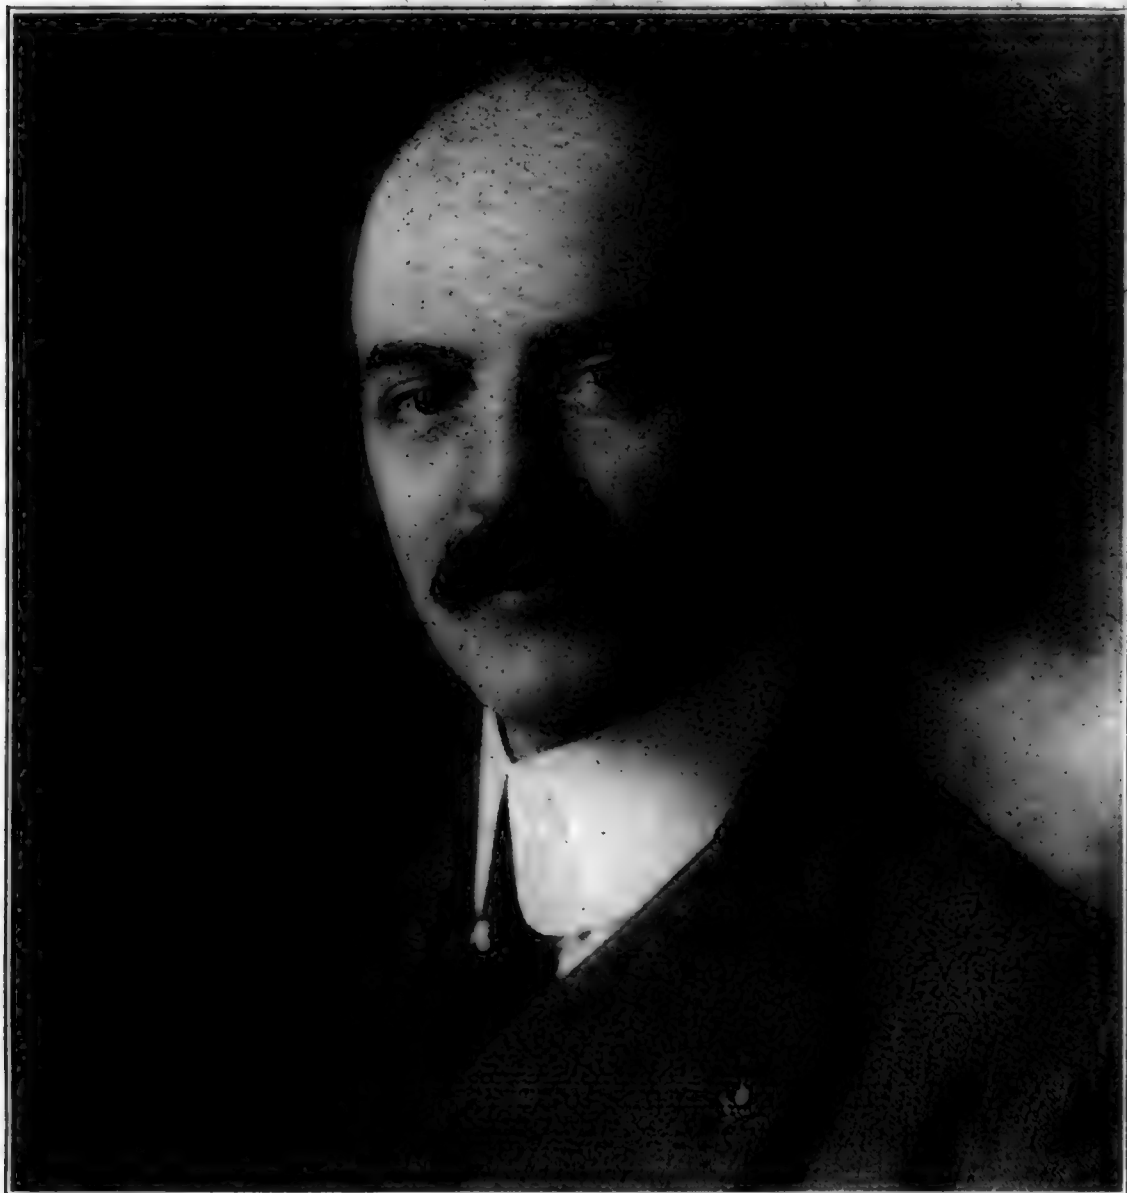

I raised some artichokes from seed this year and planted them outdoors. They were nice, strong plants, but I did not know how to handle them. I took one out of the ground this fall and found nothing but roots. Do they grow like the sweet potato, or do they have to be tied, like celery, or do they bear the second year? Should they be left out all winter, or brought in? I covered mine with straw and manure. J. P.—N. Y.

I presume you refer to globe and not Jerusalem artichokes. The latter grow tall and produce edible tubers similar to potatoes. The former produce heads which are sometimes boiled, and the bottoms of the scales are eaten with butter and salt, or baked with a butter dressing. These artichokes are not reliably hardy in the northern states, and it is better either to sow seeds annually in December, grow the seedlings on in a fairly warm house and plant out early in May from 5-inch or 6-inch pots, or lift a few old roots and store these in a cool, dry pit or cold greenhouse and divide in the spring. Plant them out a yard apart, in warm, rich soil, and the plants should produce the same summer. It is necessary to have strong stock in 5-inch or 6-inch pots at planting-out time if fruit is wanted the same season. C. W.

VIOLET SPOT.

I am sending you a violet leaf with some light-colored spots on it. Can you tell me what is the cause of this? Please let me know as soon as possible, so that, if it is a disease, I may be able to stop it. Also, please tell me what is a good fertilizer for violets that have been planted two months without any fertilizer. W. G. F. G.—Mo.

The leaf enclosed had been attacked by the disease commonly known as violet spot. The leaf appears to be from one of the single varieties. These possess much greater vigor than the doubles and are more disease-resistant. Taken in hand now, the trouble will probably not prove serious. I would advise the picking off and burning of the affected leaves and giving them a spraying twice a week on bright days with Fungine, according to the directions on the can. Keep a night temperature of 40 to 45 degrees, and, later in the season, run it as near 40 degrees as possible for a minimum. Air freely on every possible occasion. There are no days and few nights when the ventilators need to be closed.

Chemical fertilizers are not to be recommended for violets. Use some well decayed cow manure or pulverized sheep manure as a mulch, but go slowly on feeding at this dull season. Your plants would have done much better if you had incorporated a liberal coating of decayed animal manure in the soil before planting. Early in February, waterings with liquid manure would prove beneficial. C. W.

TIME TO SOW SALVIAS.

When shall I sow salvia seed to have good, bushy plants in 3½-inch pots May 1, and how much seed will be required to make sure of having about 2,000 plants? J. H. H.—Mich.

Use an ounce of seed and you will have an abundance, as salvias are of easy germination. Sow about the end of February and the plants will be of ample size by May 1. C. W.

HOW TO STORE ROSE PLANTS.

Please let me know how to store 2-year-old Killarney and Richmond rose plants which are now growing in a bench. I want to take them up and use the space for spring stock and do not want to pot them up. How shall I do this? I want to set the plants out next summer. H. A.—Ill.

The present is quite an early date to take up the rose plants intended for outdoor work. As you do not want to go to the trouble of potting them, and as it would be folly to plant them in any unheated frame or pit at this season, I would suggest that you take them up carefully, head them back well and heel them in, on a bed or bench in a greenhouse kept at 45 degrees or thereabouts. You cannot plant outdoors before April in your latitude and the plants will not be in so good a condition, of course, as those potted and kept in a somewhat warmer house. C. W.

Antirrhinums in separate colors are good sellers and also are good for the growers to plant out for cut flowers; do not neglect to sow plenty of seed. The trailing vinca is probably the most important vine for boxes and baskets, but the cheaper tradescantia exceeds it in quantity sold and should be propagated in great numbers. The geraniums first propagated should be shifted into 3-inch pots as soon as there is room for them, and into 4-inch pots a month before time for bedding out. These plants generally retail in the south for $1.50 per dozen from 4-inch pots, so that it pays to give them a little room while growing, in order to have nice, shapely plants. In the drier sections of the south, geraniums, to do well when planted out, require frequent and thorough waterings. The sales of these plants would be increased if the grower would often bring the importance of sufficient moisture to his customers' attention. Keep putting in cuttings of these until the end of the season. The late-rooted cuttings will make good stock planted out.

Vinca Rosea and Alba.

Vinca rosea and alba give more satisfaction in the south than any other bedding plants I know of. They flower continuously until cut down by frost and are not affected by long, dry spells, like most of the other bedding plants. Their glossy foliage and bright flowers command attention. The flowers are useful, too, in design work, when other kinds are not to be obtained. The plants are better when not pinched. Try a bed of each color and note their value as an advertising medium. L.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS FOR SOUTHERN FLORISTS

STARTING SPRING STOCK.

What to Do in the South.

The bedding out season starts at any time from the end of February to the middle of April, according to location. The growers in some sections will have finished planting out before Easter, while those in other sections will do their spring bedding at the time of the Easter plant sales. In the latter case it will require good management to handle the situation.

All seeds of verbenas, phlox, petunias, vincas, etc., should be sown without delay, being careful not to cover the fine seeds but merely pressing them into the soil with a board. Place the boxes of seed in a night temperature of 60 degrees, except the vincas, which require 65 degrees, and the seeds will germinate more quickly and freely than those in a temperature of 50 degrees. After the seed is well up the boxes can be moved to a cooler temperature, so that the plants will not become spindly. Prick off the young seedlings into boxes as soon as they are large enough and later pot them in 2½-inch pots, which will carry them until sold. In all these operations be sure to keep the colors of each variety separate. Probably the greater number of bedding plants are sold before they bloom, and as the customer takes the grower's word for the color, the latter should make it a matter of honor to respect this confidence.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Bedding Geraniums.

Be careful not to leave geranium cuttings in the sand too long, or it will only mean stunted plants and, possibly, bacteria after they are potted. Keep the plants on a light, sunny bench. Look them over once a week and give more space where necessary, at the same time removing decaying foliage and weeds. On early propagated plants in 2½-inch or 3-inch pots it may now be possible to get suitable cuttings. Also, if you have carried over some stock plants, a good stock of cuttings will be available, and these will root readily now that a steady bottom heat in the cutting benches can be commanded.

Schizanthus.

The schizanthus must have cool treatment from start to finish; the temperature should not be over 45 degrees at night. Never allow the plants to become potbound until they are in their flowering pots. Pinch young plants to induce a bushy habit. Use a light, rich soil, as the schizanthus is a stronger feeder. The plants from a batch of seed sown now will flower for Easter. The best variety for pot culture is S. Wisetonensis.

Poinsettias.

Do not forget to reserve an ample supply of poinsettia stock plants. These can be laid on their sides under any fairly dry benches or stored away on shelves in any frost-proof shed. They will do well below greenhouse benches. The plants can be kept perfectly dry at the root until started again in April or May. Do not dry off Euphorbia jacquiniæflora as severely as you would E. pulcherrima (the poinsettia), or the plants will be killed. It is safer to give them a little water all winter.

Lilies for Easter.

No further time should be lost in potting giganteum lilies for Easter. It is true that April 23 is a late date for the great floral festival, but there is always a tendency on the part of growers to delay potting too long when this is the case. Any lilies potted at this late date must have a temperature of 62 to 65 degrees at night from potting until flowering. Do not waste valuable time in trying to start these lilies cool. If you do so, you will spoil them, besides making them too late.

Rambler and Polyantha Roses.

Well ripened rambler and polyantha roses, especially such as have been pot-grown through the summer, can now be started in a temperature of 50 degrees; this temperature should be raised 10 degrees when the growths have started nicely. Any of the polyantha or Baby Rambler varieties can be started now, while Tausendschon will come into flower more quickly than any others of the true rambler type. Cut away all dead and weak wood and bend strong shoots around so they will break better.

Nerines and Belladonna Lilies.

Nerines and Belladonna lilies make their growth after the flowering season has passed. Both bloom much better when well potbound, and, for this reason, potting should be avoided until it is an absolute necessity. Give them a cool, airy house to make their growth in, water freely and apply liquid manure once a week in addition. In May the foliage starts to mature. When the leaves have mostly turned yellow, lay the pots on their sides where they can get a thorough baking all summer long.

Amaryllis.

Look over the plants of hybrid amaryllis and you will probably find some which are already pushing up their flower spikes. Remove such plants to a bench where they can get the benefit of some bottom heat. Before doing so, examine the drainage and repot, if necessary. Usually, however, removing some of the old surface soil and giving a top-dressing will suffice for another season. Unflowered seedlings should be kept growing continuously until they flower.

Sowing Asparagus Seed.

The present is a good time to make a sowing of both Asparagus plumosus nanus and A. Sprengeri. Use pans or flats of light, sandy soil and place in a warm, moist house to germinate.

Propagating Begonias.

If a sufficient number of leaf cuttings of Cincinnati and Lorraine begonias have not yet been placed in the cutting bench, get them in without delay. The leaves are less liable to damp off at the base and root better if broken off with a rough surface, rather than cut with a knife. A brisk bottom heat and sand through which water passes readily are necessary to successful propagation. Be sure, also, to use large and well matured leaves.

Antirrhinums.

The larger part of the first crop of antirrhinums will now be cut from the early benched plants. This does not assume that the plants will be without flowers for some time, for snapdragons planted in early August will bloom from October until the following July if given the proper treatment. Cut the flowering stems down close to the ground and let the succulent shoots starting from the base have a chance to develop. On some plants, especially seedlings, which possess greater vigor than cuttings, far more shoots appear than it is advisable to leave. Reduce these according to the class of spikes you want. If fancy stalks are desired, leave three to five to a plant. If spikes of medium quality are preferred—and these are usually more valuable to country florists—leave as many as eight or ten on each.

C. L. Baum, of Knoxville, Tenn., Director of the S. A. F.

A night temperature of 45 to 50 degrees suits snapdragons. In a higher temperature they will become weak and spindling and lacking in substance. If they are grown in shallow benches, a light mulch of well pulverized old manure will now be beneficial. Go slowly on feeding for a few weeks longer.

Where late mums have been cleared and some stock in 2½-inch or 3-inch pots is at disposal, it will pay to make a planting of snapdragons now. They will bloom well from March onward. Be sure to add some cow manure, sheep manure or fine bone to the old mum compost and give it a good spading over before planting.

BUSINESS EMBARRASMENTS.

Chatham, N. J.—The real and personal estate of Samuel Lum, who was declared bankrupt last July, was sold for $26,800 in the Bankruptcy court, at Newark, December 20. The real estate, appraised at $40,000 and consisting of the Lum homestead, greenhouses and forty acres of land, was sold to Elmer King, of Morristown, representing the creditors, for $26,050. The personal effects of the bankrupt were auctioned at $750. The claims of all the creditors, with the exception of those of three mortgagees, aggregated $39,054.

DUTCH HYACINTHS FOR EASTER.

We have about 500 Dutch hyacinths and have been asked to have them ready for Easter. Can these be potted and placed in a dry cellar until they make roots? When should they be potted? O. K. R. S.—Ia.

It is extremely late now for potting hyacinths, or, for that matter, any other Dutch bulbs. You cannot expect those planted at this late date to produce spikes of anything like the quality of those placed in the soil a couple of months ago. Pot the bulbs at once, barely covering them. Water thoroughly and place in a cool cellar; one with a moist, rather than a dry atmosphere is to be preferred. Do not store them where they will be subjected to any drying, artificial heat. The pots can be given a mulch of sand or fine coal ashes, and will need water in sufficient quantities to keep them moist at the root. When they have grown to three inches long they can be placed in the greenhouse. Allow three to four weeks from housing to flowering, in an average temperature of 50 degrees. C. W.

TREATMENT OF POINSETTIAS.

Where is the native place of the poinsettia? Can it be grown in a carnation temperature and can it be grown outside in California as a decorative plant? Do you not think that a temperature as low as 42 to 46 degrees will, in a few nights, cause them

WHO'S WHO IN THE TRADE—AND WHY

W. F. THERKILSON.

PHILADELPHIA counts herself fortunate in the acquisition of W. F. Therkildson and has been prompt to command his services along the line of his special training, turning them to bear on the general trade good. It was after years of varied experience with Storrs & Harrison Co., Painesville, O., that Mr. Therkildson was called to Philadelphia by the late W. Atlee Burpee to become that versatile advertiser's chief publicity assistant. What more natural, then, when a publicity man was needed for the important work on the National Flower Show of 1916, than that Mr. Therkildson should be chosen? That it was a wise selection Mr. Therkildson's first move made plain, for, instead of organizing a committee of florists, he secured as his assistants and advisers a publicity man from each of the big Philadelphia dailies. A stroke of genius!

to lose their foliage? My idea has been that the night temperature should be not lower than 60 to 65 degrees. I use soil composed of a heavy turf loam, with one-third cow manure, and in the potting soil I use a little sand, adding a little bone meal at the last shift, about the middle of October. I place all the old plants, or enough for stock, under a warm, dry bench and leave them there until the last of April, when I repot them and place them in a warm, light house and syringe daily, and in a few weeks a crop of cuttings can be put in sand. These I shade, watering them at least once, and sometimes twice a day. They usually root in three weeks, when I place them in 2½-inch pots and shade them a few days, until they take hold of the soil. Then I give them all the sunshine and air possible. The last batch of cuttings, taken from the beginning to the middle of August, always are the best for pans. Is this treatment proper?

E. M. S.—Ia.

Poinsettias, or Euphorbia pulcherrima, as they are called by botanists, are natives of moist, shaded parts of Mexico and Central America, often being found at considerable elevations. They were introduced into America in 1833 and sent out by Buist, of Philadelphia, as Euphorbia Poinsettiana, which would have been a good name to stick to. While poinsettias do specially well in a temperature of 60 to 65 degrees, they can be successfully grown even 10 degrees cooler. In the lower temperature, however, greater care in watering is necessary, and sometimes the plants may need more heat to develop them fully for Christmas. Your culture of poinsettias could hardly be improved. C. W.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

STOCK PLANTS.

Do not stand the chrysanthemum stock plants in pots or boxes below the benches. If wanted in the spring, a good plan is to plant them in cold-frames that can be protected and kept frost-proof. In the spring a big crop of strong cuttings will be available. If a cold house has a vacant bench, it will be an ideal place for the stock, and the nearer the light it can be, the better. A violet house suits them to perfection. There are some varieties that may have sold especially well and of which it may be desired to increase the stock. Propagation of these can be started at once, in order to work up a good batch of thrifty young plants from which to take cuttings at the proper propagating time, prior to benching. Do not overlook the single, anemone and pompon varieties. These have jumped wonderfully into favor, especially the pompons.

CHRYSANTHEMUM MRS. MORGAN.

Chrysanthemum Mrs. M. R. Morgan originated in the greenhouses of the McCallum Co., of Pittsburgh, and was named for the wife of the foreman. It was shown for the first time at Cleveland, where it attracted attention for its deep yellow color. The Morgan mum is a sport of Yellow Eaton, much deeper in color than any other sport the Eaton family thus far has developed. The McCallum concern thinks so well of the variety that it was made the principal late yellow this year and will be disseminated this season.

WHITE FLY ON PELARGONIUMS.

Will you kindly tell me the best way to get rid of white fly? Not long ago I purchased a lot of pelargoniums and found they were infested with white fly. I tried tobacco in different forms, but without success. I suppose the last resource is gas, but I am not familiar with its use. As two houses are infested, I shall have to fumigate both. One house is 22x100 and twelve feet to the ridge. The other is a lean-to, 10x60 and nine feet high at the highest point. I grow bedding stock in both houses, and I also have carnations in one house and lettuce in the other.

M. B. S.—Pa.

The only sure cure for white fly is hydrocyanic acid gas. If you want to use the gas, secure some cyanide of potassium, ninety-eight per cent pure; also some sulphuric acid. You will also need some stone jars, as the acid would eat away any metal ones. The length of the house, multiplied by the breadth and this again multiplied by the average height, will give the space in cubic feet. Select a cool evening for fumigating. Be sure all ventilators are tight. Stand the jars twenty-five or thirty feet apart, or farther apart than this if the house is narrow. Divide the materials into portions for the jars, according to the area and the number of jars to be used. For each 3,000 cubic feet use one and one-fourth ounces of cyanide, two and one-fourth ounces sulphuric acid and three and one-half ounces water. Place the water first in the jars; then add the sulphuric acid; then start at one end of the house and drop in the cyanide, wrapped in oil paper. Walk toward the exit, dropping in the cyanide as you go. Lock the door securely and allow no one to enter until morning. The gas is deadly to all human beings, as well as to all forms of animal life. The house can be entered with safety in the morning and should then be ventilated and sprayed over. Two applications may be necessary to clean out the white fly completely.

Nicotine preparations are of no avail in fighting white fly. If you do not wish to use gas, you can keep the fly pretty well in check by spraying the affected plants with Aphine or some soapy spray. Keep this up and you will soon get the pest under subjection. Direct the spray below as well as over the foliage.

SWEET PEA BUDS DROPPING.

What causes the buds on my sweet peas to blight and drop off? They are planted in raised benches in a carnation house, with a night temperature of 50 degrees. The soil is about six inches deep and contains one-fourth well decayed cow manure. The vines are about four feet high and look healthy and strong. The rows are three feet apart. The flower stems seem to develop perfectly, but the buds shrivel and drop. This is my first experience with sweet peas and any information will be appreciated.

G. I.—Ill.

Your temperature seems to be all right. Are you feeding the plants too much? An excess of nitrogen at the roots will cause the buds to fall at any season, either outdoors or indoors, and especially at this season, when temperatures are low and the sun is at a low angle. You do not say whether or not you are feeding. If you are, discontinue it now and be moderate when recommencing its use. Maintain a temperature as near 50 degrees as you can, water carefully and I think your plants will soon grow out of this trouble, which is a common one.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Christmas is again a memory, and a wonderful Christmas for the retail florists it was; the best, they tell me, in twenty years. Some of the veteran wholesalers say the same. And the plantmen? Only smiling faces and fat pocketbooks!

The supply of American Beauties was not equal to the demand. I know of one advance order by a prominent retailer for 4,000 and there were many orders for 1,000 and over. No wonder Beauties rose to $1.25 each Friday evening and later could not be found at all! Such figures as above, of course, were exceptional and $1 each may fairly be quoted as the price for the best. The rose novelties also were much in demand and 75 cents was the asking price for the longest Hadley. Hoosier Beauty and Ophelia also rose to record prices and others of the newer sorts were in wide demand. Prices for most of the roses receded perceptibly after midnight Christmas eve, at which hour the buyers for the large retail stores were much in evidence. About the bottom figure for No. 2 roses was 4 cents. This also was the low limit for carnations, which went from that up to 8 cents for the best, with an occasional sale of red at $10 per hundred. Violets were scarce again and some fine specials sold at $1.50 per hundred. The prevailing quotation, however, was $1 per hundred. The supply of sweet peas was light. Some of the cut poinsettias were enormous and sold for $5 per dozen. So also did some of the late chrysanthemums, as finely preserved stock as has been seen this season. Valley did not advance above 4 cents at any time last week. Gardenias were held at $6 per dozen. The surprise of December 24 was the drop in price of orchids. The supply was larger than expected.

Arrivals of the week were forced lilac and acacia and southern gladioli. There was an abundance of lilies, Paper Whites, Romans, stevia and mignonette.

Various Notes.

R. J. Irwin moved last week into his new home at Larchmont Manor.

The new upstairs offices of the Stumpp & Walter Co. are roomy, light and convenient. The company found additional space on the ground floor a necessity, so rapidly is its business increasing.

Thomas Langdon, of Brooklyn, one of the pioneer florists, had the misfortune to suffer blood poisoning last week and when taken to the hospital it was feared amputation of the arm would be necessary.

The successful auction season on Vesey street closed the day before Christmas, with a sale of greens.

W. E. Marshall returned from his trip through New England in time for Christmas.

January 1 the Arthur T. Boddington Co. will occupy its new store at 120 Chambers street.

Riedel & Meyer's holiday memento is useful as well as ornamental—a thermometer.

J. I. Raynor, of Guttman & Raynor, was in the city December 24 and collaborated with Mrs. Guttman in dispensing a turkey luncheon to the firm's customers. Prima Donna was the favorite rose here and Laura Weber the tiptop carnation.

Woodrow & Marketos emptied their big store of an immense stock of plants.

Joseph Heacock Co., Wyncote, Pa., is sending W. P. Ford some fine Hadley roses.

Charles Millang's Christmas evergreen branch, on Sixth avenue, was a big success. Among other sales were 500 holly trees.

Hadley was the favorite rose at P. J. Smith's.

J. J. Coan says he is "more than satisfied" with the volume of business at his new enterprise.

J. K. Allen is once more at his office daily, with the grip under foot.

Miss Rankin, manager of the House of Ferns, after a severe attack of the prevailing epidemic, recovered in time for the Christmas business.

Charles Schwake returned from his western trip, to his home at Bayside, in time for Christmas.

Frank Traendly is back at his desk, twenty pounds lighter.

J. Austin Shaw.

TOLEDO, O.

The Market.

Christmas business nearly tripled that of 1914. The unusually large supply of cut flowers was completely exhausted by 1 p. m. December 24. Long-distance telephone calls for more stock were of little avail, as business out of town was about the same as in this city. Florists took pains to note the ready sale for Beauties despite their high price. Poinsettias, however, were in the lead, and sold for from 35 cents to $1 each, and the supply was soon gone. A heavy snow the day before Christmas, with cold and snappy weather, helped to give zest to the buying of gifts, and the stores of florists seemed to be the goal of most shoppers.

Fancy baskets filled with crotons, and various decorative plants, sold well at downtown shops, as did baskets of ruscus and boxwood. Several leading florists had special sales on Christmas decorations. One florist sold more than 450 baskets, and another more than 600 wreaths of boxwood, ruscus and statice.

It was pleasing to florists to see how far beyond their expectations coöperative advertising for the holiday created attention and sales for all Christmas novelties. Never before had Toledo florists made such preparations for this holiday and their efforts were doubly rewarded. Every florist had his store decorated in original style with greens or the like; and, with a superabundance of wreaths, business was bound to come. Few graves were unmarked, and all around, in the cemeteries, boxwood and ruscus or statice and Diana protruded through the snow, producing a pleasing effect.

Various Notes.

Max Spanner had some of the most finely decorated windows of Christmas novelties to be seen. They sold well.

S. N. Peck got rid of a lot of exceptionally fine primroses and azaleas. Mr. Peck reports business better this year than during any other year since he began business forty years ago.

Harry Heinel boasts of having disposed of 1,000 potted poinsettias and 500 azaleas. Mr. Heinel, an expert in this line, was much pleased with the condition of his plants for Christmas week.

Schramm Bros., through a page ad in one of the daily papers, disposed of several hundred baskets made of ruscus, boxwood and poinsettias. The sale was held December 22 only and was a success. Mr. Schramm plans for more extensive sales on these lines for other holidays.

Metz & Bateman were snowed under with a rush of orders.

Harry Turvey, of West Toledo, received the order at Christmas for the decorating of Trinity Church.

Helen F. Patten, who had begun to wonder how she could dispose of such a quantity of cut flowers as she had ordered from local and out-of-town florists, called Detroit at noon December 24 for a greater supply. "This shows that trade was better than last Christmas by fifty per cent," Miss Patten remarked.

Mrs. J. B. Freeman reports an excellent increase of sales during 1915 over those of 1914. Mrs. Freeman, who is an artist in the arranging of flowers, was well satisfied with her holiday trade.

Bernard Schramm, a veteran florist, is seriously ill of heart trouble. Mr. Schramm was the first florist to do business in Toledo and is the grandfather of members of the firm of Schramm Bros. G. B. S.

BALTIMORE, MD.

The Market.

Last Christmas unfavorable weather played a part in curtailing sales; this year fair and unseasonably warm weather prevailed the latter part of Christmas week; the early part was cold but clear, and business in general was better than for any of several similar periods.

Stock was not overplentiful, but enough was to be had for nearly all demands. Store buyers bought heavily earlier in the week and Christmas eve saw no unusually heavy buying. The increased holiday express business delayed many shipping orders and stock that arrived after Thursday noon did not sell to as good advantage as that which arrived earlier in the week. The expected shortage in cut flowers caused the stores to push plant sales and a heavy business was done in this line. Poinsettia plants, azaleas—of which many fine ones were about—cyclamens, primulas and combination baskets made up the bulk of the sales.

Roses were in fair supply, with enough good red, but short and medium red were not too plentiful and possibly some orders on these could not be filled. Carnations, while no shortage occurred, were sold up well at good prices. Beauties moved well, as did novelties, such as Sweetheart roses, valley, cattleyas and mignonette. Peas were only fairly plentiful and sold up well. Red carnations hovered around 10 and 12 cents each, white and light pink around 8 cents, and shorts sold at 6 cents. Cut poinsettias were only in fair demand, with no large quantities on the market. Smilax and asparagus sold up well.

Various Notes.

The Hamilton Flower Shop had some effective combination baskets, in addition to an attractive window display. It had a heavy cut of roses of good quality and the Hoosier Beauty roses grown by it were hard to beat. Its cut poinsettias averaged sixteen inches across and were the finest seen this year. The company reports a heavy trade for the holidays, it having been necessary to work all through the two nights preceding Christmas.

Otto H. Guerth reports a heavy demand for designs of immortelles and prepared flowers for cemetery use.

C. E. Akehurst & Co. had a good cut of carnations for the holidays. Mrs. C. E. Akehurst is cutting some good blooms.

P. B. Welsh had a fine lot of azaleas in shape for Christmas, and easily disposed of them.

M. J. Hannigan had an exceptionally fine lot of Richmond roses in addition to a good cut of other varieties. His red sold readily at top prices.

The Leo Niessen Co. had some fine peas and a large quantity of single violets of good quality, with freesia and pussy willows that were the first seen this season.

L. H. A. Klein had a fine lot of azaleas in large and medium sizes, which he sold up well. His peas were also fine, but he did not have enough to meet demands.

The rose crop of Stevenson Bros. was in good time, their Richmond being especially fine. W. F. E.

NEWARK, N. J.

The Market.

Christmas business exceeded that of a year ago with many of the florists, and with some others was fully up to that. The weather was fair all through Christmas week and large crowds availed themselves of the opportunity to shop. There was a rush the last two days and the florists, who had planned for a good holiday business, were generally cleaned out. More money was in circulation than for a long time. Poinsettias sold fairly well. A few late chrysanthemums were in the market. They did not play much part in the total business. Demand for carnations was active, but the supply was short, owing to cloudy weather for several weeks previous to Christmas week. Potted azaleas were in great demand and their quality was excellent. Roses of good quality were fairly abundant. Easter lilies were fine and more plentiful. The supply of stevias equaled the demand. Some fine begonias were seen, but the poor keeping qualities of these flowers prevented the ordering of a large supply. A few gardenias and a fair number of orchids were in the market. Sweet peas have been in the market for several weeks, but are not yet abundant. Cyclamen and potted ferns have been in active demand.

Various Notes.

Fred P. Wolfinger, on account of illness, is on a trip to Bermuda, accompanied by Mrs. Wolfinger. A good Christmas trade was reported at Mr. Wolfinger's store.

Philips Bros. report that their Christmas trade far exceeded that of last year. They had an unusually attractive window.

Davis & Davis, wholesale growers, East Orange, have a fine lot of rooted chrysanthemum stock. They report a big demand for carnations and are cutting some good snapdragons.

Charles J. Connolly reports an active Christmas trade, including the sale of a large number of trees.

August Begerow had a striking Christmas window display—a study in red, green and white.

"An unusually fine Christmas trade, especially for azaleas," was the opinion expressed at Henry Hornecker's, in East Orange. Small trellis boxes of English ivy sold as fast as they could be prepared.

F. A. Kuehn says his Christmas business was fully fifty per cent better than that of last year.

Ernest Radany had a good Christmas business. Cyclamen and artificial wreaths were in active call.

Peter Penek used a window in a vacant store, next his flower shop, for a part of his Christmas display.

Henry Leahy, of Elizabeth, had one of the most distinctively Christmas windows ever seen in or around that city. The main feature of the exhibit was a miniature church, with its doors invitingly open and giving a good view of the illuminated interior.

Sister Helen Marie, of the order of Sisters of Charity, a teacher in St. John's parochial school, Paterson, sister of Henry Leahy, of Elizabeth, is dead. R. B. M.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

Buffalo florists are well satisfied with the results of the busy week of the year. Some of the stores had a force working day and night, so as to give all the needed attention to the orders. Stock in the first part of the week seemed to be plentiful, but it was soon found to be the reverse in almost everything.

Beauties were never better. They have been clearing every day at a good price. Other roses were sufficient for the demand early in the week, but were scarce at the end. Even white roses were all sold for more than normal prices. Of course, red roses were scarce from start to finish. Carnations were as scarce as usual for the Christmas season, selling at a good price. Red carnations were particularly scarce. Violets were much in demand, but the supply was adequate. Mignonette was plentiful and was much called for. Gardenias and orchids were more than sufficient for the demand. Funeral work cleared the Easter lilies at a good price and in some instances it was impossible to get them. The supply of valley, sweet peas and hyacinths was about equal to the demand.

Plants sold well. On account of the shortage in the azalea supply, other plants, such as begonias, camellias, ardisias, heather, poinsettias and foliage plants, sold much better than usual. There seemed to be an unusual call for boxwood and immortelle wreaths. There was no lack of greens.

Various Notes.

F. J. Baum had some excellent azalea and begonia plants, which sold like hot cakes. He is much pleased with the Christmas season of this year. In fact, the entire year proved to be a profitable one to him. A. E.

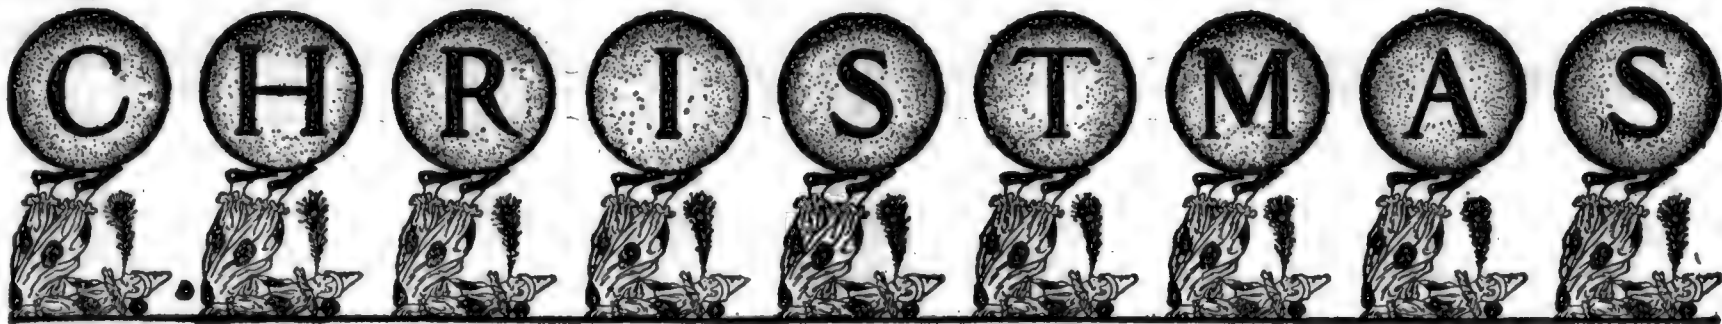

OBITUARY.

George Dobbs.

George Dobbs, founder of Dobbs & Son, of Auburn, N. Y., died December 19 at his home, 134 South Division street, Auburn, a few hours after a paralytic stroke.

The deceased was born in England in 1851 and came to this country when a boy. Early in life he showed an aptitude for gardening. In 1876 he visited England and was married. Upon his return he entered the employ of John N. May, of Summit, N. J. It was during this period that tea roses were grown for trade for the first time, in Mr. May's greenhouses. In 1893 Mr. Dobbs moved to Auburn and took over the Dunning greenhouses, on South Division street. Subsequently the house of Dobbs & Son was formed, William G. Dobbs, a son, being the junior partner.

The deceased is survived by his son, W. G. Dobbs, a member of the S. A. F.; a daughter, Mrs. William Hoag, and four sisters.

NEWS, NOTES AND COMMENTS

Cromwell, Conn.—During the recent heavy snows two greenhouses of A. N. Pierson, Inc., partly collapsed under the excessive weight, which also broke some glass in other houses.

Montgomery, Ala.—W. C. Cook, who is employed by the Rosemont Gardens, says that concern supplied sixty designs of an average value of $9 each for the recent funeral of Booker T. Washington at Tuskegee; also many cut flowers to other florists who had work for the same funeral.

Pontiac, Ill.—"A humdinger!" That's the kind of a Christmas sales period W. J. Miller & Son say they had. Although they had prepared for an active trade, it far exceeded their expectations. Their entire force had to work far into the night during the final rush. Everything was cleaned up, the total sales eclipsing those of any previous Christmas period.

Danvers, Ill.—Fire damaged the greenhouse property of Wellenreiter & Son, December 22, to the extent of $5,000, with insurance of $200. All the stock was either cooked or frozen, except that of two houses, which was saved from freezing, after hard work, by putting in small stoves. A year ago the day of the fire the boiler return pipe burst and the whole plant froze.

Beacon, N. Y.—James McCall is dead. He had been foreman for the Hammond Paint & Slug Shot Works. His body was taken to Westchester county to be buried beside that of his wife. As a young man, in 1884, Mr. McCall came to Fishkill Landing, as Beacon was formerly called, with his family. For these thirty-one years, without a break, he was an example of faithful, intelligent service.

Sioux City, Ia.—John O. Freeburg, manager of J. C. Rennison's greenhouses, says business was about twenty-five per cent over that of the previous Christmas. Poinsettia pans with ferns were the leading sellers. Cyclamens, primroses and cinerarias were in good demand. Roses and carnations were of good quality and brought fair prices. Delivery was facilitated by the mild weather.

San Antonio, Tex.—Paying $60 a month, with free use of a 3-room cottage, the position of gardener for the San Antonio arsenal will be filled by competitive examination. This examination is open to all citizens of the United States who meet the requirements. For application and examination blank J. M. Hassett, with office at the arsenal, should be addressed. No application will be accepted unless properly executed and filed with Mr. Hassett by January 15, 1916.

De Kalb, Ill.—J. L. Johnson says the 1915 Christmas trade was the largest and best the florists of this city ever had. Pot plants were in heavy demand, particularly poinsettias. The cut flowers were plentiful, but there were not too many of them by any means. As everything sold out, the trade has reason to be thankful.

Niagara Falls, N. Y.—E. A. Butler & Son had a double-page advertisement in the Journal of December 20. It was the largest florists' ad that has ever been run in a Falls paper. The Journal takes about four inches of space in its reading columns to comment on this and other features connected with the ad and the firm, which is the largest in the city.

Clifton Forge, Va.—The Alleghany Horticultural Co., Inc., has been acquired by O. C. Ports, who formerly was general manager of the company. The establishment consists of four acres and four greenhouses, each 25x50. Mr. Ports will operate his range in connection with the store at Clifton Forge. The name of the business has been changed to Clifton Forge Cut Flower & Plant Co.

Canal Dover, O.—In the words of C. Betscher, in reference to the Christmas trade, "Everything fit to sell went." Carnations were scarce but of fine quality; more of them could have been sold. Roses and violets followed in demand. Plant sales were much larger than for Christmas, 1914. They sold in this order: Cyclamens, begonias, primroses and ferns. Total sales were decidedly greater than for the similar period of 1914; prices were about the same.

Fort Smith, Ark.—"One thing nice about it was that two-thirds were cash sales, something which never happened before in my experience," remarked George Rye, in commenting on his Christmas sales. Mr. Rye carried a larger stock than he had ever carried before, but cleaned up both on plants and cut flowers. Not only that, but he had to reorder several times owing to four funerals that were held either Christmas or the Sunday following. He also had two funerals December 27.

Sedalia, Mo.—The greatest Christmas for florists in the history of this city has just passed. The Archias Floral Co. not only has had an unusually profitable holiday trade, but business throughout December has been exceptionally brisk, with as high as ten funerals in one day. The State Fair Floral Co. had a good run, its new store being a center of attraction. Holiday flowers brought fancy prices in Sedalia. Carnations were at high-water mark and scarce, retailing at $1.50 to $2.50 per dozen. Roses sold freely at $1.50 to $8 per dozen; poinsettias, $3 to $6.

Denver, Colo.—C. F. Maler is erecting a greenhouse at 3914 West Twenty-ninth avenue, at a cost of $4,000.

Colorado Springs, Colo.—William Foster, formerly associated with J. F. Wilcox & Sons, of Council Bluffs, Ia., has purchased the Broadmoor Greenhouses and moved his family here. The change was made on account of Mrs. Foster's poor health.

Zanesville, O.—C. L. Humphrey had to press two auto trucks into service to help get out deliveries during the Christmas rush. Little wrapping was needed for the stock, as the weather was mild. Mr. Humphrey says it was the biggest Christmas trade he ever has had.

Falmouth, Mass.—H. V. Lawrence issued a unique booklet for Christmas. The cover in red and gold was folded twice, so that it served as the container for two separate 8-page leaflets tied in with ribbon, one leaflet listing greens, the other cut flowers and plants, one printed in green ink, the other in red.

Minneapolis, Minn.—On the occasion of his tenth anniversary as superintendent of parks of Minneapolis, Theodore Wirth was tendered a dinner by 200 prominent citizens. The speakers eulogized Mr. Wirth for his "achievement in bringing Minneapolis to the foremost place in the world by the beauty and art of its park system." Plans for more neighborhood parks and playgrounds were made after the dinner, and $200,000 a year for ten years, to finish the improvements, was recommended by C. M. Loring, who has been styled the father of the Minneapolis park system.

Mitchell, S. D.—W. T. March, manager for The Newburys' Mitchell Nursery & Floral Co., is of an opinion contrary to that of those who consider Chrysanthemum William Turner of comparatively poor commercial value. His company had a great deal of success in growing this variety last season and disposed of most of them at from $5 to $6 a dozen, which is considered a good price hereabout. This company's November trade showed an increase of almost thirty per cent over November, 1914. It has recently completed a contract with the state of South Dakota in which it landscaped, planted and cared for the state capitol grounds for the last twelve months. "We consider this job of more than usual importance," said Manager March, "because of the advertising we derived in having it known that in filling the contract we planted 6,000 trees and shrubs, comprising about 300 varieties; something unusual for this part of the country."

Thirty-second annual convention, Houston, Texas, August 15 to 18, 1916.

WHAT can be done to restore the violet to its old-time popularity as a corsage flower? Will someone suggest a method?

WITH those who have learned to do Hadley and Hoosier Beauty well there seem to be no more popular roses. The money is in knowing how.

ONE by one buyers are learning that rarely is the best stock offered with the lowest price. There are plenty of people who stand ready to pay for quality.

THERE will not be many retail florists who will succeed in getting through 1916 without a motor for delivery. Indeed, there is no other line of business in which the automobile has been so generally adopted.

THERE is one legitimate and sure way of holding competition in check. It is to give such good stock and such good service at such reasonable rates that competition can make no headway against your trilogy.

A PRIORI.

Given a definite factor as cause, the effect is fairly certain. At least it is so in publishing. Make the publication worth while from a reader's point of view and at the same time it becomes of real value to advertisers.

The cause; the reader:

Enclosed is $1 for The Review another year. It is the best invested dollar in the business. —Fugelberg & Flister, Oshkosh, Wis., December 20, 1915.

The result; the advertiser:

I want to thank you for the fine business The Review has brought me this year.—F. E. Selkregg, North East, Pa., December 20, 1915.

HONORABLE MENTION.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper. Among those who have this week enrolled themselves for more than one year in advance are:

TWO YEARS.

Hastings, W. E., South Lyon, Mich.
Munsen, J., Falmouth, Mass.
Milne, Alex., Fairbury, Ill.
Tobler, H., Traverse City, Mich.
Ainsworth, F. B., Bolton Landing, N. Y.

The Review stops coming when the subscription runs out. The green notice with the last copy tells the story; no bills are run up; no duns are sent.

CHRISTMAS A RECORD.

The Christmas trade reports from the leading cities, which occupy so large a part of this issue of The Review, show that the Christmas business in all parts of the country has established a new high record. Indeed, it seems a conservative statement that the florists of the United States did a larger volume of business last week than in any other week in the history of the trade.

The best part of the showing is that the good business was so general; that all departments of the trade obtained the benefit of a demand that was so strong as to clean up practically everything in sight.

Everybody is satisfied; yes, more than satisfied, delighted!

THE CHRISTMAS PLANTS.

The plantsmen have every reason to be pleased with the Christmas business. Not only did the growers sell out more closely than seemed possible, in view of the extremely large production, but the retailers who bought the stock also cleaned up in a wonderful way, assuring their willingness to take hold again when the time comes.

Reports show the cyclamen to have been the most popular as well as the most abundant plant; it was the season's best seller. The primula was second choice, but not in large supply. Azaleas were more numerous than would have been expected in view of the late arrival of many shipments. They sold well, but not so well as the smaller and less expensive plants. Poinsettias were largely used in made-up baskets, but by themselves had to be sold to buyers who seemed somewhat reluctant to take them. The flowering plant that required most pushing was the begonia, from which an increasing number of buyers hold aloof. While the call was first for blooming plants, large quantities of ferns were sold.

ARE YOU BUSY?

We wouldn't give a hoot about the government statistics except that when other people have good business we florists get our share. So here goes:

The greatest prosperity message ever recorded was issued last week when the Department of Agriculture at Washington made public the revised crop reports. Never before in the history of the country have Uncle Sam's harvests reached such enormous figures, both as to production and value, as those of the 1915 garnering. Based on prices paid farmers December 1, the total value of the leading farm products reaches the astounding figure, $5,280,000,000. This exceeds last year's record yield by $415,000,000 and is greater than the average value of crops during the five-year period 1909 to 1913 by $615,000,000.

The value of the 1915 crops as compared with those of last year follow:

Crop	1915	1914
Corn	$1,756,000,000	$1,722,000,000
Winter wheat.....	622,000,000	676,000,000
Spring wheat.....	308,000,000	203,000,000
Oats	556,000,000	449,000,000
Barley	122,000,000	106,000,000
Rye	41,000,000	37,000,000
Flax	24,000,000	10,000,000
Potatoes	221,000,000	198,000,000
Hay	912,000,000	779,000,000
Tobacco	96,000,000	101,000,000
Cotton	602,000,000	525,000,000

Totals

$5,280,000,000 $4,865,000,000

And last week imports set a new high record for the period since Europe went to war, while exports also surpassed any that have gone before, so that the balance of trade in our favor was the largest yet known. Here are the figures:

Exports	$98,408,000
Imports	38,057,000

Balance due U. S. 60,351,000

Let us hope times don't get much better or people may be too busy to buy flowers.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

As a fitting climax to what has undoubtedly been the best December in several years, the Christmas business proved to be the largest in the history of the Chicago market. This statement is true, not only with reference to growers and wholesalers, but applies with equal force to retailers. As nearly as can be ascertained at this early date, there were few retail establishments that did not make a clean sweep of all stock. Some of them were obliged to send buyers to the market repeatedly, both on Christmas day and the day following, while December 27 found them all on the market again hunting for stock.

In striking contrast to the conditions that prevailed a year ago, there was no oversupply of stock in any line, while in carnations it was almost unprecedentedly short for this season of the year. Under conditions such as these, it was to be expected that many would find their wants unsatisfied. But it is safe to say that in the large majority of cases those who found themselves unable to secure stock in certain lines, and stock of but indifferent quality in other lines, were the ones who make a practice of not sending in their orders until the eleventh hour. They invariably suffer when the market is stiff.

The supply of Beauties was, perhaps, a trifle short of normal and the demand was strong. Stock, however, had to be of first-class quality to sell. Fortunately, the greater part of that on the market could qualify without difficulty. Eastern Beauties were handled in quantity by two of the wholesale houses.

Contrary to the expectations of many, the supply of roses was not more than sufficient to meet the demand, and in some grades it could not do this. Short-stemmed stock in particular was not plentiful enough to go around. As a matter of course, the Christmas demand was almost exclusively for the colored varieties, Russell, Milady, Richmond and Killarney being in particular favor, but owing to the epidemic of pneumonia now raging throughout this part of the country, funeral work has been heavy enough to take care of a large proportion of the white stock received.

The extreme shortage of carnations had much to do with the way stock in general cleared. This shortage was so pronounced that it cannot well be said that this or that variety was most in demand, for, as a matter of fact, during the last week the demand was for carnations without regard to variety or color. Even this modest call, however, was of little avail as Christmas drew near. Every wholesaler knew long before the rush began that carnations were sure to be short and his great concern was to take care of his regular customers. To help do this the wholesalers urged their patrons to order principally other stock.

Violets, both double and single, cleared easily. Some houses report doubles as in the lead; others report singles. The demand for poinsettias was sufficient to handle the supply, which was not heavy, and all stock was cleared by Christmas. Orders for sweet peas were generally cut during the last days of the rush, as the supply was insufficient to meet the demand. Valley cleared daily. Although a week ago Easter lilies were moved with difficulty, they cleared without trouble during the two or three days preceding Christmas. Callas, too, sold fairly well. Mignonette and stevia moved satisfactorily. Paper Whites fell short of the demand. Romans cleared. Though in good supply, pansies cleared nicely.

Greens moved fairly well, as a matter of course, but when viewed in the light of the cut flower and plant sales, the quantity disposed of does not quite reach expectations. Adiantum alone seemed to meet with a demand commensurate to the occasion.

C. L. Washburn, of Bassett & Washburn, who says New Year's orders in large numbers are being booked. He believes there will be no surplus of stock, unless it be in the white flowers. Although they had a good cut of Belle Washburn, he says they could not fill more than one-quarter of the orders for it. Hugh Woel, one of the stand-bys in this establishment, is confined to his home with the grip.

It is not so many years ago that Easter was the big day of the year, so it will be interesting to note that the E. C. Amling Co. did sixty-five per cent more business for Christmas than for last Easter.

The street floor store at 211 North State street, between Lake and South Water streets, now is headquarters for A. Henderson & Co. The move is significant because of the opportunity it presents of entering the retail field. It is possible "Henderson's Seeds and Plants" now may become a household phrase among north-siders.

Richmond was largely responsible for the record business at Peter Reinberg's, where, it is said, 1,200 boxes were shipped out last week. The store was open practically continuously from Wednesday morning to Saturday noon. Manager Felix Reichling did not go home for four nights.

The many friends of Mrs. Charles W. McKellar will learn with regret she did not have a merry Christmas, having been attacked the day before by a severe case of the grip.

That Christmas week gave his firm a total of sales nearly twenty per cent ahead of the best previous record, with the same area of glass, N. J. Wiator credits to a fine crop of Beauties. Mr. Wiator says he is having the Beauties left on the plants to develop quite a little more than has been the custom in this market and believes the retailers thereby get best results with the stock.

The house of Kennicott Bros. Co. celebrates the rounding out of its thirty-second year this winter. The celebration is most opportune, according to H. B. Kennicott, for last week was the best week in the best December of the best year the house has enjoyed in its long existence. Surely, this is saying much. Mrs. Flint Kennicott and her daughter, mother and sister of H. B. Kennicott, have completed arrangements to leave during the second week in January for the Kennicott winter home in Florida.

In the opinion of W. J. Keimel, of Wendland & Keimel, Elmhurst, the last three months of 1915 were as good as the first nine months put together. If this can be accepted as any criterion of what is to come, says Mr. Keimel, we may expect 1916 to average at least fifty per cent better than this year.

A report comes from Charles A. Johnson, 3205 Fullerton avenue, of a complete Christmas clean-up. He not only disposed of all stock purchased for the occasion, but succeeded in selling a quantity of accessories held over from Christmas a year ago.

This has proved, not only the best December the Chicago Flower Growers' Association has had, but the best month in its whole experience, according to Manager Paul Klingsporn.

Miss Anna O'Neil, bookkeeper for George Reinberg, has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of her father by pneumonia just before Christmas. Manager Robert Northam's little daughter is slowly recovering from a siege of scarlet fever. Frank Hagen has been home for several days, suffering with the grip.

First prize for Christmas increase probably goes to Erne & Klingel, who say their sales last week were a little more than double those of the same week in 1914.

The greatly increased volume of Christmas business enjoyed by Sinner Bros., according to John Sinner, has more than justified their judgment in the selection of new street floor quarters.

A splendid crop of cattleyas helped W. J. LaGrotta to an exceptionally good Christmas business at the A. McAdams stand on Kimball avenue.

Arrangements have been made by Allie Zech and Mathias Mann, of Zech & Mann, to attend the annual convention and exhibition of the American Carnation Society, to be held in St. Louis, January 26 and 27.

Music and flowers always have been considered a fitting combination, so W. J. Keimel and John Michelsen told Santa Claus to leave at their homes one of those fine new jewel point phonographs and an outfit of records. Santa Claus gave his usual prompt and courteous attention to the order.

After a fortnight spent in assisting in the holiday rushes of Pyfer & Olsem and A. T. Pyfer & Co., H. E. Philpott is on his way home to Winnipeg for New Year's.

J. B. Deamud came from New York to spend Christmas.

At the Emil Buettner establishment at Park Ridge, lily bulbs that have spent nearly three months in cold storage are being potted up this week in preparation for the annual Easter crop.

The Buettner lilies always are good, never late and never too early. Foreman Earl, who has been on the job twenty-seven years, knows how to get the whole batch ready to cut at one time.

In connection with the construction of a unique community building at Sheridan road and Grace street, to cost over $400,000, Albert Fuchs, well known former florist, has arranged with the Hibernian bank for a loan of $290,000 for ten years at five and one-half per cent.

Record has been made of the transfer by Joseph Trinz, former florist, to the North Edgewater Amusement Co., of the theater property in Broadway near Granville avenue, for an indicated consideration of $120,000, subject to an incumbrance of $100,000.

That good may be derived from a mistake has been discovered by Philip Schupp, manager of the J. A. Budlong wholesale house. December 23 a shipment of carnations, consisting of Enchantress, Perfection and Ward, left the house for a point in a neighboring state. By some inadvertence the box was missent and returned December 28. When the box was opened the flowers were in excellent condition, stiff and of good color. Mr. Schupp says that it pleased him to see how well his stock had traveled.

The opening of the new year will probably find Miss Agatha Greeley in her accustomed place in the office of the John Kruchten Co., where she has been greatly missed. This company reports a most gratifying Christmas business.

C. B. Le Mer, of Simpson's Flower Shop, 3656 Ogden avenue, went home Christmas with an attack of the grip, but the rush of business became so great the day following that he was obliged to forget his ills and lend a hand.

Speaking of high Christmas prices, Joseph Foerster, of Kyle & Foerster, says he can remember when there were more Beauty orders than could be filled at $1.50 per flower.

Work was started December 27 on a big boarding house, 20x80 feet, being erected by the American Greenhouse Mfg. Co., to accommodate its workmen engaged in building the new Albert F. Amling Co. greenhouses at Maywood. This temporary boarding house will contain beds for forty men and eating room for fifty. To make it homelike, it will be heated and electric lighted. A cook and two assistants have been engaged. On the afternoon preceding Christmas the last post for the new houses was set. The constructors are to be congratulated on this, for it looks like a speed record, as there are about 700 of these steel posts for the nine houses, 44x550 feet. These were made and set in sixteen days after work was started. Work on the superstructure was commenced December 27. There are now 200 tons of steel on the site.

A forty per cent increase in the volume of this year's Christmas business over that of last year is reported by O. Johnson, of the Batavia Greenhouse Co.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Christmas Market.

It was not a white Christmas. It came near being one, though, so nearly so that the children got a little sledding the day after. That it was not a white Christmas was a great blessing to the workers, for it made delivery easy. Besides, there was so much warmth in the air that little wrapping was needed. It was an old-time Christmas—one of the kind that seemed unlikely to return. Nobody thought of whether plants or cut flowers sold best, of what was in oversupply or what dragged. Everybody had just as much to do as he could possibly manage; he did it and it was a great Christmas. Everything sold at satisfactory prices. That is the big, broad way of putting it. A Christmas that was equal to anything that we have ever had, with a little added. There is the truth in a nutshell. The weather during the days preceding Christmas was remarkably favorable: Clear and cold without being severe. It became a good deal warmer on the day before Christmas, but that made no difference. The usual dullness that precedes a holiday was not noticed in the cut flower market this time. There was no accumulation of flowers on Wednesday or Thursday before Christmas, the heavy shipping days. The out-of-town orders kept the flowers moving until the city demand started. The city orders kept up throughout Christmas eve and well into Christmas morning, an unusual occurrence. The result was that, barring slight weaknesses here and there, the market was stronger at the close than at any time during the active period.

Roses formed something like one-half of the total volume of business done at Christmas. Beauties sold freely at $9 to $10 per dozen; $75 per hundred for the specials. The medium and shorter grades were better represented than usual. Mrs. Charles Russell brought from $40 to $50 per hundred in limited quantity. The stock from some growers brought from $20 to $30 per hundred for the best. There was a fair supply of the lower grades, but their quality was not good. Prima Donna brought $20, $30 and $40 per hundred in small quantities. Richmond was the leading red rose. The price was from $30 to $35 for the specials, with the medium grades at $12, $15, $20 and $25 per hundred in most active demand. Good judges thought that red roses did not command so strong support as in former years. Hadley, though popular, was not an important factor. Killarney was the leading pink rose. The prices ruled lower than formerly, $6 to $12 being the popular prices for the salable grades, ranging from short through medium to long. A little fancy stock well finished brought $15 per hundred, while some specials from Roelofs and from Yardley brought $20. White Killarney sold rather better than usual this season, but did not bring the high price of Killarneys. Ophelia and Sunburst did well at from $6 to $15, while Ward was in favor from $6 to $12. Maryland was popular at about the Killarney figures, though less plentiful.

Carnations were in rather smaller supply than usual, the reds especially so. This color brought from $10 to $15 per hundred, most of them going at $12. The best pink and white varieties brought $8 per hundred—some a little less, a few a little more. The carnation market weakened on Christmas eve in the face of increased receipts that arrived late.

Violets brought from $10 to $15 per thousand. The fancy singles had the preference over the New York-grown Marie Louise, with many buyers. The lateness in arrival of the Hudson river violets interfered with their disposal. Valley was short of the demand, so short that had the conditions been known in time the price would have been $5 straight rather than $4, with a little at $5. Heavy receipts of Cattleya Percivaliana broke the orchid market at the approach of Christmas eve. The price had been $9 per dozen for Trianae, $6 to $7.50 per dozen for Percivaliana, but on that day it went down, with no sales. Cypripediums were active at $12.50 to $15. There were some vandas at $20 and a few Dendrobium formosum at $50. The gardenia supply, though large, was badly managed; orders were refused early in the week that could have been filled had the cut been correctly gauged. When the flow-ers came in at the last moment the market was over; the price was $6 per dozen. Easter lilies were almost as plentiful and quite as popular as those at an old-fashioned Easter. varieties, in all colors, were popular at from $2.50 to $3 for the former and $1.50 to $2 for the latter. Chrysanthemums and bouvardia were rather well finished. Stevia was in heavy supply. Snapdragon was well liked at from 75 cents to $2 per dozen in long-stemmed flowers. Paper Whites, mignonette, daisies and narcissi, the two latter in yellow, were eagerly taken. Callas advanced to $2.50 per dozen, occasionally making $3. Poinsettias were marketed in large numbers at from $1.50 to $3 per dozen; it took fine stock to bring high prices. There seemed to be rather more demand than usual at the holiday for asparagus and for smilax.

Christmas Plants.

The improvement in strain and in culture has placed the cyclamen at the head of the list of Christmas plants. The demand for this variety of flowering plant was extraordinary; the quantity sold was simply enormous. Poinsettias and the various types of begonias came next, while there were plenty of azaleas and primulas to lend variety. Berried plants and oranges of the Otaheite variety were in much favor. Brightly colored foliage plants, like crotons and dracenas, had a great run, especially the crotons. Ferns were responsible for heavy trading. The specimen and the basket sizes were preferred to the medium-sized plants. The plants suitable for making up in hampers, vases, jardinières and baskets were in strong demand. Taken all in all, the plant business was most satisfactory both to the growers and to the retailers.

The Serious Side.

There was one unfortunate feature of the cut flower business at Christmas that cast a shadow over the general satisfaction. This was the delay in transit that caused a number of orders to be lost. They arrived too late. Most of these orders were shipped December 22 and most of them should have reached their destination at some time December

23. That they failed to do so was in most cases due to the congestion caused by heavy Christmas traffic. The blame is placed on the Pennsylvania railroad for its failure to give the Adams Express Co. sufficient cars to move its shipments on time.

So serious is this menace to the development of the cut flower business that it is suggested that the S. A. F. should take up the matter. This would be simple: The shipper, with the backing of the society, would notify the express company at holiday season of the number and destination of perishable packages. The company would detail men to push these packages through ahead of those that were not perishable and thus save thousands of dollars.

The Market Since Christmas.

There is a much healthier tone in the market at present than is often seen during the Christmas holidays. There is a fair demand with only a moderate supply of flowers. Prices are a little lower than at Christmas, but not nearly so low as might be expected. Medium grade roses and carnations have held up well.

Various Notes.

The M. Rice Co. entertained its masculine employees at dinner at the Bingham House on the evening of December 29. The occasion was the twenty-eighth anniversary of the company's business life. There were speeches and a jolly good time, followed by a visit to a theater.

John W. McIntyre is buying for J. J. Habermehl's Sons.

The sad announcement is made of the death of W. W. Foster, brother-in-law of Samuel S. Pennock, which occurred last week at Westerly, R. I.

Robert A. Craig says that his company's Christmas plant business was the largest in its history—larger even than at Easter.

James Verner, of Garrettford, has torn down his old range of four houses, preparatory to moving it to the new range on his six and one-half acres.

Paul Berkowitz says that the demand for supplies surpassed anything ever experienced by his house.

Emile F. Lieker, of Lansdowne, has been sending heavy shipments of well grown lilies to the Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. Phil.

The Holiday Business.

The "day after" leaves everyone looking rather jaded but nevertheless wearing "the smile that won't come off." No one had any time to eat or sleep properly for three or four days, and the stock certainly did move during that period. It was a novel sight to see old grocery wagons, hardware wagons and, in at least one case, an oil wagon, livery facilities simply could not do the work, even though there was more advance buying this season than I have ever seen before. The stock in most cases was moved to the stores on Tuesday, when the delivery of early orders began. Wednesday was a rush from morning until night and many of the help did not go to sleep until morning. Thursday and Friday were the big days. Every retailer was well prepared for the heavy business and, aside from cut flowers, there was no shortage of stock. By noon December 24 roses became scarce in most of the stores and carnations were about sold out.

Begonias were not so numerous as formerly, some of the largest growers having discarded them entirely. Azaleas were plentiful, but did not sell so well as cyclamens. The latter were plentiful and, in general, were of exceptional quality. Many of the best cyclamens sold at $2 and up. Poinsettias were plentiful and sold well, but they were not cleaned up. Still, no one can complain, for there were not so many of them left over that they cannot be disposed of later. One feature this Christmas was the small number of made-up baskets as compared with recent years. Another thing that was noticeable in all of the stores was the large number of men employed for the rush. Usually girls have been employed, but this year men were the rule.

Various Notes.

The Hillcrest School Farm was somewhat disappointed in the results of Christmas, having sold a few home-grown hyacinth bulbs to be in bloom for the holidays. Some of the growers had them in good shape, while others were a week too late. As the matter stands, they cannot be sure whether Tennessee-grown hyacinths will make Christmas or not.

McIntyre Bros. had their large plant sales house filled to overflowing a week before Christmas, making the best display of plants I have ever seen in the city. It pays to have a house for this purpose where it can be erected in connection with a retail store. This concern's roses were exceptionally good, especially Hoosier Beauty. They sold this rose on 4-foot stems and cut more than 20,000 carnations for Christmas week.

The Joy Floral Co. had two houses full of the best cyclamens ever grown in Nashville. There was the usual showing of high-grade poinsettias and the American Beauty roses on display were fully up to requirements. The Ophelia rose was another strong feature with this company. In spite of an exceptionally heavy supply, the carnations and roses were sold out long before the holiday business closed.

Geny Bros. were strong on azaleas and roses. Azaleas were the feature of their business and they certainly moved them easily. Leo Geny said that they never had a better cut of high-grade roses for the holiday trade than this year and that they had to wire for more before the Christmas trade was over.

Haury & Sons had a good run of business as a swan song at the old stand. They will move this week to what appears to be a better location.

J. F. Corbett cleaned up every cut flower and most of his pot plants two days before Christmas. He sold them mostly at wholesale. F. B.

The Market.

This Christmas goes on record as the best the trade ever had. Everyone has a report of an increase in sales, both wholesalers and retailers. Pot plants brought a good price. There was small demand for pot plants of the 25, 35 and 50-cent stock, which had a big run last year. Plants at 75 cents and up had the heaviest call and plants at from $2 to $4 were the favorites. It is hard to say what pot plant was the most popular; cyclamens, azaleas and begonias all were cleaned up. Poinsettias were a little slow, but they were bought up quite closely toward Christmas day. There is a report that the growers have increased their pot plant space this fall about one-third over that of last year.

There was a large supply of cut flowers on the market and all were cleaned up at a favorable price. As a whole, stock of all kinds was good and fresh, except that there were a few pickled carnations which brought only a low price. The delivery service was interfered with somewhat by the three inches of snow that fell early on the morning of December 24. With the thermometer at 36 degrees all day, plants required little wrapping. One thing the retailers had to be thankful for this year was the early delivery. One-third of the orders were delivered December 23, which has never before happened in this city. One reason for this was that a great many people went out of the city and took plants or cut flowers with them, and a great many cut flowers and plants went to sick people. There was too much holly in this market, although a fair price was obtained for each case. Several cars more Christmas trees could have been sold. Holly wreaths sold well and were all cleaned up. The red frieze wreaths sold well, more than twice the amount of last year.

Various Notes.

Samuel Murray had a fine Christmas business and sold more baskets of cut flowers and pot plants than in any previous year, especially orchid baskets, which went better than was anticipated. Begonias sold well.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. had about one-third more pot plants than ever before and all were sold. The cut flowers were plentiful, but were cleaned up before noon.

Arthur Newell reports an increase in the sale of pot plants, while cut flowers went about the same, or a little better than last year. He says the new, large delivery car is the one that gets orders out in good time and that complaints about time of delivery are unheard of.

The Geo. M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. had a fine run on all lines of stock. A slight increase was noted all the way around. Funeral work made them hustle to get it out and attend to Christmas orders at the same time. Cyclamens and azaleas were the main pot plants with them.

The Alpha Floral Co. reports a twenty-five per cent increase in the Christmas business. Both the delivery and sales forces were increased to take care of the orders.

Miss Lou Boggess had a fine line of basket arrangements and all were sold. Miss Jennie Murray reports that she had all the business she could attend to and was glad to see Christmas night come.

W. J. Barnes had a busy week. The first of the week he made a large blanket of violets and stevia. His Christmas trade was the best he ever had, and he had a fine lot of pot plants to do the business. All cyclamens sold out quickly, some of the plants having as high as forty blooms on them.

Edward Humfeld also had a busy week. He put out a design in which he used over 300 orchids. Azaleas were the chief seller with him. Basket work was more in demand than last year.

J. Austin had a good run on the luminosa type of begonias. He had a fine lot of them in 5-inch pots and they sold themselves. A big business was done at the greenhouses as well as at the store.

Mrs. T. A. Moseley reports that the $1 to $3 plants were the chief sellers with her.

W. J. B.

FORT WAYNE, IND.

The Market.

A beautiful white Christmas, with ten inches of snow, and the thermometer around the freezing point, describes the holiday we enjoyed in this locality. I say "enjoyed" advisedly, for nothing could have contributed to our Christmas business so much as the Christmas spirit the snow brought with it on Christmas eve, and the facility and absence of anxiety caused by the moderate temperature in delivering flowers and plant orders. Business was lively a full week before Christmas. People were never known to have done their Christmas shopping in the flower stores so early. This eliminated much of the rush of the last day or two.

The general opinion expressed of the Christmas business is "The best for years." After this profitable holiday trade even the most pessimistic of florists must acknowledge the great improvement of conditions over the last year and a half of apparent depression. While there was a record sale of plants for the holiday, the cut flower business was enormous. With the exception of red carnations and red roses, in which supply was just equal to the demand, there was a good assortment of all kinds and varieties of flowers. Roses outdid every other flower in popularity, especially the Shawyer, Richmond, Rhea Reid and Russell varieties.

American Beauties were exceedingly high and Russell roses in many instances were sold in their stead at more reasonable prices and in greater quantities than Beauties could have been sold, thereby benefiting the local growers of this magnificent rose—Beauties are shipped in. Carnations met with a fine demand and the variety boxes were popular. Corsage work has been exceptionally heavy the last year; especially was it so before Christmas, as there were several large receptions and dances. Violets were in great demand for these, and brought $4 per hundred. Valley and orchids met with a heavy call and were plentiful. Sweet peas, rose buds, hyacinths and swainsona were heavily in demand for corsages.

In the plant trade azaleas, cyclamens and poinsettias took the lead, although there was a big demand for Scotch heather plants, the French variety of Erica Japonica, Glory of Cincinnati begonias, primulas, hyacinths, Jerusalem cherries and Dutch holly. Foliage plants, crotons, ferns and small palms sold extremely well. In Christmas greens many cases of southern smilax, holly, mistletoe, boxwood and large quantities of heather and ruscus were sold. Wreaths were as popular as ever, and baskets of Christmas greens sold like hot cakes. Altogether it was an unusually satisfactory Christmas, and the florists are tired but happy.

Various Notes.

Mrs. Cecil Max, of Mobile, Ala., is spending the holidays here, the guest of her father, Judge W. J. Vesey. The W. J. & M. S. Vesey greenhouses had a rushing Christmas in both the wholesale and retail departments. Over 1,000 orchids were cut from these houses, in the Cattleya Trianae and Cattleya Percivaliana varieties. Their fine lot of roses were Shawyer, Richmond and Sunburst. Carnations were also plentiful in all colors. In the retail department corsage work was in great demand. The plant trade in poinsettias, Cincinnati begonias, cyclamens and baskets was exceptionally good.

The Doswell Floral Co. reports a fine Christmas trade at both stores, averaging far above the receipts for last year. It was completely sold out of plants, and its stock embraced many hundreds of cyclamens, begonias and poinsettias. The corsage work was unusually heavy.

Its new Overland gave excellent service.

The Flick Floral Co. reports a big Christmas cut flower trade. Roses were in enormous demand, and violets, valley, orchids and the finer flowers sold well. The Shawyer, Sunburst, Killarney and Richmond roses from the Flick greenhouses were handsome specimens, and brought record prices. The demand for corsages was a big item, and the plant trade, especially in azaleas and cyclamens, was strikingly active.

The greenhouses of Frank Knecht & Co. produced some handsome Russell and Shawyer roses for the holiday trade, the Russell roses, in many instances, far surpassing the Beauties.

D. W. Bitner, of the south side, had a fine Christmas plant trade, his cyclamens, especially, selling well.

Edgar Wenninghoff had a handsome window display of artificial Christmas flowers, such as Diana grass, etc. He reports a fine business.

Herbert Zur Muhlen had an excellent trade in cut flowers and plants and a fair amount of corsage work.

Markey Bros. had a fine display of Christmas plants in their show windows, and had a satisfactory Christmas trade.

R. F.

ST. LOUIS.

The Christmas Trade.

The Christmas business of 1915 may be recorded as the most satisfactory of recent years. Some of the leading florists say it went beyond expectations. The weather was splendid up to December 24, when a heavy snow storm set in. This caught many retailers with deliveries to make and called for considerable wrapping of packages.

The demand for plants far exceeded the call for cut flowers, and brightly colored plants, such as poinsettias, Lorraine begonias and azaleas, had first call. Fruited orange and dwarf holly trees had a big demand. Fine holly was plentiful; ground pine sold well and mistletoe was exceptionally fine. Large wreaths made of red frieze had the greater call. These seem to have replaced the usual holly wreath in many of the fashionable homes. The demand for small-sized wreaths for automobiles far exceeded the supply.

The cut flowers had a big demand. Stock of all kinds was scarce and prices high. Everybody wanted carnations, but the supply was far short of the demand. The carnations, however, were fine and some made $10 per hundred. Some extra fancy red brought $12 per hundred. Roses were fine and equal in supply to the demand. Some good Russell, Hoosier Beauty, Hadley, Ward and Ophelia were seen and a splendid lot of Killarney were brought to this market. Only a limited number of home-grown violets came in, but most retailers were well supplied with these direct from California. These arrived in splendid condition and when rebunched brought good prices. Bulbous stock came in for quite a demand. Extra fine Paper Whites were plentiful. Valley sold well at its usual price; some extra fancy, however, brought $1 more per hundred. These, with a good supply of lilies, composed the bulb stock that arrived for Christmas. Romans for the first time in years were absent. Sweet peas had an unusually large demand at high prices. Cut poinsettias sold readily at $3 per dozen. There was the usual good supply of greens. Asparagus had the greatest demand and adiantum also sold well.

The high prices asked for cut stock caused many of the retailers to push plants, which will continue to be done as long as the high prices prevail for the holidays. Retailers protested when the wholesalers announced they would close Saturday noon and not open until Monday morning, as many were sold out Christmas day and were caught short on Sunday.

Christmas Notes.

Among the west end florists, the show houses of F. C. Weber, Kalisch Bros. Floral Co., F. H. Weber, Sanders and Young were all cleaned out by noon Christmas day. They say it was the best plant Christmas in years, with poinsettias leading, though anything choice sold rapidly.

George Waldbart and the Ayres Floral Co., on Grand avenue, report being cleaned out completely, while Windler, Bergstermann, Beyer and Schoenle say they had all they could possibly handle during the last three days.

The Bentzen Floral Co. and the Mullanphy Florists report extraordinary business in all lines.

Miss Neuman reports a big holiday trade, especially in plants.

Ostertag Bros. said: "We had all we could attend to all the week."

The C. Young & Sons Co. had a grand display of stock and report plenty of business.

Grimm & Gorly, Mullanphy and the Riessen Floral Co., downtown retailers, say this was surely one of the best Christmases in years, notwithstanding the big snow storm December 24, which caused many to shop nearer home. They look forward to a good business for New Year's.

Various Notes.

Prof. H. C. Irish, vice-president of the Missouri State Horticultural Society, is a busy man these days, making preparations for the meeting of the society to be held January 12 to 14, at the Planters' hotel. Programs have been mailed to all florists. January 13 will be Florists' day. Jules Bourdet, Adolph Jaenicke, W. W. Ohlweiler and Frank A. Weber will read papers that day.

Carl Doerflinger, gardener for James T. Keller, Overland, Mo., has his new conservatory, recently completed by the Robert Thomson Co., stocked with decorative and blooming plants.

The County Growers' Association will hold its new year meeting January 5 at the Eleven Mile House. Secretary Joseph Deutschmann says there will be a general review of the Christmas business. Vice-president Edwards will preside over the meeting in the absence of President Ude, Jr., who is in Florida.

Mrs. Jules Bourdet wishes, through The Review, to thank all the florists who donated plants and cut flowers to the recent French bazaar held at Dreamland. The sale of these donations greatly increased the funds of the relief association.

J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, Ill., vice-president of the American Carnation Society and chairman of the local executive committee, says his committee will hold weekly meetings until the opening of the Carnation Society's convention, January 26. W. J. Pilcher's membership committee and Carl

BOSTON.

The Christmas Market.

Christmas trade was a surprise to everyone, and a pleasant surprise at that. I have failed to find a solitary grower, retailer or wholesaler who does not report splendid trade, and in practically every case far ahead of all previous records. The week ending December 18 was decidedly dull, but Christmas week started in with improved buying and, as the great holiday drew nearer, a perfect cyclone of orders poured in, far ahead of all expectations. On Christmas morning a visit to the wholesale markets and retail stores showed hardly any flowers and only a small number of plants left over.

The plant trade was splendid. Comparatively mild weather greatly favored shippers, rendering heavy wrapping needless for short shipments. Azaleas sold in great quantities; so did cyclamens, Cincinnati begonias and ericas. Poinsettias sold vastly better than a year ago, when severely cold weather hurt their sale. Oranges, solanums and ardisias cleaned up well. Of hollies in tubs there were a few unsold, as usual. Made-up pans and baskets of foliage, flowering and berried plants were in good demand. All plant growers declare it was easily the best Christmas they ever had.

Coming to cut flowers, there was a fine clean-up of practically everything. Select Beauties made $9 to $12 per dozen, and were not abundant. Other grades sold at from $8 to $50 per hundred. Ophelia, Russell, Hadley, Crimson Queen, D'Arenberg, Francis Scott Key, Shawyer, Stanley and Sunburst made from $6 to $32 per hundred, some select reds going higher. Double White Killarney, Killarney Queen, Ward, Taft, Killarney Brilliant, etc., made from $5 to $24 per hundred. There was a good call for Mlle. C. Brunner and other small varieties.

Carnations made record prices. Champion, Beacon, Dagmar and other large crimsons made $12 to $15 per hundred; Fenn, Pink Delight, Ward, Alice, $10; Matchless, White Wonder, Benora, Enchantress, White Enchantress, $8 to $10; Queen, $6 per hundred. A year ago white carnations were practically unsalable, with thousands carried over. Violets were not equal to the demand at $1.50 to $2 per hundred. Sweet peas did not advance much, making $1 to $2. Yellow marguerites varied from $1.50 to $3. Easter lilies and callas sold at $10 to $16 per hundred. Freesias appeared in larger numbers than ever before here at Christmas. Starting as high as $12.50 per hundred, prices fell to $6 and $8. A few Trumpet Major narcissi made $8. There were also some campernelles offered. Paper Whites, usually a drug, sold at higher prices than ever before. Quite a few made $4 per hundred, and all good flowers sold as high as $3. Chrysanthemums made their final bow. Valley sold all the way from $3 to $6. Cattleya Percivaliana made $6 and C. Trianae $9 to $12 per dozen. Gardenias sold at $6. Asparagus and adiantum had only a moderate call. For wreathing, holly and laurel wreaths, the demand was the best ever.

December 27 saw a fair supply of flowers, thanks to the remarkably mild weather prevailing over the holidays. There was considerable recession in prices and not a good demand, but this is something always to be looked for after a holiday, and everyone is optimistic.

Various Notes.

H. M. Robinson & Co. say they never saw anything like the demand at this Christmas. Not only were they cleaned out of flowers, but supplies of greens which they had bought proved quite inadequate and they had to buy right and left to try to fill orders.

The W. W. Edgar Co. had hardly a salable flowering plant left over. Buying started with a vengeance earlier than usual and the men had hard work to cope with the orders.

F. J. Dolansky had about 2,000 gardenias and several thousand Cattleya Percivaliana and Trianae and all cleaned up at first-class prices.

The Welch Bros. Co. ice chests on Christmas morning looked as though a cyclone had struck them. They were never so bare; business proved a record-breaker in all lines.

Harry Quint said he did nearly treble the business at his Boylston street store as compared with that of a year ago on Tremont street.

Peirce Bros., of Waltham, had a fine lot of Ophelia, D'Arenberg, Crimson Queen and Mlle. Cecile Brunner roses; also, azalea plants and a nice cut of cattleyas.

The annual inaugural meeting of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society will be held January 8. The president's address, treasurer's report and reports of the committees will interest all members who can attend. A large attendance is hoped for.

The Budlong Rose Co. handled 60,000 roses for Christmas and could have sold many more. They had a splendid cut of red varieties.

At Penn's two stores a remarkable business was done. It was a case of night and day work with a largely augmented staff to get out the avalanche of orders. A. L. Boch, formerly with Wax

J. T. Butterworth still had a good lot of Cattleya labiata for Christmas, in addition to Percivaliana and Trianae; also Vanda caerulea, Laelia anceps and cypripediums.

The mild weather and clear skies favored business and the plantsmen appreciated it. On Christmas day, 1914, the maximum was 18 degrees and the minimum -6 degrees below zero. In 1915 the maximum was 60 degrees and the minimum 45 degrees. What a contrast!

The Boston Cut Flower Co. did a splendid business. Azaleas were the leaders in plants, but all flowers sold well, as did made-up Christmas baskets.

At Patrick Welch's, as elsewhere in the wholesale section, the avalanche of buying cleaned up practically everything, hardly a flower being visible on Christmas day. The shipments of Russell, Hadley, Sunburst, Mrs. Moorfield Storey and Mrs. Bayard Thayer from the Waban Rose Conservatories were of magnificent quality, and Killarney and White Killarney were the finest seen here.

The store of Wax Bros. on Christmas day was a hive of industry. To fill orders it was found necessary to sell practically every plant, flower and basket in the large, beautifully arranged windows.

The installation of officers and ladies' night at the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston, January 18, will attract the usual bumper attendance. A fine entertainment is being arranged for.

At Galvin's Back Bay and Park street stores trade in both plants and cut flowers exceeded all previous Christmas records. Purchasers were willing to pay higher prices all along the line.

Thomas Roland sold everything in the way of flowering and fruiting a year ago, when everyone felt gloomy.

Albert Roper cleared out hundreds of his new seedling carnations at $15 per

A year ago Andrew Christensen had

FLORISTS' REVIEW

When Writing Advertisers

WHY NOT?

It takes time to prepare drawings, estimates, etc., and the more time we have the more satisfaction for both of us. You are thinking of remodeling your store, perhaps, at some future date, so why not get a few facts to start with?

We can furnish the facts on which to base your ideas. Write us for our catalogue and give us an idea as to what your wishes will be and we can then submit our ideas and an approximate estimate which will help you decide.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

A FULLERTON GROWER.

Bigger business at the old quarters of the Robertson Nurseries, Fullerton, Cal., placed elbow room at such a high premium that T. D. Robertson was obliged to erect a new range on Commonwealth avenue. The illustration on this page gives the street view of the new establishment, which consists of three greenhouses and a lath house of one acre.

Mr. Robertson for many years was associated with the Orange County Nursery & Land Co., but in 1910 he purchased the nursery, seed and flower departments of the company and founded the present business.

BEWARE OF SULPHUR FUMES.

We are sending you under separate cover a leaf taken from one of our kentias and a portion of the soil in which the palms are grown. During the last two months the kentias have suffered from a sudden death of the foliage, and as we have been unable to ascertain the cause of the trouble we would like to have you diagnose the case.

The plants are on the shady side of a rose house, in a temperature of 58 to 70 degrees, and are grown on a raised bench covered with cinders. The soil was taken from an old orchard near the range. The steam pipes in the house have frequently been painted with sulphur and the water used contains some alkali.

The trouble, however, has not been confined to the kentias; Primula obconica, P. malacoides, solanum, Chinese pepper and the Whitmani fern have been subject to the same attack. The azaleas, carnation plants and cuttings have dead points on their foliage. Our cyclamen appear to be affected by the same trouble. The flowers have black spots; in fact, some are so black that they are unsalable. Do you think our trouble can be attributed to the alkali in the water? A. F. H.—Wash.

Your trouble is undoubtedly due to using too much sulphur on the steam pipes, the kentia leaf showing just such an injury as could be expected from such a cause. It is easy to overdo the sulphur treatment on the pipes, particularly so where steam is the heating medium. If the sulphur is not already burned off the pipes, it probably would pay you to wash it off, or scrub the pipes with a stiff brush.

Sulphur is an excellent mildew remedy, but the majority of foliage plants will not stand exposure to its fumes. W. H. T.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

Hopes and fears for the holiday trade soon will be all over and the Christmas of 1915 looks like a breaker of records for business done. The shortage in azaleas was, in a manner, an advantage, for it showed the value of other plants for Christmas use. Incidentally it also showed the value of held-over plants.

New Establishment of T. D. Robertson, at Fullerton, Cal.

The growers who took care of the latter, instead of allowing them to lie around and be neglected all summer, reaped the advantage in a useful lot of stock. Erica melanthera, both locally grown and from a distance, was good and found a ready sale. Poinsettias generally were not so good as usual, though there was an excellent lot of small, showy stock in 4-inch pots and even smaller. Begonia Glory of Cincinnati and Chatelaine proved to be good sellers and some of the former kind seen in the best retail stores were far and away the finest ever seen in this city. As usual, there was a lack of mixed baskets of quality, the taste apparently running to single, large plants rather than to made-up combinations. Cyclamens were excellent as a whole, though probably the finest plants shown were not quite up to the high average of those of a year ago.

Ferns were in great demand both as specimens and small stock for dishes. The Bird's-nest fern is popular and the old Pieroni seems to be gaining lost ground, though for general purposes the Boston fern is still hard to beat. Araucaria plumosa is one of the best sellers of the excelsa type and a good many plants changed hands this year.

Cut flowers were equal to the demand in almost every case, the only shortage being in good roses. Carnations were good and there was in some cases little to choose between the indoor and the outdoor-grown flowers. Although a shortage was predicted, there seemed to be none in valley, a good deal of potted stock being sent in as well as cut flowers. There was a brisk demand for orchids and apparently plenty of flowers to fill it. In greens there was apparently enough for everybody. Good English holly was high in price, but the material was fine indeed, well berried and with the true deep glossy green, prickly foliage. Mahonia or Oregon grape, as it is locally termed, was in evidence.

Various Notes.

Now that H. W. Turner can make no further improvements in his houses, he has begun work outside and planted a large collection of trees, shrubs and conifers. These in a short time will make a pretty feature and it is notable that he has secured as many distinct kinds as possible. Mr. Turner reports an immense demand for the Prima Donna rose this season. Those who have found fault with the name will probably recall the fact that for a long time Mr. Turner bracketed the original name—Mme. P. Euler—with the more widely known one, under which it was shown and certificated at New York.

At the Wolfskills' & Morris Golden-son store there will have to be an addition made if the business keeps on increasing. The Christmas showing of plants was excellent, particularly in some extra fine Begonia Glory of Cincinnati.

One of the most pleasing features of the plant business this holiday was the exquisite plants of Erica melantha brought in by J. Dieterich. They were not extra large and, consequently, not high in price. They were symmetrical, full of flower and nicely finished; many a retailer was glad to get them.

Although unable to walk as yet, Charles Gutting, of the Superior Nursery, has been moving around town in his machine and hobnobbing with his customers and friends, all of whom were glad to see him.

The Germain Seed & Plant Co. made a quick clean-up on azaleas, although there were not so many as usual in flower for the holiday. A number of the little, red-flowering azalea; Charles Encke, sold well, the brightly tinted flowers being especially attractive. A few plants of the old but little-grown Lachenalia pendula made an acceptable variety in the stock. Planting is in full progress at the new nursery on the Whittier road.

Wright's Flower Shop showed some of the finest held-over azaleas ever seen here, demonstrating that the plants can, with proper care, be made to do good service the second year. These were, of course, in addition to this year's importations.

Just as F. Borden, of the Redondo Floral Co., returned to business after a siege of grip, his partner, Albert Knopf, was taken down with it, or with something like it. Mr. Knopf is a close sticker to business and it is unfortunate that they should both have come down during the holiday rush.

The Market.

The retailers are congratulating themselves on a successful Christmas season; some of the large shops had to add many extra hands. Plants and greens have been the heaviest items in the sales. Asparagus Sprengeri, smilax, cut adiantum, Mexican ivy, etc., as well as redwood greens, have moved in great quantities. English holly of excellent quality has been plentiful and cheap, largely replacing native red berries at the better shops. Good mistletoe also is abundant. As for plants, excellent cyclamen, begonias and primulas were in good supply and no serious shortage of other stock was experienced, most of the retailers having placed their orders in good time. Poinsettias and azaleas were far from plentiful, comparatively few of the former coming from San Diego. Much of the stock offered was fine and brought good prices. A small lot of bush bougainvilleas was well received. All ferns sold well and many small holly trees were disposed of.

Cut flowers of most kinds are plentiful, but prices hold fairly firm. Carnations, however, have dropped, with a big cut, and retailers are buying heavily. There were more mums last week than the week previous, including some fair stock, but they moved slowly and few were shown in the larger stores. Supplies of stocks, marigolds and mignonette are ample and there is a nice cut of freesias, Paper Whites and daffodils. More Easter lilies have appeared. The Christmas supply of valley, both cut and in flats, was fair. Rose business has been active. Ophelia fully held its own, the extra cut of Beauties was well absorbed and Killarney was in good demand. Cecile Brunner was in heavy demand, with only a limited cut. Favorable weather brought out plenty of violets for the shipping trade, which was really enormous, and there was a good stock left for the local market. Gardenias showed further improvement and sold readily, and orchids of many kinds, both plants and flowers, were strongly featured by several shops.

Various Notes.

One of the most interesting events of the week was the breaking up of the so-called carnation trust, or pool, of the Japanese growers, which has been practically in control of the market for the greater part of the year. This event took place December 22 and resulted in comparatively easy prices for the holiday trade, as it was every man for himself among the growers.

B. M. Joseph's second Christmas season was a great success. Fred Bertrand, who manages the flower and plant end of the work, worked out an efficient de-branch store, as was done last year, but an extra storage room in a basement across the street was occupied with a big stock of plants, which were well sold out before Christmas.

Pelicano, Rossi & Co. opened a branch for the holiday season at 133-135 Sutter street, with a fine assortment of plants, in addition to their large stock at the Kearny street store. Orchids, both cut and plants, were an important part of this shop's decoration and many of them were sold. These were mostly from the J. A. Carbone place. Frank Pelicano expects within a few weeks to bring in a good cut of the new violets which he showed for the first time last year, having planted enough to make a nice showing this season.

Mr. Ishida, of Shibuya & Ishida, of Menlo Park, comments on the extent to which plants have taken the place of cut flowers in the Christmas trade here within the last few years. Formerly, he says, it was possible to sell a good cut of chrysanthemums on the holiday market, but now nobody seems to want them. This firm has a planting of about 25,000 freesias from which they will soon begin cutting.

E. James, of Oakland, sent in a nice lot of potted bougainvilleas in bush form, which are rather a novelty here and have attracted some attention, the glossy foliage and brilliant mass of bloom making them attractive for Christmas.

The E. W. McLellan Co.'s holiday shipments of violets were so heavy that the express company had to put on an extra car.

Milton Tonini now has full control of the Bay Counties Seed Co., which recently started on Market street, his partner, J. H. W. Field, having withdrawn from the business.

M. H. Ebel was down from Sacramento last week arranging for shipment of stock for the holidays.

Charles Navlet, of San Jose, got in a nice stock of azaleas in time for the Christmas trade, and Mr. Piccetti, of the San Francisco branch, got his share of these as well as of other plants, and reports a fine holiday trade in both departments. S. H. G.

Lincoln, Neb.—Fred Miller will leave for the east January 1. He will enter an Adventist seminary, where he will prepare to become a foreign missionary. Fritz, as he is commonly known among his many friends, has been in the employ of C. H. Frey for several years.

Salem, Ore.—Florists here complain of the practice at one of the public institutions, which is said to give away stock the trade has for sale. Says one florist: "One bad thing for us florists to contend with is the State Insane Asylum furnishing people with free plants, which I think is wrong. We all pay taxes to keep up those state institutions and then for them to distribute plants in the spring is not fair to us florists."

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, John M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I.;
Secretary-Treasurer, O. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

THE Philadelphia Seed Co. has filed notice of an increase of stock from $25,000 to $50,000.

THERE is a lot of last year's corn that is good for seed purposes, so no famine is to be feared.

HERE and there small surpluses of the Globe varieties of onion have developed, but the holders think they know the value.

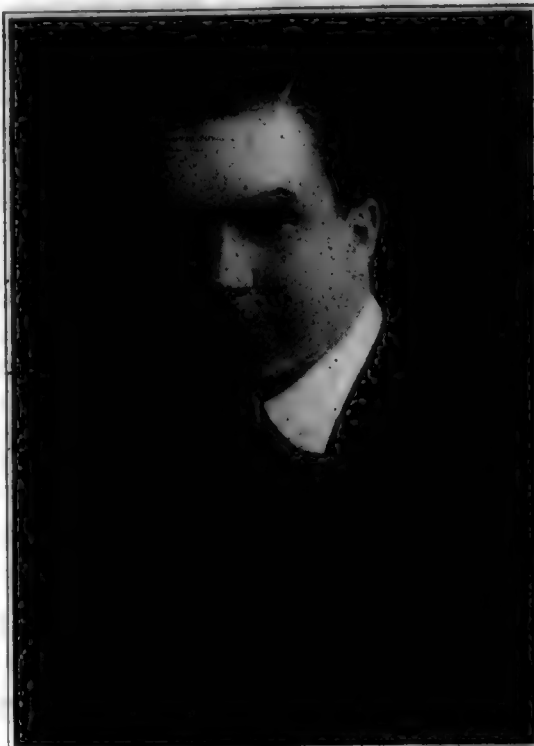

LESTER L. MORSE and Mrs. Morse, who have made their headquarters in New York for a month, are on their way home to San Francisco.

IF Congress decrees that all seed parcels over four ounces must be zoned, perhaps Congress will in return cut off the free seeds that now burden the mails!

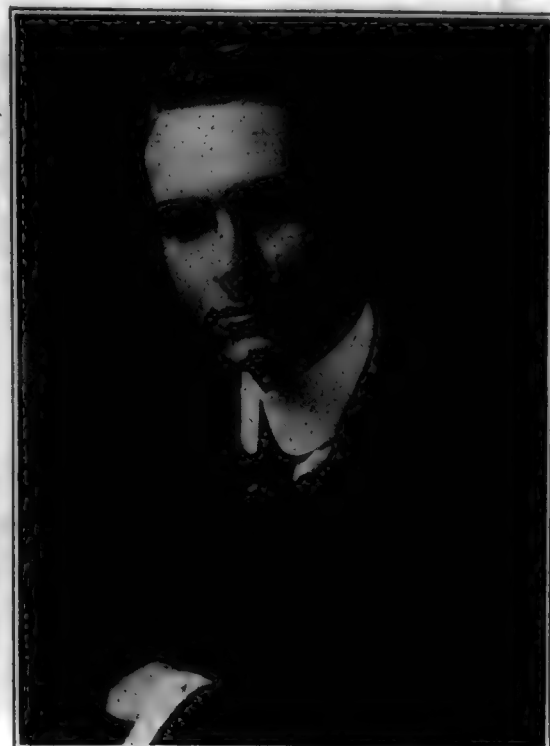

THE U. S. Department of Agriculture recently has issued Bulletin No. 276, "The Pea Aphis with Relation to Forage Crops," by J. J. Davis, in which seedsmen will find much of interest.

THE early catalogues confirm the belief that the average mail order seedsmen is not only disinclined to take advantage of market conditions, but that he will go the limit to keep from raising his prices. Whether it is fear of competition or belief in a policy is not apparent.

FRED H. HUNTER, of the Hunter Seed Co., San Francisco, who recently recovered from an attack of pneumonia, had only been at his office a few days when he received word by wire from his sister in Spokane, Wash., that his mother was not expected to live, and he and Mrs. Hunter have by now about reached Spokane. This will delay Mr. Hunter's annual eastern trip. He will be east sometime in January, however.

W. Atlee Burpee (Junior).

David Burpee.

The Two Sons of W. Atlee Burpee Now at the Head of the Big Seed House.

CERTIFICATES of dissolution have been filed by the United States Seed Co., of San Antonio, Tex.

ROBERT H. BLACK, of Black's Seeds, Albert Lea, Minn., has become a benedict. Mr. Black recently motored to Rochester, Minn., to plight nuptial vows, the other contracting party being Miss Carol Pankhurst, of Rochester.

THE premium list of the North Dakota Improved Seed Growers' Association, covering the cash prizes to be awarded the seed exhibitors at the annual meeting, to be held January 18 to 22, has been printed and is ready for distribution. The prizes aggregate $2,000.

THE BURPEE BOYS.

W. Atlee Burpee early began to train his boys to carry on his business when it should come time for him to free himself of cares. That they now, through the untimely death of the founder, find themselves in control of the largest mail order seed business in America and probably in the world is merely putting the responsibility on their shoulders somewhat sooner than was expected and the trade looks forward with approval to seeing them carry on the work most successfully. As for the young men themselves, they count themselves fortunate in having the assistance of two such strong and energetic men as Howard M. Earl and W. F. Therkildson, on whom their father had been accustomed to rely.

A CENTURY OF SEEDSMEN.

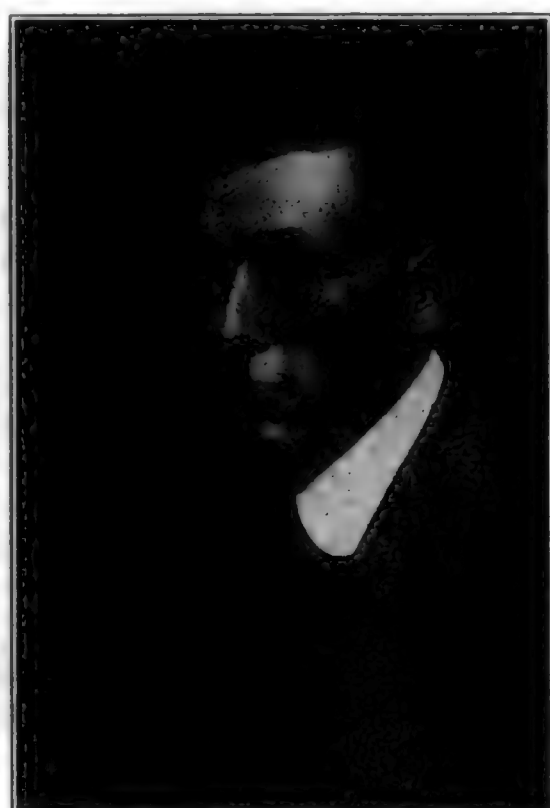

Just 100 years ago, in the year known to Englishmen as Waterloo year, was born James Kelway, the first of the three generations who have conducted the firm of Kelway & Son, of Langport, Somerset, England. In a life devoted almost entirely to horticulture, the founder of this noted house raised and port; additional large areas elsewhere are employed for growing seeds from their selected stocks. The firm counts in its record 270 grand prizes and medals won at exhibitions in Europe and America, in addition to hundreds of certificates and awards of merit from the British Royal Horticultural and other societies for new varieties or strains of seeds and plants. The business at home and abroad has increased rapidly in the last few years. Travelers now cover the United Kingdom and North America, and there are resident representatives everywhere in the British dominions. There are ordinarily about 150 people employed at Langport, but a large number of them have volunteered for service in the present war.

WATERMELON TO GO HIGHER.

It is impossible to grow watermelons in any quantity for seed purposes or otherwise without the use of more or less commercial fertilizer. Responsible growers of melon seed in the south are hard hit on account of the enormous advance of the principal ingredients used in the manufacture of a complete fertilizer. The present price per ton exceeds the last 5-year average fully 100 per cent. The contemplated advance of around 2 and 3 cents a pound on growing contracts for 1916 will hardly cover half the actual increased cost of production.

The condition of the melon crops from which seed is to be saved in the south is of vital importance to the best trade, and buyers of low-priced contracts for 1916 will meet disappointment all the way around.

Hugh M. Taylor.

PIPS AND BULBS VIA ROTTERDAM.

Last week's imports of bulbous stock through New York consisted of 125 cases of valley pips, consigned to a forwarder, and 115 cases of Dutch bulbs. This shipment of bulbs pushed the receipts for the season well past the 35,000 mark, and more bulbs are coming along, though few at a time. Last week's batch was consigned as follows, according to the New York manifest of the Holland steamer:

THE GRONNA BILL.

The bill of Senator Gronna of North Dakota, "To prohibit the interstate shipment of impure seeds," introduced December 7 as S. 578, provides as follows:

That the shipment for seeding purposes from one State into another State of seeds of alfalfa, barley, Canadian blue grass, Kentucky blue grass, awnless brome grass, buckwheat, clover, field corn, kafir corn, meadow fescue, flax, oats, millet, orchard grass, rape, redtop, rye, sorghum timothy, wheat or any other cereal or grass seeds or any vegetable seeds or flower seeds, or mixtures of seeds containing any of such seeds as one of the principal component parts, which are adulterated or unfit for seeding purposes under the provisions of this act, is hereby prohibited; and the Secretary of Agriculture shall make such rules and regulations as will prevent the shipment of such seed from one State, Territory, or District into another State, Territory, or District: Provided, That this Act shall not operate to prohibit the shipment of seeds for the purpose of cleaning them before offering them for sale, but such shipments shall be made in accordance with and be subject to such regulations as the Secretary of Agriculture may deem necessary to prevent the misuse of this privilege; and the Secretary may, if he considers it advisable, demand of the owner or consignee a bond that such seed, before it is offered for sale, will be cleaned to the standard of purity specified in this Act or such standard as may subsequently be established by the Secretary of Agriculture under the provisions of this Act; and such bonded seed shall not be released until the screenings and other refuse shall have been disposed of in a manner prescribed by the Secretary of Agriculture.

Sec. 2. That seed shall be considered adulterated within the meaning of this Act—have the power after proper investigation to prescribe additional standards of purity and viability, superseding those specified in sections two and three of this Act, but such standards shall in no case be lower than those specified in sections two and three.

Sec. 5. That any person or persons who shall knowingly violate the provisions of this Act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction, shall pay a fine of not exceeding $100 and not less than $10 for each offense: Provided, That any person or persons who shall knowingly sell for seeding purposes seeds or grain transported in violation of this Act shall be deemed guilty of violating this Act.

This is the third time this bad bill has been hobbled up, the first time being unacted upon, the second time unfavorably reported by the Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry. The bill is thoroughly unwise, impracticable and would, if enacted, wholly prohibit the shipment in interstate commerce of certain seeds. It applies to all field, vegetable and flower seeds, arbitrarily defining adulterations which no expert can detect, and making all seeds unfit for sale which are under ninety per cent germination. Seedsmen should advise their senators and representatives of the impractical character of the bill.

HOW ABOUT THIS?

Conversation between a Landreth seed traveler and a salesman for leather goods:

Leather Salesman: What are you selling?

Landreth's Traveler: Seeds.

Leather Salesman: Oh, —! I wasted ten years selling seeds, not one-third of which were shipped out, on account of crop failures. Now if I sell more than my leather factory has, they just put two dozen extra machines at work and quickly make up the goods, but no seed firm can manufacture seeds —when there came along a general crop failure they were dead stuck.

CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

Henry W. Turner, Montebello, Cal.—A neat, compact catalogue of roses; twenty-four pages, in handy form for the pocket and bound in an attractive cover. The stock is classified under three heads, "Florists' Forcing Varieties," "Everblooming Roses" and "The New Polyantha or Dwarf Baby Rambler Roses."

H. G. Hastings & Co., Atlanta Ga.—An illustrated catalogue of seeds, bulbs and plants; ninety-six pages and cover. The lists of vegetable, farm and forage seeds are especially comprehensive, occupying about seventy pages and including the distinctively southern seeds, such as cotton. Two pages are devoted to roses, some of which are shown in colors on the cover.

Knight & Struck Co., New York, N. Y.—"The Heatherhome Seed and Plant Book," another of this firm's artistic, unique volumes, carefully compiled, printed in blue on cream-tinted paper and bound in a tasteful blue cover, with embossed decorations in white. "Volume" is the right word, for it contains 336 pages. At the beginning are some suggestions on color harmony; then follow the lists of flower seeds, bulbs, plants and sundries. The sundries include sprayers, seed flats, stakes, moss, peat, fertilizers, insecticides, etc.

California Nursery Co., Inc., Niles, Cal.—"Semicentennial Edition, Descriptive Catalogue of Ornamental and Fruit Trees," a 128-page book, well illustrated, and so comprehensive and accurate that certain western horticulturists seem to be justified in pronouncing it "a condensed cyclopedia of horticulture for the Pacific coast." Neither the sizes nor the prices of the stock are stated, and the company draws attention to the fact that the book "is not for gratuitous distribution, but is sold for 25 cents per copy." Separate price lists are prepared annually, however, and are mailed without charge.

L. L. Olds Seed Co., Madison, Wis.—Special catalogue of garden seeds; thirty-two pages, illustrated. "This book," says the company, "includes all the vegetable and flower seeds and bulbs that we have to offer and the prices are exactly the same as in our 96-page catalogue, which will be ready about the middle of January. The fifty-six pages of garden seeds in our 96-page catalogue are condensed to thirty-two pages for this book by omitting some of the illustrations and descriptions."

Aggeler & Musser Seed Co., Los Angeles, Cal.—Twenty-third annual catalogue of bulbs, vegetable and field seeds, flower seeds, tree and shrub seeds, fruit trees, small fruits, garden and nursery

PRECAUTION

For the lack of a nail the shoe was lost, for the lack of a shoe the horse was lost, for the lack of a horse the rider was lost—and for the lack of Horseshoe Brand bulbs the crop was lost. Thus precaution would have saved your crop of lilies. At any rate it would have bettered your crop, because there are no lily bulbs grown which will net as high average flowering results as Horseshoe Brand Giganteum. Some growers do not discriminate in their buying. Some do, and those who do always buy Horseshoe Brand lily bulbs because they know they are better bulbs. You can profit by the experience of successful lily growers by getting Horseshoe Brand bulbs to start, thus saving yourself the loss due to experimenting with various brands of unknown standard value. The prices are as follows:

Giganteum

7/9	$18 per case 300 bulbs
8/10	20 per case 250 bulbs
9/10	20 per case 200 bulbs
9/11	20 per case 180 bulbs

Not how cheap but how good.

for which the Burpee house has long been famous. This one celebrates the company's fortieth anniversary and contains 182 pages, in an attractive colored cover. Among the illustrations are four full-page pictures in colors, showing specialties in beans, tomatoes, melons, gladioli and sweet peas. Farm seeds, as well as flower and vegetable seeds, are included.

Charles H. Totty, Madison, N. J.—Thirteenth annual illustrated catalogue of chrysanthemums, roses, carnations, hardy perennials and miscellaneous plants. This book of sixty-eight pages is the largest and most elaborate catalogue that Mr. Totty has yet issued and is bound in a strong cover of new and artistic design. Of course the chrysanthemums, headed by the Wells-Pockett-Totty novelties, still have the first and chief place in the book, as in the Totty business, but roses occupy much more space than in former editions. Included in both chrysanthemums and roses are certain novelties which, says Mr. Totty, "will more than uphold our reputation of the past."

Calendars.

The Review has received 1916 calendars from:

H. Schroeter Co., Detroit, on the back of a ribboned card for the wall.

C. Herbert Coy Seed Co., Valley, Neb., reproducing a painting of roses by Paul De Longpre.

A. W. Warren, Hillcrest Nurseries, Corry, Pa., a large reproduction of O. Ward Traver's painting, "The Rose Girl."

George R. Pedrick & Son, Pedrickton, N. J., reproducing Kenyon's painting, "The Idol of Her Heart."

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Christmas business proved to be good. The supply was larger than expected, and all the storekeepers had adequate quantities of stock for their trade. Shipping business, of course, was good.

Roses are fairly plentiful. The receipts include an excellent lot of red as well as American Beauty and Killarney. The American Beauties, especially the larger sizes, have only a fair market. Carnations are scarce and are not of the highest average quality. Easter and magnificum lilies are plentiful. The supply of narcissus is equal to the demand.

Lily of the valley, violets and orchids, all in heavy supply, failed to clean up in the Christmas rush and have only a fair market. Other offerings include poinsettias, stevia, callas, sweet peas and baby primroses.

Various Notes.

The Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange reports a business much greater than that of the Christmas before.

P. J. Olinger had as large a single lot of fine red roses as ever have been seen in this market at Christmas.

Recent visitors were W. E. Gardner, Newcastle, Ind.; Fred Rupp, Lawrenceburg, Ind.; Emile Uhl, Greenfield, O., and Charles Winner, Lebanon, O.

C. E. Critchell finds the demand for wild smilax greater than it has ever been.

C. H. H.

BRAMPTON, ONT.

No one would have believed that Christmas would result in such a highly satisfactory business. The fact remains that the turnover of the 1914 holiday season was exceeded by thirty per cent and the record Christmas of 1913 eclipsed by the sales of the holiday week just passed. Everything was in fine shape as to quality and quantity, except that there was a heavy shortage of carnations and American Beauties.

With the shipping-room staff at the Dale Estate working till midnight most of the week, orders were got out in time. The weather was fair until Christmas morning, when twelve inches of snow began to fall, followed by rain and a heavy wind. The demand for orchids was abnormal, and the trade in wreathing and decorative material was much larger than in any previous year. The smaller growers report first-rate business, and judging by repeat orders from most towns throughout the Dominion the Christmas trade must have been the best ever experienced. W. G. P.

THE THIRD EDITION OF THE Album of Designs

(A Book Every Retailer Needs)

THE original Album of Designs was published in response to many requests from florists who felt the need for an up-to-date book that could be used in taking orders for Funeral Designs, Wedding Decorations and Bouquets, Table Decorations and all cut flower work where it was not practicable to show the customer the finished article as it would be when ready for use. With the publication of this album it became possible to show the finished work in beautifully printed pictures. The first edition sold like hot cakes, and a second edition went quickly. Now a third edition is off the press. Everything is in it—all the standard designs and many new and heretofore unpublished pieces.

96 pages, nearly 300 designs and decorations, beautifully printed on heavy glazed paper, handsomely bound in a cover that will stand wear

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

President, E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia.; Vice-president, John Watson, Newark, N. J.; Secretary, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treasurer, Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.
Forty-first annual meeting, Milwaukee, Wis., June 28 to 30, 1916.

F. W. DIXON, of Holton, Kan., has had to turn down orders aggregating half a million Everbearing strawberry plants. He will plant twenty-five acres of them next season. Recently he received an order for 80,000 plants of the Everbearing variety from a Japanese gardener in California.

IN his annual report, Attorney General Gregory states that four violations of the plant quarantine act were reported to U. S. attorneys during the year, and $415 was collected in fines. Nine cases were pending at the close of the year for which the report was made, ending June 30, 1915.

A NURSERY that now never loses rhododendrons during the winter has them planted on a hillside, with several perforated water pipes running across the patch. If the autumn is dry, before the ground freezes the water is turned on and the soil given a thorough soaking before it freezes up. Before this trick was acquired losses were large; since then they have been negligible.

REMINDER TO NURSEYMEN.

Hotel Wisconsin has been chosen headquarters of the forty-first annual convention of the American Association of Nurserymen, to be held in Milwaukee, Wis., June 28 to 30, 1916. T. J. Ferguson, of Wauwatosa, Wis., is the local representative of the association in the matter of arrangements, entertainment, etc. Membership and other questions should be sent to the undersigned, 204 Granite building, Rochester, N. Y., who will respond promptly. It is the hope of the executive committee that every nurseryman in the country actively engaged in the business but not yet identified with the association, will take the necessary steps to become a member. John Hall, Sec'y.

NURSERY TRADE TERMS.

At its annual meeting in Kansas City, December 8 and 9, the Western Association of Nurserymen accepted the report of the special committee on trade terms. This committee, composed of J. W. Schuette, chairman; E. P. Bernardin and H. B. Chase, had been appointed by the association at its annual meeting in December, 1914. Its purpose was to formulate terms of payment in the nursery trade, and it was under instruction to report to the American Association of Nurserymen.

The national organization met in Detroit in June, 1915, and at this convention the report of the trade terms committee was duly read and referred to the executive committee. E. P. Bernardin made the report for the committee at the recent meeting of the western body. It follows:

"The following are the recommendations made by the special committee on trade terms appointed by the Western Association of Nurserymen at its Kansas City meeting, in December, 1914, to formulate terms of payment in the nursery trade and to make its report to the national association in Detroit, with a view of having that association adopt a specific schedule of terms, to be used universally in the nursery trade in the United States.

"These recommendations were made and referred to the executive committee:

"The understood trade terms in vogue in the wholesale nursery business for the last twenty-five years or more, are: Settlement December 1 for fall shipments, and June 1 for late fall shipments intended for spring trade and for spring shipments.

"Why should we have two pay days in a year, and why select December 1 and June 1? Let us forget that such days as December 1 and June 1 exist.

"Many of us do not begin to make any shipments until after the middle to the last of October in the fall, and the majority of our shipments are made early in November. Fall payments December 1 are too early. In the spring we begin from the first to the middle of March, and payment June 1 is later than it should be. Northern and eastern nurserymen do much of their business in May. Surely June 1 is too early for them to comply with June 1 payment.

"We ship buds in June and July, the main expense of which is labor—a cash proposition. Payments for buds should be made before December 1.

"Every wholesale business has understood trade terms, with discounts for prompt payments. We have not. There is no inducement for a buyer to pay his bills promptly, as we allow no cash discount.

"It would be more satisfactory to make terms to nurserymen as follows:

"Net sixty days from date of invoice, with discount of two per cent ten days, one per cent thirty days.

"When cash in advance is demanded, allow three per cent cash discount, but never allow free packing for cash in advance. All wholesale prices are for goods in nursery—packing extra.

"Late fall shipments intended for spring trade, June 1 net, or four per cent discount if paid in thirty days from date of invoice.

"This would allow ample time to get returns, be an inducement for the prompt-paying customer to discount his bills, and, in our opinion, would improve collections.

"We issue wholesale price lists which are sent broadcast to the trade. The quotations are generally made per hundred and per thousand. Again, quotations are made per each. These prices get into the hands of all classes of buyers. The buyer wants twenty trees. He expects them and gets them at the lowest quoted each rate, or from concerns quoting only per thousand.

"Some concerns offer thirty plants or trees at the hundred rate, 300 at the thousand rate; others twenty-five and 250 respectively; still others fifty and 500 at the hundred and thousand rate. There should be uniformity in this matter. In justice to the good of the trade, printed quotations should always be made per hundred and per thousand, never per each, and published quantity privileges should be the same in all wholesale price lists; viz., fifty at the hundred rate, 300 at the thousand rate.

"A great many abuses are creeping in among local dealers and small nurserymen in the way of complaints. They accept shipments of stock, and some of them do not attempt to make pay-

If we stick to the dictionary definition, a thing can be discovered but once; as, for instance, Newton's discovery of the laws of gravitation. Yet we speak of "the discovery of America," implying that Columbus was the discoverer. Long before the time of Columbus a Scandinavian navigator by the name of Eric the Red, who flourished in 1,000, "first" discovered America, or, rather, what we now call America.

All of us, now and then, make a little discovery of our own. It matters little that we are not the original discoverer; it's a new one to us. There is nothing new under the sun, when you stop to think of it. Some of us are hoggish about our discoveries; others, like the Gardners, Charles F. and Clark E., who do business in Osage, Ia., as the Gardner Nursery Co., believe in passing a good thing along.

The Gardner nursery is situated in the blizzard belt of northern Iowa, about fifteen miles from the Minnesota line, and where the thermometer goes 30 and even 40 degrees below zero, with the other extreme, in summer, of long, hot, dry spells. But about the discovery. And, perhaps, in telling of it, we may be permitted to use the words of Charles F. Gardner, who is president of the company. "We find," said Mr.

Gardner, "that people like good-quality ripe strawberries just as well during late summer and the fall as they do in the regular strawberry season. In fact, we find that our strawberries topped the markets in preference to all other fruits. We are planning greatly to increase our plantings this coming spring."

The Everbearing strawberries are rapidly coming to the front with the Garden Nursery Co. It picked and sold 22,563 quarts of these berries, all fine, during August and up to the middle of October, when the first severe frost came. These berries were all picked from newly planted fields, set in April and May of the same year.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

Christmas Business.

The retailers are well satisfied with the volume of business done for Christmas, and, while many of the stores have not yet assembled their figures, all are positive that 1915 will show a healthy increase over the same period of last year, which in turn showed an increase over 1913. Cut flowers and pot plants have grown in favor as Christmas gifts, largely replacing more expensive articles.

Everything in the way of plants moved well, and the stores soon found themselves outsold on azaleas. Cyclamen came a close second, and poinsettias were in good demand. The sale of cut flowers was heavier than ever before and it is said that better prices prevailed, both wholesale and retail. American Beauty roses, long-stemmed Richmonds, double and single violets all moved readily. The supply of orchids and gardenias was insufficient.

The retail quotations on single violets were $2 and $3, while doubles maintained a price of $3 per hundred. Gardenias brought $1 and orchids made $1 and $1.25 each. Cut poinsettias sold well at from $3 to $6 per dozen. Valley sold at $1.50 per dozen and carnations brought from $1 to $2.50. American Beauties sold readily at up to $18 per dozen, the cheapest to be had being $5. There was some demand for Sweetheart roses at $1 per dozen. Mock and Radiance brought up to $9, while Enchanter, Shawyer, Killarney, Ward, Sunburst and Hillingdon reached a top price of $5 per dozen. Extra fine Richmond roses brought up to $12 per dozen, the bottom price being about $5. Fireflame was offered at $1.50 per dozen.

Various Notes.

In commenting on the week's business, William F. Gude, of Gude Bros. Co., said: "We had more trade than we could attend to for three or four days before Christmas and this despite the fact that our sales and delivery force was more than doubled. Everything moved well. We were completely cleaned out of azaleas early in the rush. Prices were better and stock was exceptionally fine; so, all told, the business was satisfactory."

The next regular meeting of the Florists' Club is scheduled to be held at 1214 F street, northwest, January 4.

The Gude Bros. Co. was given the order for the elaborate decorations at the Pan-American Union on the occasion of the Second Pan-American Scientific Congress, which is being attended by notables from all of the South and Central American countries. C. L. L.

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

Pittsburgh had fine weather for the holiday business, until Christmas morning, when a cold, miserable rain began, culminating at night in a snow storm. Stock had been scarce for two weeks preceding Christmas, but the crops got in just right on everything except carnations, and two bright days late in the week helped even the carnations considerably. Roses were fine and in perfect condition, with enough of all grades for everybody. Richmonds were especially fine and plentiful. Cattleyas were in great demand, but there were enough for all. Early in the week it looked as if violets might be coming into their own again, but the demand for them slumped off toward the end of the week and small rose buds, sweet peas and orchids took their place.

Plantmen all report that this was the best plant Christmas ever known. All of them cleaned up everything that looked like a blooming plant, and toward the end of the week were selling palms and ferns.

The retailers all have the same report—that Christmas was one of the old-fashioned kind and that the prosperity which seems to have been reaching other kinds of business has at last reached the florists. All were worked to the limit and the flowers and plants handled were finer than ever before. It was unusual to see anything that was not strictly up to the mark.

Various Notes.

Randolph & McClements, with their large conservatory attached to their store, on one of the most prominent corners of the east end, probably did the greatest plant business, for they seemed to have thousands of baskets, pans and other arrangements of plants and the demand seemed to exceed their ability to keep up the display.

Mrs. E. A. Williams, whose store is not so large, made a display of special arrangements of plants, and by Friday noon there was not a plant in the store, so that all the room was available for handling the cut flower business, which was the best they ever had.

The A. W. Smith Co., with special opportunity for display, certainly took advantage of it and moved more plants than ever before at Christmas. The company reports that both the plant and flower business were the best ever experienced.

The establishment of the Blind Floral Co., with its new French decorations, looked exceedingly artistic and beautiful and the Christmas trade surpassed expectations.

In Wilkesburg Miss E. B. Maxwell and her efficient force worked day and night to keep up with the demands on them, but they did such a nice business that they did not complain of the strenuous labor.

William Turner says there was a wonderful increase in his business. He does not know whether this was chiefly due to his personal attention or to the better trade conditions, but it was highly satisfactory at any rate.

Miss Nellie G. King reports that her business was so much ahead of her expectations that she and her helpers were almost worked to death trying to keep up with it.

Samuel Cape, the Butler street florist, had things all his own way out there. While he does not say much, one can see that he is getting there with both feet and his Christmas business was the kind that pays.

Harry Hamm, with his two stores, was well satisfied with his business.

The E. C. Ludwig Floral Co. was doing the usual business except that the Christmas tree department was dropped and all time and attention were given to flowers and plants, and this proved to be no mistake.

The Ludwig Floral Co., on Federal street, was greatly pleased with the Christmas business, and the smiles of the members of the firm seemed to prove that they must have made money.

Gilbert Ludwig was in bad shape with the grip, but stayed in the fight all through the holiday season.

Hard luck hit the A. W. Smith Co. force just before the holidays. A. W. Smith, Jr., met with an accident that nearly put him out of the running. One of the errand boys was struck by an automobile and his skull was fractured, but his life was saved by a delicate surgical operation. Another member of the force was injured in some way and was disabled for a week. Clarke.

Dorner's Novelty for 1916

New Salmon Pink Carnation NANCY

Color, light salmon pink, a little darker than Pink Delight and a more even color. Blooms are good commercial size, three inches and over, nicely formed and have never shown a bursted calyx. Stems always hold the flower upright. The habit is a quick productive growth and as a producer it stands highest among commercial varieties. Color does not fade. Fragrance is very noticeable. Having an excellent cerise pink and an improved yellow to offer in 1917, we have decided to disseminate the variety NANCY this year (1916). For a light pink that will produce quantities of bloom and is commercially good in every respect, plant NANCY. The stock is limited and orders will be filled in rotation as received. Price, rooted cuttings, $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000. First deliveries in January.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Christmas Business.

Christmas appears to have been an exceedingly profitable holiday for the trade. Starting as it did, at the beginning of the week, the business became more and more active until it reached its zenith December 24. We can assure the trade that Rochester has experienced one of the best Christmases on record. Scarcely a plant was to be seen at 6 p. m. Friday, but plenty of cut flowers were available. The stock of plants and cut flowers was heavy indeed, but the market cleared nicely. Had there been more sun, plants would have been more plentiful, but a sunless week held back a large quantity of stock. American Beauties were in first-class condition and brought good prices. Other reds, such as Francis Scott Key, D'Arenberg, Hoosier Beauty and Milady, all sold splendidly. Other varieties, such as Ophelia, Sunburst, Ward, My Maryland, Russell and Radiance, were good and sold nicely. Prices were in accordance with the season. Violets sold well and retailed at $3 to $4 per hundred. Sweet peas were extra fine and moved satisfactorily. Carnations in pink and white were plentiful, but reds were on the scarce side. Orchids, gardenias, cypripediums, pink and white bouvardias—all sold well. Valley was good and met all demands. Calla and Easter lilies were not overplentiful. Yellow narcissi, Paper Whites, stevia and Shasta daisies were all useful as small flowers and sold nicely. Chrysanthemums are slackening considerably now, but they were useful for the holiday. A fine supply of Dutch hyacinths was on the market and sold well. Poinsettias never appeared to such good advantage as this season. Azaleas were fine and sold fast; in fact, every available plant was sold out. Greens were plentiful throughout the week.

Various Notes.

Miss Lillian Wheeler, of J. B. Keller Sons, has been home for the last few days, suffering from internal poisoning caused by primulas. She is making satisfactory progress.

The funeral of Miss E. E. Keller, sister-in-law of George Keller, was held from the latter's home December 23. Miss Keller was a widely known writer and philanthropist. Many telegraph orders for flowers were received by the local florists for the funeral.

MILWAUKEE.

The Holiday Trade.

Christmas trade on the whole was eminently satisfactory. Stock was quite scarce and prices soared. The prices have more than maintained the standard set by those of last year and the big feature this Christmas was the absence of a drop just before the holiday, as was the case last year.

Carnations were scarce and their quality was quite good. Some exceptionally fine stock was sold and there were some inferior grades that brought more than they were worth, owing to the shortage. Roses were in fine shape, but they were even scarcer than carnations. This tended to increase the demand and some choice stock was moved at fancy prices. Russell roses were in great demand; long stock brought $6 per dozen and upward. Violets were so scarce that they could not be figured on, as the limited quantity that reached the market was but a drop in the bucket compared with the demand. The quality of the violets was good and the Wisconsin-grown stock was cleaned out at around $2.50 per hundred.

Callas were not to be had and orders were turned down on this item. Valley was in medium supply and was cleaned up with no effort. The demand for orchids was strong and the supply, while larger than usual, was not sufficient to satisfy the demand. Plants are becoming a bigger factor every year and this year showed a larger increase than ever before. The orders began to come in early and most places were entirely sold out by December 20. The cut flower shortage may have been responsible for the large sale to some extent, but it would not account for the heavy advance sales in the plant end of the business.

Various Notes.

The G. H. Hunkel Co. has built a new office in its establishment. The new office is about double the size of the former one and will give the company greater facilities for handling the volume of business that passes through each year. This concern reports a large stock of seeds that are quite scarce at this time.

BE READY WITH THE GOODS

With another important holiday out of the way, every hustling florist should follow the warrior's cry: "Close up ranks, throw out the dead, make ready for a new battle."

No profit in "dead ones," whether it be men or plants. Crowd your space with new stock for the next big flower days—Easter and Memorial. Don't sit 'round sucking your thumb until these holidays arrive and then go out to buy needed blooms, but grow them yourself. "Be ready with the goods."

Besides, spring will soon be here, and you will need a lot of bedding stock. For all of these occasions nothing will equal snapdragon. Buy plants for Easter and Memorial and sow seed now for bedding stock. A few hundred snapdragon plants in bloom in 3½ or 4-in. pots in May will do both your soul and pocket-book good. "Be ready with the goods."

Greenhouse Heating.

HOUSE MAY BE EXTENDED.

I have a greenhouse 12x13 and nine feet high to the ridge, and I wish to heat it with hot water. The house runs north and south. The side walls contain twenty-seven inches of glass and the south end is glass. At the north end there is a building 14x14, in which I shall put the boiler, and this building is protected on the north by a stable. The boiler is a Little Gem. It has 2-inch and 2½-inch openings and a 14-inch firebox, and is rated at 230 square feet of radiation. I should like to know how to pipe this house for a temperature of 60 degrees in zero weather. What size of pipe would be the best to use? If I should add thirteen feet to the south end of the house, would the boiler be large enough to heat it? Should I use the same size of pipe in the enlarged house?
W. T. J.—Me.

To heat the house described, we would start with a 2½-inch flow pipe at the boiler and carry it to a point in line with and about eighteen inches below the ridge. At the point where it turns to enter the house, connect a 5-gallon expansion tank, using a ¾-inch pipe. Continue the flow pipe through the house, giving it a fall of about two inches, and at the farther end connect with the return coils on the side walls by means of 2-inch pipes. In each of the side coils there should be five 1½-inch returns. These, of course, should also be given a slight fall and should be connected to the return outlet in the boiler. While a 2-inch return connection will answer for the present radiation, if the size of the house is to be doubled it will be well, if possible, to ream out the outlet so that a 2½-inch main return may be used. If this cannot be done, it will suffice if the coils are connected by means of 2-inch pipes to a 2½-inch main return and this may be reduced to 2-inch close to the heater.

If the house is lengthened as proposed, it will only be necessary to extend the 2½-inch flow pipe to the end of the addition and connect it with the return coils of 1½-inch pipe, which should also be lengthened. A boiler with a capacity for 230 square feet of radiating surface will heat the house after it has been lengthened to twenty-six feet, but the grate is rather small and in zero weather the fire will require frequent attention.

STEAM FROM WATER COMPANY.

I have 2,100 feet of glass. My lots adjoin the plant of the Light & Water Co., and from this company I get my live steam, paying for it $136 per year. The company has made provision to get power from another city and will have the new service in operation soon. The company will then use its own plant only in case of high water, but has offered to supply me with steam, raising the rate $25 per year, making a total annual charge of $161. For the purpose of furnishing steam for me and also heating its own filtering house, the company is installing a 15-horsepower boiler. Would this boiler be large enough for both of us? Could I heat my place at less cost by installing my own boiler? If so, which would boiler should also heat your greenhouse to 60 degrees. If a good grade of soft coal can be obtained at not to exceed $5 per ton, the cost of the fuel for heating your houses would be a little less than $100, but it would be well worth $60 to care for firing the boiler.

Reckoning the depreciation in the plant, we would consider it cheaper to buy the steam at the price named than to install a boiler. On the other hand, precautions should be taken to secure a regular supply of steam through the entire season. Of course, if there is a regular attendant in the filtering house all of the time, this should secure proper attention to the fire at all hours of the day and night.

A steam heating plant should have attention at least once in five hours in zero weather, and with such a plant it is always desirable to have a night fireman. For this reason we prefer to use hot water for heating greenhouses that are too small to warrant a regular fireman, with perhaps 10,000 square feet of glass as a minimum for steam. While the cost of a hot water plant will be about fifty per cent more than for a steam plant, owing to its requiring more radiating surface, the cost of fuel, in a small plant where hard coal is used, will be less.

WILL USE GAS FOR FUEL.

I have just finished building a greenhouse, 20x100. I have a Wilks hot water boiler, 30x48, and will use natural gas for fuel, with a 2-inch gas pipe up to the boiler. I wish to get the best natural gas burner in the market, and also a thermostat to regulate the heat in the greenhouse. Please advise me what to do. H. D.—Tex.

For heating the greenhouse we would suggest the use of three 2½-inch flow pipes and nine 2-inch returns. This will give a temperature of 60 degrees in zero weather if there is no glass in the side walls and if the house is well built, with an average amount of exposure to high winds.

Our experience with gas burners is not sufficient to warrant our recommending a special form as the best, and we would invite any readers of The Review who are using natural gas for greenhouse heating to give their experience with gas burners. If you will correspond with the thermostat manufacturers whose advertisement appears regularly in the Heating Department of The Review, you will probably be able to secure the kind of thermostat that will best suit your purpose.

FROM STEAM TO HOT WATER.

We are planning to change the heating system in our two greenhouses from steam to hot water. Will you kindly state the number of additional 2-inch returns and additional flows that will be needed? The houses run east and west. The north one is 26x100, fifteen feet high to the ridge and seven feet high to the eaves. The north wall is boarded. There is glass in the west end to within four feet of the ground; the east end is boarded to a height of seven feet. This house already has one 2½-inch flow and twelve 1¼-inch returns. We wish to retain the present 1¼-inch pipes. In this house we want a temperature of 60 degrees when the outside temperature is 10 degrees below zero.

The south greenhouse is 26x100 and eleven feet to the ridge. It has three feet of glass in the south wall. There are 7-foot board walls at each end, with glass above. This house now has six 2-inch returns and one 3-inch flow, and it needs a temperature of 50 degrees in below-zero weather. There is a glass partition between the two houses. G. F. F. C.—Mont.

THE HEATING PROBLEM SOLVED

Judging strictly according to mechanical merits, it's the METROPOLITAN PATENTED BOILER you want.

Because of their proven scientifically perfect construction, Metropolitan Patented Boilers will heat a given amount of water quicker, with less fuel and less attention than any other boiler on the market.

The remarkable heating efficiency and quick steaming qualities of these boilers are due to their large and effective heating surface.

Just a few points of Metropolitan Patented Boiler merit:—Smooth, perfect finished castings. Push nipple connections. Large fire box, providing ample combustion chamber, and permitting a sufficient charge of fuel to require attention only at long intervals. Deep ash pit, making the removal of ashes a slight task. Large flues, making the boiler easy to clean. Grates that are made for hard usage and long service. And above all, they are Fuel Saving, not Fuel Wasting.

We also make soft coal boilers which are smokeless, and save 50 per cent in coal.

In arranging the pipes, the returns should be distributed so that each flow will supply about the same radiation. One flow should be upon each wall plate and the other four feet below the ridge. Since the middle flow, being higher, will have a better circulation than those on the plates, we would connect eight of the present 1¼-inch returns to it, and use two 1¼-inch and four 2-inch returns for each of the flows on the wall plates, placing them either on the walls or under the side benches. PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

It was a green Christmas and the weather conditions were such that plants of all kinds could be delivered without danger or inconvenience. It also was a satisfactory Christmas as far as business was concerned; from all sides reports indicate that an unusually large volume of business was done. Notwithstanding the extra large stocks of cut flowers, as well as of pot plants and evergreens, all the stores cleaned up well. As a whole it was said to be the best Yuletide trade of several years.

Prices ruled about one-third higher than ordinarily, but this proved no bar to business. In pot plants, azaleas took the lead, although araucarias, ardisias and begonias were much in demand. The real novelty was the poinsettias, and in single blooms or in plants they sold readily. Orchids and valley brought good prices.

Various Notes.

J. Koppelman & Co. had a big sale of fancy baskets and other supplies at wholesale.

Johnston Bros. employed six extra automobiles in connection with their own delivery department.

Edward Brooke, of T. J. Johnston & Co., reported one of the best holiday trades ever experienced by his concern.

M. Macnair, in addition to regular business, sold several hundred bowls of partridge berries.

Samuel Resnick has nearly recovered from his recent operation for appendicitis.

W. H. M.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Brooks Carson, at Norwood and Manning avenues, has built an office building and store in connection with his greenhouses. He has also bought an enclosed delivery truck. Business has been good with him.

W. H. Forristel, of the Bellevue Nurseries, 1382 Bellevue avenue, says that since the cold weather business with his concern has been better than it ever was. Mr. Forristel has completed an addition to his greenhouses, 21x40 feet, for ferns.

For L. B. Coddington, of Murray Hill, four rose houses, each 65x500, are being built by Hitchings & Co., of Elizabeth. A central power house is building. The plant is separate from the old one.

Miss A. E. Lincoln, on Park street, reports that business has been fair.

The Christmas Trade.

This year's holiday business was considerably greater than that of last year. The weather during the big week was fine until Friday, when we had a bad day for delivery. It rained most of the day and a strong wind prevailed.

Plants of all kinds sold well at good prices. Poinsettias, Paper Whites, azaleas, cyclamens and begonias were the leaders. Roses and carnations were in heavy demand. Sweet peas, snapdragons, violets and cut poinsettias also sold nicely. Everything considered, it really was the best Christmas the retailers ever had. Many were short on cut flowers and had to buy heavily.

Various Notes.

J. C. Elsperrmann had the best Christmas business he ever recorded. He had extra help, but still was rushed to get everything in shape and delivered on time. He had an extra fine lot of plants and sold out completely. His azaleas and begonias were especially good. Bulbous stock, especially narcissi, was in demand. He had eighteen cases of holly and used all of it. The holly was extra good, well berried and of dark green foliage.

Julius Niednagel & Sons began working overtime December 20 and worked every night during the week preparing for the rush. They had fine cuts of roses and carnations. Their stock of plants was excellent, especially the Cincinnati begonia and the cyclamen. They had poinsettias with 6 to 8-foot stems.

The William Blackman Floral Co. had an immense stock of Christmas plants and had just about enough left in the store at the finish to indicate that they had a flower shop. Business was far ahead of the usual Christmas trade. They were short of roses of their own and had to buy heavily. This stock was long-stemmed and had extra good flowers. The carnation crop was large, but extra carnations had to be bought to fill the orders. George Blackman has a bruised arm and shoulder as the result of a fall on the basement stairway a day or two before Christmas.

Karl Zeidler reports his Christmas trade as being far ahead of that of last year. He had a fine lot of plants, especially ferns, begonias and azaleas. The azaleas were unusually good and all were sold.

Miss Nellie Goodge had a good holiday trade. She had a big lot of holly made up into wreaths. She still is unable to get about much or to do anything and she has the sympathy of the Evansville florists.

The next meeting of the Evansville Florists' Club will be held at the C. L. Niednagel place, January 12. Curt Niednagel will give a talk on roses.

The Market.

All the retailers unite in saying that Christmas business was the greatest ever. After December 23, several of the stores refused orders for cut flowers, suggesting blooming pot plants or baskets of decorative plants. Additional help was employed at all the stores.

Various Notes.

Some choice baskets of poinsettias were noted at Mrs. Goldbach's store; also dainty baby primroses and a full line of cut flowers.

H. A. Schroyer's baskets of decorative plants were of the highest type and stock in general was extra fine. Miss Carrie Steckman was in charge and she arranged some baskets of helichrysum, which were the best seen in the city.

At the store of B. F. Barr & Co. a wonderful business was done. Some exceptionally fine holly trees were noted here. Ophelia and Mrs. Chas. Russell roses were choice stock. Orchid-flowering sweet peas, calendulas and budleias were of high order.

Mrs. Lou Helen Dundore Moore, of The Rosery, had a fine showing of blooming plants, in addition to a full line of choice cut stock. The double violets were quality stock.

Walter A. Hammond, on Prince street, had a good share of the Christmas business. His show windows displayed good plant arrangements.

A good business was done at Bachelor's, near the Lancaster cemetery.

Frank A. Suter, located near the Greenwood and the Woodward Hill cemeteries, did a big business in wreaths, as well as in potted plants and cut flowers of his own production.

Never before were so many Christmas trees brought to Lancaster on Christmas eve. Many of them were given away. Trees brought from Canada at a cost of 35 cents were sold at 25 cents and less.

H. D. Rohrer had a choice lot of Primula malacoides, which were sold in 4-inch pots. Orchid-flowering sweet peas were in great demand. H. K. R.

Bird-in-Hand, Pa., March 23, 1914.

F. W. ROCHELLE & SONS,
Chester, N. J.

Gentlemen: In reply to your query would state that I planted seedling stock plants and snap-dragon cuttings in the first lot of bands that I received from you early in January.

We took some of these out and planted them where they are to remain about the 15th of February. They made GOOD GROWTH while in the bands, and transplanted AS THOUGH they had never been moved at all.

I have now about 14,000 carnation plants started in 2-in. bands which are making a RAPID GROWTH, scarcely losing a plant in transplanting from the sand.

I also have about 20,000 aster plants transplanted in 2-in. bands which can stay there till time to plant out of doors WITHOUT FEAR OF BECOMING ROOT BOUND, as would be the case if I used 2-in. pots.

Plants SELDOM BECOME ROOT BOUND enough to injure them IN THE DIRT BANDS, and DO NOT REQUIRE NEAR THE AMOUNT OF ATTENTION that a pot plant does, in watering, shifting, transplanting, etc.

I make my bands and set them in flats, as I make them up, each flat holding 117.

When we get crowded indoors it takes but a short time to move the flats to a cold frame, where we harden them off before setting them in the field.

One man can set MORE THAN ANOTHER TIME AS MANY (twice as many) plants in the field from these bands and flats than he can from pots, and after he is through DOES NOT HAVE THE BOTHER OF GATHERING UP, CLEANING, and STORING AWAY A LOT OF POTS.

I believe anyone using these bands ONCE WILL BECOME A REGULAR CUSTOMER.

Yours truly,

H. B. Weaver.

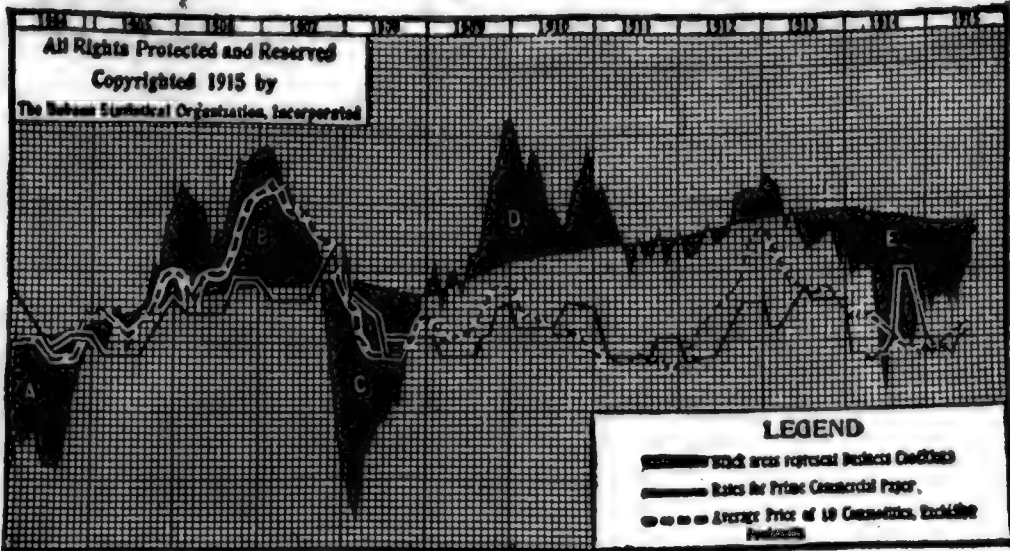

Mr. Weaver grows carnations, mignonette, sweet peas, asters, etc. He ordered 5,000 Dirt Bands the first year, 60,000 the second year, and 70,000 last year.

F. W. ROCHELLE & SONS, 31 Main St.
CHESTER, N. J.

Smith believed in better business. So early last summer he put his belief and his money into our Reconstructed Construction house 48 feet wide and 400 feet long.

It's the Same with the Greenhouse Business as it is with Other Business.

ONE of the really funny things about business is, that so many business men think their business has nothing to do with any other business.

You and I, however, know that every business, in one way or another, affects every other business.

Of course, there will always be the so-called "Lucky Devil," or the man who accidentally falls into the soft things; and thinks he did it all himself. But more and more, success in business is being reduced to an exact science.

Take the Bankers, for instance; they have the most exasperating way of shutting down on loaning a fellow money, at times when the sky seemingly never looked bluer, or business better.

Then they also look on the bright side, when business, for all you and I are getting out of it, is still very much to the bad.

Bankers know their business. Not only their business, but they have records and charts of exactly how all kinds of business have acted for years and years. That's one of them at the top.

They go by some such chart. The July before the war broke out the charts said better business was due; and nothing but war could stop it.

If war orders were cut off tomorrow, business would promptly adjust itself and go booming along.

It's due to be here, and it's here. Careful, conservative men like Mr. L. B. Codrington, of Murray Hill, believed so firmly that it was to be here, that long before it actually was here he ordered thousands of dollars of greenhouses from us. It was one of the largest single greenhouse contracts he has ever placed.

Why don't you get in on this business boom by building more houses? Forget all that hot air talk about there being "too much glass."

You know we go anywhere for business or to talk business.

The Market.

The Christmas business was the best ever experienced. All the plant growers sold out. Pot plants were in great demand, the leaders being azaleas, poinsettias and cyclamens. Ferns were not so popular as in other years. Carnations were scarce; red were not to be had. Roses sold well and were plentiful.

Various Notes.

Chester Harris had a fine Christmas business. He found azaleas to be the best sellers in plants. He showed some fine made-up baskets of azaleas, cyclamens, poinsettias and dracenas, which sold well.

The Baker Floral Co., the only wholesale house in this city, was sold out of its large stock of plants December 19. The most active call was for poinsettias in pans and for azaleas. It is now cutting French Golden Spur. Its carnations are looking well, and it is busy putting in carnation cuttings.

Charles Bourne, of Rich street, had a lot of nice chrysanthemums for Christmas. He said they sold well. Business is good. He is cutting a crop of fine carnations.
